MONTHLY BULLETIN

OF THE

Dairy and Food Division

OF THE

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT THE OFFICE OF THE STATE PRINTER OF PENNSYLVANIA,

AT

HARRISBURG, PA.

Issued by Direction of Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—DR. B. H. WARREN.
MANAGING EDITOR—OLIVER D. SCHOCK.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—PROF. C. B. COCHRAN.

MUTILATED PAGE

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operations of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general store-keepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining States who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including February 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

ESTABLISHED APRIL 1, 1903.

MONTHLY BULLETIN

OF THE

Dairy and Food Division

OF THE

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT THE OFFICE OF THE STATE PRINTER OF PENNSYLVANIA,

AT

HARRISBURG, PA.

Issued by Direction of Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—DR. B. H. WARREN.
MANAGING EDITOR—OLIVER D. SCHOCK.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—PROF. C. B. COCHRAN.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operations of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general store-keepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining States who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including March 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

MONTHLY BULLETIN

OF THE

DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION

VOL. 5, No. 3.

ISSUED MONTHLY

BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, from the office of the Dairy and Food Commissioner, Harrisburg, Pa.

DR. B. H. WARREN, Commissioner.

APRIL 15, 1907.

Published by Direction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Entered June 23, 1903, at Harrisburg, Pa., as Second-Class Matter, under Act of Congress June 6, 1900.

HARRISBURG, PA.:
HARRISBURG PUBLISHING CO., STATE PRINTER.
1907.

MONTHLY BULLETIN

OF THE

Dairy and Food Division

OF THE

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT THE OFFICE OF THE STATE PRINTER OF PENNSYLVANIA,

AT

HARRISBURG, PA.

Issued by Direction of Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—DR. B. H. WARREN.
MANAGING EDITOR—OLIVER D. SCHOCK.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—PROF. C. B. COCHRAN.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operations of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general store-keepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining States who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including April 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

MONTHLY BULLETIN

OF THE

Dairy and Food Division

OF THE

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT THE OFFICE OF THE STATE PRINTER OF PENNSYLVANIA,

AT

HARRISBURG, PA.

Issued by Direction of Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—W. H. SCHWARTZ.
MANAGING EDITOR—OLIVER D. SCHOCK.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—PROF. C. B. COCHRAN.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining States who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including May 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

POLICY OF THE PURE FOOD DIVISION.

This Division exists primarily for the protection of the health of the people of Pennsylvania. It was created under authority of law, as the instrument of law, to enforce the acts regulating the manufacture and sale of food products. Under Commissioner Warren it endeavored to accomplish the purpose of its creation. Under Commissioner Foust it will strive to be increasingly serviceable. It has some right to be proud of its work in the past; but true pride over a record accomplished always stimulates to more zeal and deeper diligence for the future. The Division could take no other view of its duty.

Food adulteration is now recognized as a serious evil. It furnishes the consumer with an article that is not only inferior to the genuine product for which he asks, but also, in many instances, at least, positively injurious to his health. Recognizing this condition of affairs the Legislature has framed into law certain regulations, requirements, restrictions and prohibitions. These were enacted for the benefit of the consumer. They proposed to encourage honesty upon the part of the manufacturer and the dealer because honesty is not only "the best policy," but likewise needful to the continued health and the long life of consumers. The Dairy and Food Commissioner is directed to enforce these several Acts of Assembly. It is made his duty to exercise constant vigilance on behalf of the public. He is commanded to ever stand on the watch tower and to protect those who are unable to protect themselves. So that if the food laws of the Commonwealth are violated, the Commissioner must institute proceedings, the results of which are frequently unpleasant and costly to the offender. There is no possibility of this Division following any other policy. Hence, the number of prosecutions during a given period will be determined by the number of violations of the Acts of Assembly disclosed by the activities of the agents of the Division. There can be no exceptions to a rule which is at the bottom of the Division's existence. It would be a great pleasure to the Dairy and Food Commissioner, as well as to his assistants, if every manufacturer, every wholesaler, every retail dealer would make a sincere effort to measure up to the requirements of law. It would be no hardship if the sense of obligation among manufacturers and dealers were to become so high that efforts to adulterate the food of the people would wholly cease. If such a condition were to be brought about; if all food products offered in the market were exactly what they purport to be, an era of general good-will and of mutual confidence would be inaugurated. It is precisely in the hope of bringing such a happy state of affairs to pass that the pure food laws are to be relentlessly and impartially enforced during the new administration. To properly protect the innocent, it is absolutely necessary to expose and punish the guilty. There is no alternative.

ENLARGING THE SCOPE OF THE BULLETIN.

The Monthly Bulletin of the Dairy and Food Division of the Agricultural Department of Pennsylvania exists as a medium of communication between the Dairy and Food Division and the public. It is an official publication, and, necessarily, contains a considerable quantity of routine matter. It is not a newspaper or a monthly magazine. It is not expected to devote attention to polite literature. Its chief province is to act as an avenue of information, concerning the specific work of the Division. It is to let its particular public know what of interest is transpiring in the realm of which it is the exponent. This it will continue to do. The official lists that have hitherto appeared from month to month and that are of special value to dealers, manufacturers and consumers are authorized by Act of Assembly, and will continue to appear as heretofore. At the same time it is the purpose of those who prepare the successive numbers of this publication to broaden its scope a bit; to treat in the opening pages of matters of current interest, and to aid in the work of creating public sentiment in favor of a vigorous enforcement of the pure food laws as well as on behalf of a higher standard upon the part of all manufacturers. In this way it is hoped to make the publication increasingly valuable both to the State and the public. An effort will be made to teach the manufacturer that it is better in every way to conform rigidly to the law than to attempt to increase profits by avoiding its provisions. The fact will be emphasized that the manufacturer who takes an honest pride in the value of his name on an article, and who stands ready to guarantee everything he puts on the market always reaps the reward of absolute honesty and integrity. He may not do so at the start; he may, indeed, see some unscrupulous rival apparently accumulating the patronage of the public for the reason that his prices are lower, and he may be strongly tempted to follow the evil example of greed and duplicity. But you cannot fool all the people all the time; you can't fool any considerable proportion of them for very long. This Monthly Bulletin will teach the old, old doctrine that "a man's sins will find him out," even as a manufacturer of inferior or adulterated food products, and that it is good policy, simply from a selfish standpoint, to avoid duplicity and fraud of any sort in the transaction of business and to give customers the very best article that can be produced for the money. It will also teach that the records of the business world show most indubitably and clearly that the schemer or the dishonest manufacturer nearly always comes to grief, and that the future belongs to the business man who acts uprightly and honestly, giving his customers the benefit of a "square deal" every day in the year. Nothing new about such doctrine, but it will bear pretty frequent repetition. "Line upon line, precept upon precept;" that is one of our mottoes. Perhaps with an increasing number, persuasion will be more powerful than prosecution.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER COMMISSIONER WARREN.

The Monthly Bulletin of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture is no longer published under the management of Dr. B. H. Warren, the doctor having declined to serve as Dairy and Food Commissioner for another term. It is proper that this Bulletin, which serves as a medium of communication between the Pure Food Division and the public at large, should pay a proper tribute to the rare executive ability and the extraordinary efficiency of its former chief. During his term while at the head of the Division, Doctor Warren brought it to a state of great efficiency, and by the vigor and the firmness of his administration, as well as by his absolute fearlessness and impartiality, attracted the notice of other states as well as of the National Government. By the thoroughness of his oversight Doctor Warren demonstrated that it is quite possible to protect the interests of the people, guarding their health against adulterants and poisonous compounds, and, at the same time, treating the dealers with perfect fairness. The influence of the Pure Food Division of the Agricultural Department of Pennsylvania reached National proportions under his administration, and there is no reason to believe that the enforcement of the State laws and the intelligent and prudent action of Doctor Warren had much to do with the final enactment of the new National pure food and drug act now on the Federal statute books. Thus while serving the people of this Commonwealth in the vital matter of securing pure food, he was likewise serving the entire nation.

The work of education carried on by the Dairy and Food Division during the last four years has been widely beneficial. Its influence will be immediately active for the improvement of the quality of food products, and, consequently, for the protection of the health of the innocent consumer. As the motive power behind the work of the various subordinate agents of the Division, Doctor Warren was ever watchful that injustice be done to none, and no less careful that the rights of consumers should be guarded and the provisions of the various Acts of Assembly relating to this important work continually enforced. From the beginning of his administration until its close, he devoted himself with courage and intelligence to the discharge of his duties. The esteem in which he is held by the people of Pennsylvania and the confidence they reposed in his administration constitute the best possible tribute to the value of his services during the four years he occupied the office of Dairy and Food Commissioner. It is not empty and meaningless praise that The Monthly Bulletin would bestow upon the ex-Commissioner, but an honest word of appreciation, and of keen regret that the State is no longer to receive the benefit of his industry, discretion, prudence and wisdom as the head of one of the most important divisions of the Department of Agriculture. The verdict of his fellow citizens is: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

CHEAP AND INFERIOR.

Economy is a virtue which all should practice. The spendthrift or the prodigal will come to grief. Extravagence is the foe of domestic prosperity. All this is true. Still, there is such a thing as being too economical in purchasing food products, and thus putting temptation in the way of the unscrupulous manufacturer, the wholesaler or the retailer. The consumer of the past was, to a very considerable extent, responsible for the extensive adulteration of food products, which led to the creation of Pure Food Departments and the enactment of State and National laws against adulteration of the preparations the people use for food. When a grocer exposed a brand of goods which he could guarantee, and later on discovered that he was making few sales because his rival across the way was selling an article by the same name for less than he paid for his goods, he was inevitably tempted to follow the evil example. If he could not hold his trade for a good article at a fair price, he would either have to go out of business or lower his standard. Unless quite fit for another and a better world, he proceeded to reduce the quality of his goods in order that he might successfully compete with other dealers.

In times when prices are high and income not too liberal, the head of the family is inevitably tempted to make his purchases in the cheapest market. Nor is it uncommon for those who could afford to indulge themselves to search for "bargains." This tendency in human nature works mischievious results; for the disposition of the average consumer to search for the "bargain house" is too frequently taken advantage of by the unscrupulous manufacturer of inferior or adulterated products. The result is bad in every way. It ought to be recognized by this time that cheapness is by no means a sign of excellence. It is frequently the reverse. In looking for the cheapest place the consumer often succeeds in making his purchases in the dearest market, for he gets an article that is practically worthless, and if it chances to be poisonous besides, his own life is likely to be shortened and the health of his family injured. Thus the extra cost of medicine, doctors' bills, loss of time, all the other attendants of a spell of sickness, added to the original price of the "bargain" that led to all these things, footed up largely in excess of what would have been the ultimate cost of a really good and pure article, an article that was exactly what it purported to be. If the head of the family were to patronize the best houses, paying a fair price for really meritorious products and insisting first of all, upon quality, he would give wonderful impetus to the movement against adulterated goods, and would thus confer a substantial benefit not only upon his own family, but also upon the families of his neighbors. Nor would he fail to receive the cordial thanks of the retail grocer who would greatly rejoice if the craze for cheapness were to come to an end, through the triumph of enlightened public opinoin.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Mutual confidence between the manufacturer and the retail dealer, and between the latter and his customers, would produce the happiest results. A good article naturally commands a fair price, and if the consumer were frankly taken into the confidence of the dealer and shown how strong the presumption that the cheapest goods are the poorest, the rage for cheapness might be cured or much abated.

Shailer Matthews, editor of "The World to-Day," a reputable monthly published in Chicago, has made an extended personal investigation of the present state of affairs in Packingtown. He was accompanied by two scientific experts who corroborate his conclusions, which are to the effect that the meat products turned out now are prepared under proper sanitary conditions, and that the rooms in which the work is done, as well as the persons who perform it, are perfectly clean. His article, which appears in the May number of "The World To-Day" is copiously illustrated with photographs.

In the course of his article on the present situation in Packingtown, Shailer Matthews editor of "The World To-Day," expresses the conviction that some effort ought to be made to unify the pure food laws of the several states and to accommodate their provisions to the requirements of the federal act. He believes many of the states are still decidedly in the background in this matter of caring for the public health. It is likewise his conviction that packers who are not engaged in an interstate business, and whose products are therefore not inspected, should be subjected to a rigid inspection system by the state in which they do business. Pennsylvania has already taken the initial movement in this matter.

Divers opinions exist concerning the quantity of food one should take in the course of a day, some holding that so long as "good digestion waits on appetite" it is fitting to eat liberal quantities of what one relishes, while others insist that health is preserved and life prolonged by limiting the amount of food taken to the actual needs of the body. However that may be, it should be generally conceded that the purer the food one eats, the better his chances for perfect health, which truly is the justification of the State's interest in the quality of food products sold its citizens.

The State of Pennsylvania seeks the protection of the health of its inhabitants as well as the advancement of some of the most valuable and important of its own industries by the enforcement of the dairy and food laws. It should be the aim of every patriotic citizen to obey the law himself and speak on its behalf to his neighbors.

Those citizens of this commonwealth who are engaged in the manufacture and sale of pure butter deserve the encouragement and the plaudits of their fellow citizens, as well as the protection of law. What is more delicious than pure butter? What delightful memories of the old farm of one's boyhood days does its fragrance bring to the brain of the busy man! What a preserver of the health it is! He who makes and sells pure butter does a good work.

In the use of poisonous compounds the manufacturer of food products takes a great risk. The State of Pennsylvania wisely forbids anything of the sort. There is great unwisdom in any regulation which permits the careless or inexperienced hand of an irresponsible and unknown employe to adulterate any article intended for human food. To permit it in any form would be to open the door to dangerous possibilities.

The Dairy and Food Division is animated by the most benevolent sentiments. It seeks the protection of the consumer because that is the purpose of its creation. But it seeks that end in a spirit of good will toward all who have to do with the preparation or the sale of the people's food. How happy all its attaches would be if a rigid obedience to the law everywhere rendered prosecutions unnecessary!

Since it is necessary for human beings to eat that they may live, the quality of their food and drink becomes a question of supreme importance. The infants of the State are especially entitled to wholesome milk, milk that has not been adulterated or tampered with in any way; milk from healthy cows. Precaution in this particular greatly reduces infant mortality.

The Chief of the Dairy and Food Division has been very busy since he entered upon the discharge of his duties. His main ambition is to serve the whole people with fidelity and discretion. He is their servant, and it will please him to receive suggestions from them at any time.

With the coming of warmer weather, mothers and others who have to do with the rearing of small children are required to exercise extreme care concerning the food of the little ones. The heavy infant mortality of former years was not entirely avoidable, but much of it was the result of improper feeding or of impure food.

Ex-Dairy and Food Commissioner Warren, in an address before the conference of pure butter makers in Philadelphia on May 4, uttered a warning note. He suggested that for the present the State cannnot depend upon the national government for a great deal of assistance in the way of protecting the consumer from food adulteration.

PUBLISHED FOR GRATUITOUS DISTRIBUTION—EDITION LIMITED TO 25,000 COPIES.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and joining States who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including June 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

THE NEW FOOD LAW.

The new food law is entitled "An act for the protection of public health by prohibiting the manufacture, sale, offering for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell within the State adulterated, mis-branded, poisonous or deleterious foods and confections, regulating the enforcement of the provisions thereof, providng for the protection of persons buying and selling adulterated or mis-branded foods and confections under a guaranty and providing penalties for the violation thereof."

This Act becomes a law mainly at the request of the Retail Grocers of Pennsylvania and contains certain provisions which are intended to protect them from arbitrary arrest and conviction. Manufacturers and retailers have complained that the Act of 1895 was entirely too drastic in its provisions, subjecting the innocent retailer to constant peril and frequent heavy fines for the sale of adulterated goods purchased in good faith by him from the jobber or wholesaler and supposed by him to be free from adulterants.

The new law requires the Dairy and Food Commissioner to give notice to all dealers from whom samples are taken or their guarantors before prosecution is brought. The act closely follows the Federal law in defining the adulteration of food or food products. There is one exception, clause 5 covering the use of preservatives. The provision of the Act of 1895 which prevents the use of any ingredient regardless of quantity, which in any amount is harmful is retained. Nevertheless, there is a provision which declares that no prosecution shall be begun so long as the article suspected conforms to the Federal law and the rules and regulations made thereunder.

The definition of the Federal Food Law relating to meat branding is closely followed in the Pennsylvania Law. The law also requires the agent who takes samples of food to take two samples, one of which is sent to the Dairy and Food Commissioner; one is to be analyzed as formerly, and the other to be sealed and retained in the office of the Commissioner. Any defendant may claim the second sample and obtain it through the Magistrate before whom suit is brought. In such a case, it is to be submitted to a second chemist, whose analysis will either confirm or contradict the first analysis. It is provided also that the defendant may be represented by a private chemist.

The law practically provides also that the food division is required to accept either a State or Federal guarantee and to release any retailer, who can show such guarantee. The retailer, in the event that the package has been opened must file an affidavit that the goods are the identical goods purchased from the wholesaler or jobber. The Dairy and Food Commissioner is then required to notify the Agricultural Department of the Federal Government of the condition of the goods and the name of the manufacturer or jobber selling the same.

The penalty for selling adulterated food or food products is increased from fifty to sixty dollars. Whereas, under the old law the proceedings were in a criminal court, the new Act provides that the penalty shall be collected by civil suit. This abolishes the jail penalty, which existed under the former Act.

The existing Acts regarding milk, cream, butter, oleomargerine, butterine, fresh meats, poultry, game, cider, cider vinegar and fruit syrups are not affected by the new Act and remain in full force.

This Act protects the retail dealers from vexatious persecution or prosecution. It was enacted in deference to a pronounced sentiment among the people in favor of justice to the retailers. It may perhaps be well to add that many of the most ardent advocates of the measure declared before the passage of the bill that if adulteration of food or food products continued they would be among the first to advocate the passage of an Act more drastic in its provisions than the Act of 1895 which the Act of 1907 supercedes. It now remains with the manufacturers and retailers to determine whether the confidence of the people has been well placed. If the law is scrupulously observed there will be no prosecutions. The Dairy and Food Division exists simply for the protection of the public health. The Commissioner and the Assistant Commissioner would be glad if during the coming year the wholesalers, jobbers and retailers of Pennsylvania would assist the department in maintaining the law, preserving the public health and promoting the general welfare.

The New Pure Food Law.

AN ACT

For the protection of public health, by prohibiting the manufacture, sale, offering for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, within the State, adulterated, mis-branded, poisonous or deleterious foods and confections; regulating the enforcement of the provisions hereof; providing for the protection of persons buying and selling adulterated or mis-branded foods and confections under a guaranty; and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That it shall be unlawful for any person, within this State, to manufacture, sell, offer for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, any article of food which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

Section 2. That the Dairy and Food Commissioner of the State shall be charged with the enforcement of the provisions of this act, and for the purposes of its enforcement shall be empowered to employ such assistants, agents, chemists, attorneys, clerks, and experts as he may deem necessary. The examinations of the articles purchased or procured shall be made by the chemists appointed by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner, for the purpose of determining from such examinations, whether such articles are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act; and if it shall appear, from any such examination, that any of such samples is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall cause notice thereof to be given to the person from whom such sample was obtained, and in case such person shall produce a guarantee in writing, then notice shall be given to the guarantor. If it appear that any of the provisions of this act have been violated by such person, then the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall begin an action against the said person for the enforcement of the penalty or penalties prescribed by this act.

Section 3. The Dairy and Food Commissioner shall make uniform rules and regulations, under and subject to which the provisions of this act shall be enforced, and such rules and regulations shall, where practicable, conform to and be the same as the rules and regulations adopted, from time to time, for the enforcement of the act of Congress, approved June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, and known as "The Food and Drugs Act." Such rules and regulations to be published from time to time in bulletins to be issued by the Department.

Section 4. The term "food," as used herein, shall include all articles used for food, confectionery, or condiment by man, whether simple, mixed, or compound, and all substances or ingredients intended for use in food, confectionery, or condiments, as above defined, except as hereinafter excepted.

The term "person," as used in this act, shall include individuals, firms, co-partnerships, unincorporated associations, and bodies corporate, as well as all officers, agents, employes, or others acting for any of the same, and shall be taken as applying in the singular or plural, as the case may require.

Section 5. That for the purpose of this act, an article shall be deemed to be adulterated—

In the Case of Food:

First. If any substance has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower, or injuriously affect, its quality or strength.

Second. If any substance has been substituted, wholly or in part, for the article.

Third. If any valuable constituent of the article has been wholly or in part abstracted.

Fourth. If it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated, or stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

Fifth. If it contains any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health: Provided, however, That no action shall be brought or sustained for violation of the provisions of this section when the article alleged to be adulterated is not adulterated within the meaning of the provisions of the "Food and Drugs Act" of June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, and the rules and regulations promulgated, from time to time, for the enforcement of the same: And provided, further, That when, in the preparation of food products for shipment, they are preserved by any external application, applied in such manner that the preservative is necessarily removed mechanically, or by maceration in water, or otherwise, and directions for the removal of said preservative shall be printed on the covering of the package, the provisions of this act shall be construed as applying only when said products are ready for consumption.

Sixth. If it consists in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid animal, fish, or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal or fish, unfit for food, whether manufactured or not; or if it be the product of a diseased animal or fish, or an animal that has died otherwise than by slaughter.

In the Case of Confectionery:

First. If it contain terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substance, or poisonous color or flavor, or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health, or any vinous, malt, or spirituous liquor, or compound or narcotic drug: Provided, That this paragraph shall not be construed to prohibit the use of harmless colors, of any kind, when used for coloring and not for fraudulent purposes.

Section 6. That the term "misbranded," as used herein, shall apply to all articles of food, or articles which enter into the composition of food, the package or label of which shall bear any statements, design, or device regarding such article, or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which shall be false or misleading in any particular, and to any food product which is falsely branded as to the State, Territory, or country in which it is manufactured or produced.

That for the purpose of this act an article shall also be deemed to be misbranded—

In the Case of Food:

First. If it be an imitation of, or offered for sale under the distinctive name of, another article.

Second. If it is labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or purport to be a foreign product when not so, or if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed, in whole or in part, and other contents shall have been placed in such package.

Third. If in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package.

Fourth. If the package containing it, or its label, shall bear any statement, design, or device, regarding the ingredients or the substances contained therein, which statement, design, or device shall be false or misleading in any particular. Provided, That an article of food which does not contain any added poisonous or deleterious ingredients shall not be deemed to be adulterated or misbranded in the following cases:—

First. In the case of mixtures or compounds which may be now, or from time to time hereafter, known as articles of food, under their own distinctive names, and not an imitation of, or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article, if the same be accompanied on the same label or brand with a statement of the place where said article has been manufactured or produced.

Second. In the case of articles labeled, branded, or tagged so as to plainly indicate that they are compounds, imitations, or blends, and the word "compound," "imitation," or "blend," as the case may be, is plainly stated on the package in which it is offered for sale: Provided, That the term "blend," as used herein, shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients used for the purpose of coloring and flavoring only: And provided, further, That nothing in this act shall be construed as requiring or compelling proprietors or manufacturers of proprietary goods, which contain no unwholesome added ingredients, to disclose their trade formulae, except in so far as the provisions of this act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or misbranding.

Section 7. Whenever the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agents shall obtain an article for the purpose of determining whether or not the same is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, two like samples shall be obtained where the article is in the original package, or, if not in the original package, then two portions shall be obtained and each of the portions sealed. One of the said samples shall be delivered to the Dairy and Food Commissioner and by him preserved in the condition in which it was obtained, and under the seal placed thereon by the agent procuring the same, and shall remain in the custody and possession of the Dairy and Food Commissioner until such time as it shall be determined whether or not any action shall be brought against the person from whom the article was obtained, for violation of the provisions of this act. If an action shall be brought against the party from whom the article was obtained, for violation of the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for the person from whom the said sample was obtained to make application to the magistrate or court, in which the said action is pending, for an order requiring the delivery of the portion of said sample in the custody of the Dairy and Food Commissioner to a chemist, to be designated by said magistrate or court, for the purpose of analysis; and at the time the analysis is being made by the chemist, so appointed, the person from whom the sample was obtained shall have the privilege of having present a second chemist: Provided, however, that this section relating to the purchase of duplicate samples for analysis shall not apply to perishable articles, such as milk, cream, or ice cream; said samples shall be delivered to the chemist in the same condition as when obtained.

All expenses incurred in the analysis of samples made by the chemist, so designated or appointed, shall be assessed by the magistrate or court, and paid by the party requesting the same, as part of the costs of said action.

No action shall be instituted against any person for violation of the provisions of this act, unless the same shall have been commenced within four months from the date of the taking of the sample, nor until all the provisions of this act shall have been complied with.

Section 8. No prosecutions shall be sustained under the provisions of this act, for the selling or offering for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, any article or goods, as defined herein, when the same is found to be adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, when the accused can establish a guaranty, signed by the person residing in the United States from whom such article was purchased, to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, designating it, or within the meaning of the food and drugs act, June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United State of America, in Congress assembled: Provided, however, That if the article in question is in a broken or open package, said guaranty shall not afford immunity from prosecution, unless such person shall furnish satisfactory proof that the article has not been changed in quality. The affidavit of such person shall be accepted as such proof, and the person making such affidavit falsely shall be guilty of perjury, and published accordingly: And provided, moreover, That every person giving a guaranty under the provisions of this act shall be held responsible for the adulteration or misbranding of any article or goods sold under said guaranty, and shall be subject to the penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act.

Said guaranty to afford protection shall contain the name and address of the person making the sale of such articles to such dealer, and, in such case, the said person shall be amenable to the prosecution, fines, and other penalties which would attach, in due course, to the dealer, under the provisions of this act, when said articles are found to be adulterated or misbranded: Provided, That no such guaranty shall operate as a defense to prosecution for the violation of this act, if the dealer shall continue to sell after written notice by the Dairy and Food Commissioner that such article is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

Any person who shall have been adjudged to have violated any of the provisions of this act, by reason of the purchase or sale of an article adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, and who shall have purchase the article, so found to be adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, under a guaranty from the vendor thereof, to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, or the act of Congress passed June thirty, nineteen hundred and six, shall have a right of action against the guarantor for the recovery of such damages as shall have been sustained by reason of such adulteration or misbranding; and such person shall, in addition thereto, be entitled to recover punitive damages; and such person shall further have the right to set off any sum or sums of money which shall have been incurred and paid in the defense of any action, which shall have been instituted against said person for the violation of any of the provisions of this act, against any claim or right of action which the guarantor may have, arising out of the sale of the article or articles in question, or otherwise, and which shall include all expenses and reasonable attorneys fees.

When the examination or analysis, herein provided for, shows that any of the provisions of this act have been violated, and the person relieved from prosecution under this section, by the production of a guaranty signed by such person residing outside of this State, then the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall report such fact to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, or the proper officers appointed for the enforcement of the act of Congress, approved June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, known as "The Food and Drugs Act."

Section 9. Any person who shall violate any of the foregoing provisions of this act shall, for each offense, forfeit and pay the sum of sixty dollars, together with the costs of suit; to be recovered as debts are by law recovered, in an action to be instituted, in the name of the Commonwealth, before any alderman, magistrate, or justice of the peace, in the county wherein the offense shall have been committed; and no appeal shall be allowed from any judgment rendered in such case, except upon special allowance of the Court of Common Pleas; subject to all the rules and regulations applicable to appeals from actions in summary convictions.

Section 10. All fines and penalties imposed and recovered for violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agent, and, when so collected and paid, shall thereafter be paid into the State Treasury, on or before the tenth day of the next succeeding month in which the same shall have been collected and paid.

Section 11. The following act of Assembly, namely, an act entitled "An act to provide against the adulteration of food, and providing for the enforcement thereof," approved the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five (Pamphlet Laws three hundred and seventeen); all other acts and parts of acts pertaining to the said matter, covered by this act, be and the same are hereby repealed: Provided, nevertheless, That this act shall not apply to, nor in any way affect, any acts of Assembly heretofore passed regulating the manufacture, sale, and dealing in milk, cream, butter, oleomargarine, butterine, and all other substitutes for butter, oleaginous or dairy products; also acts relating to fresh meats, poultry, game, fish, cider, vinegar and fruit syrups, all of which acts shall remain in full force, and be enforced by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, as fully in all respects as if this act had not been passed: And provided further, That the repeal of the acts hereinbefore specifically repealed shall not prevent the prosecution to final judgment and execution of any action now pending for violation thereof, not to the commencement and prosecution to final judgment and execution of any action for any violation of any of said acts heretofore committed.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps; Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of all the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit, unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure fruit jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all of the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

THE NATIONAL PURE FOOD LAW ANALYZED.

Arthur P. Greeley of Washington, D. C., a well known lawyer, who makes a specialty of trade marks and patent law and who was formerly Commissioner of Patents, has issued a book of nearly two hundred pages containing a collation of opinions, decisions and rulings as well as the expert judgment of its author concerning the National Pure Food Law. Mr. Greeley's competency for the part he has taken upon himself, will not likely be questioned, for in addition to his abundant knowledge of the subject derived from experience he possesses a frankness in recognizing the difficulties of the law and in predicting the necessity of the courts passing upon some of its features which guarantees his impartiality. He says in his preface: "It is not surprising that the Food and Drugs Act is in some respects difficult to understand. Some of the questions as to its meaning have been answered by expressions of opinion from the Department of Agriculture; other questions have not been answered and cannot be answered definitely until the meaning of the act has been determined by the action of the courts."

Many difficulties are to be encountered in the enforcement of this act. Chief among them is our dual form of government which makes the boundaries of the states bulwarks against the exercise of federal power. Mr. Greeley says that the act being limited to the District of Columbia and the territories, its initial section directed against adulteration or misbranding, does not apply to the manufacture of any article of food or any drugs in the states, whether it is adulterated, misbranded or not. Congress has no power under the Constitution to regulate the manufacturing carried on within a state, and in so far as the manufacture of any article, such for instance, as distilled and fermented liquors, oleomargerine, renovated butter and filled cheese, is regulated by Congress, such regulation is incidental to the raising of revenues or to the exercise of some other powers of Congress. He adds. that the provisions of the act do not apply to foods or drugs whether in original packages or not which are manufactured within the state or delivered and sold to any other person within the State. While the general purpose and scope of the act is clear, there seems to be a great deal of doubt as to the manner of its application.

Section 10 is intended to provide for the seizure of any article of food, drug or liquor which is adulterated or misbranded which is in process of transportation from one state, territory, district or insular possession to another. Mr. Greeley says that while the intent of this section is clear, it is not clear how the procedure may be effected. The seizure could only be made after the result of an analysis or examination of a sample or specimen by the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture or under its direction and supervision, on which analysis the article of food, drug or liquor has been held to be adulterated or misbranded. There is nothing in the act which would warrant the bringing of process of libel for condemnation of any such article.

Mr. Greeley has a doubtful opinion of the value of the law. He says: "It is probable that so far as concerns production and consumption within the states the act will not be effective to suppress the adulteration or misbranding of food and drug products until supplemented by state legislation. Many of the states have already adopted laws equally as stringent, as to what should be deemed adulteration or misbranding. Nearly all of the states which have not already adopted such laws are likely to do so in the near future. There is a strong movement in favor of the general adoption by the states of uniform food and drug laws on the lines of this act and it is probable that this movement will be successful."

The author makes very careful annotations of the several sections of the act and gives a variety of the "expressions of opinion" of the Department of Agriculture. There are also many documents included within the volume bearing on the regulations and rulings of the department as well as the code of regulations themselves, but the doubt that seems to hang over this act attaches even to these regulations. Thus there is one regulation which provides that the Secretary of Agriculture may make inspections as often as he may deem necessary to determine whether any "filthy, decomposed or putrid substance is used in the manufacture of food or drug products." Another regulation requires that factories in which proprietary foods are made shall be opened at all reasonable times for the inspection of the department and yet the act itself does not make any provision for such inspections, though authority for them is found in the Meat Inspection Act of last year and in some previous legislation. Mr. Greeley commenting on this curious circumstance says:

"From the fact that inspection is expressly authorized in acts referred to while in the present act there is no provision for inspection, it would be seen clear that no such inspection as provided for in regulations sixteen and eight was intended to be authorized."

Examination of Mr. Greeley's volume leads to the inevitable conclusion that the present federal law contains many inperfections and some ambiguities and that its full purpose cannot be accomplished until it is amended in the light of the experience gained by its operation.

DIVIDING RESPONSIBILITY.

At the beginning of the present Dairy and Food Commissioner's term of service it was thought best to adopt some rules and regulations tending to better the service and, if possible, to render it even more efficient than it has been. One of these rules makes each agent of the Division responsible for the work in his district. It is hoped to simplify matters by a clean cut division of responsibility.

For instance the chemists of the division are responsible for the analysis of food products submitted to them for examination; that is their particular line of work. The attorneys of the division are charged with the preparation of the legal side of all cases and are responsible for the hearings before the alderman or justice of the peace, or for the trial in court. The agents are responsible for the collection of all fines and costs accruing to the Commonwealth and for their prompt transmission to headquarters. No individual check will be recognized; the agents are charged with this work exclusively.

By the adoption of this system it is hoped to relieve the attorneys of the division from much routine work and from the labor and annoyance of acting as collection agents. They will be able to devote all their energies to the preparation and trial of the cases committed to their charge. The agents will be the immediate representatives of the commissioner in the prosecution of violators of law. And since they will be held directly responsible it is best that they should attend to the collections and make prompt returns to the commissioner. It is important that everybody having business with the division, everybody in its service, should remember and observe this rule.

Thus, to repeat by way of emphasis, it will be the exclusive business of the chemists of the department to analyze and report upon the character of food products sent them by agents of the division. It will be the duty of the agents to act as the eyes of the Dairy and Food Commissioner in their respective districts, to collect specimens and forward them to the chemists and to make information against violators of the law, at the same time collecting and forwarding the fines and costs due the State. And the attorneys of the division will prepare and try the cases against dealers accused of violating the pure food laws. Each will have his specific duty defined and each will be expected to perform that duty without encroaching on the province of others.

This system has been adopted upon the theory that a thorough organization and a plain and simple definition of the specific duties of all connected with the important work of protecting the health of the people by the rigid enforcement of the acts of Assembly will promote the purposes for which the division exists.

ATTENTION TO CLEANLINESS.

Some householders have a perfect mania for cleanliness; others are moderately inclined in that direction; others still are disposed to shut their eyes and take their traditional "peck of dirt" without so much as blinking. The wise grocer need bother himself little about retaining the patronage of the last named once it is secured; but the custom of the others is not easy to win and it is hard to retain.

The vendor who advertises himself as grocer to particular people has the right idea. All householders wish to train in the particular class, no matter what the actual facts, and he who proclaims his adherence to the law of cleanliness is pretty sure to attract attention and win custom. If he wishes to keep it and enlarge it he must consistently and carefully live up to his profession every day he is in business.

It is the habit of the grocer to display his wares in front of his place of business. The passer-by will notice a great difference in the method of dealers. Nor will he find it difficult to arrive at correct conclusions concerning the class of customers each grocer has or the general character and disposition at the head of each establishment. A grocer's actions speak louder than words, and they speak through his display.

The careful dealer makes careful provision against the nuisances inseparable from the summer months. So far as he is able he keeps down the dust on his sidewalk and the adjoining street. He procures suitable protection for the goods displayed in front of his building and in the store-room to the end that dust may be shut out and that the pestilential and inquisitive fly may not work its evil will upon his wares. He is looking out for the welfare of patrons in a practical way.

Such a dealer wins constantly increasing patronage. The particular people who are disgusted with the slovenly habits of the grocer from whom they have been purchasing and who are looking for someone who will suit them better are attracted by the trim appearance of his place, like the cleanly habits indicated and give him a trial order. This is usually the beginning of a trade worth having. And while this is won none of the less particular class is lost.

Some grocers seem to be utterly incapable of understanding that carelessness and slovenliness mean a steady loss of patrons. They go on from bad to worse. Their business runs down at the heel and they are at a loss to explain the situation. One such, when approached by a regular customer who was disgusted with the dust-covered condition of some vegetables he thought of purchasing and who suggested to the grocer that daylight street sweeping was a nuisance, was a bit surprised and perhaps disgusted when the grocer looked at him for a moment and inquired, "Why?" But that dealer was the exception to the rule. The average grocer is thoroughly up to date.

GUARDING THE MILK SUPPLY.

A recent somewhat startling incident which happened in the city of Altoona is worth emphasizing at this season. Two small children in a certain family partook freely of milk and soon were taken violently ill with every symptom of poisoning. A physician was summoned and their lives were saved.

It was naturally supposed that the children had been poisoned by the milk they drank and the samples preserved by the attending physician were placed in the hands of an agent of the pure food division and duly analyzed. The examination of the chemist established the fact that no drug or other injurious substance had been used.

Afterwards the parents remembered that the milk had been left standing in an open vessel in a room which had been freshly painted. The conclusion arrived at was that the milk had absorbed enough of the paint to make it dangerous to children. The physician corroborated this view. So the mystery was explained without any discredit to the milkman.

It ought to be generally known that milk readily assimilates various odors and substances. That is the reason the utmost cleanliness and the most perfect sanitary surroundings are wisely insisted upon by those charged with the preservation of the lives of little children. Milk is the sole food of many thousands of children. They are entitled to the best that can be procured and the purest.

The ease with which milk becomes tainted is complete justification for the extreme care which certain conscientious dairymen exercise and which some states and municipalities require. Some persons who have not inquired into the matter are disposed to smile at the finical disposition which insists that cows shall be bathed before milking time; that the milking shall be done in a perfectly clean room; that the milkmen shall be clad in long white garments, specially donned for the occasion, and that their hands shall be antiseptically cleaned before the task of milking is begun. But none of these precautions is unwise.

Householders likewise have a duty in connection with the preservation of the purity of milk. It is not enough that the dairymen and the milk vender shall take extraordinary precautions; the housekeeper should have a cool, comfortable place in which to bestow the daily milk supply for the family and special care should be taken to preserve it from the influence of anything calculated to affect its purity or even to give it a disagreeable odor or an offensive taste. When precautions of the proper sort are practiced, beginning at the source of supply and ending with the bottle from which the baby takes its dinner there will be a noticeable decrease in infant mortality during the summer months for the state will have reached almost ideal conditions in connection with the milk supply.

THE USE OF SULPHITES IN MEATS.

By VICTOR C. VAUGHAN, M. D., Of the Medical Department of the University of Michigan.

Within a few years past various preparations containing as their essential ingredients sulphite of sodium, have been sold to the butchers for the purpose of being used in chopped meats, such as sausage and so-called Hamburger steaks. The sulphite is added to the meat for two purposes. In the first place it prevents the growth of bacteria, and delays putrefactive changes without the necessity of refrigeration. In the second place it gives to old and partially decomposed meats a fresh, red appearance, and enables the seller to deceive the buyer and consumer. Certainly it must be granted that the use of this preservative is fraudulent inasmuch as it is employed for the purpose of deceiving the buyer. It gives to the article of food a better appearance than it naturally possesses. It enables the seller to dispose of an article which in its natural state he probably could not induce anyone to purchase. The buyer, deceived by the color, buys an inferior article thinking that he is getting one of good quality. Morally the crime of using this food preservative is the same as is practiced by the counterfeiter who alters a dollar bill so as to pass it off for a ten dollar note. This State will not permit the last mentioned crime and certainly it should not permit the other.

Meat that is partially decomposed is never a good food, and it may be a highly potent poison; therefore apart from any injury that may arise to the health from the sulphite itself, persons eating food containing this preservative may be seriously injured, and possibly killed by the eating of the decomposed meat, the true nature of which is hidden by the sulphite. Certainly no vendor of meat desires to take the risk of doing his customer great bodily harm. The poisons elaborated in the decomposition of meat are among the most deadly known, and many a case of cholera morbus is due to the eating of infected and partially decomposed food. The meat vendor who takes the risk of disturbing the health and possibly of destroying the life of one of his customers, deserves to be treated as any other criminal should be. But the vendors of meat are told by those who prepare and sell these preservatives that they are perfectly harmless. Experiments have been made on animals with the sulphite and we may see what some of the results of these investigations have been.

The following statement is taken from a standard and perfectly reliable work on poisons by Kobert: The acid sulphite of lime depends for its poisonous properties on its acid. The acid sulphites of potassium and sodium, sometimes used as a preservative, cause, when taken internally, even in doses of 15 grains, vomiting, pain in the bowels, loss of appetite and diarrhoea. The neutral sulphite of sodium causes progressive paralysis of the central nervous system, and of the muscle of the heart. Post mortem examination, after death from its internal use, shows inflammation and hemorrhage in the mucous membrane of the stomach. In dogs and cats it induces nausea, salivation, vomiting, diarrhoea and difficult breathing.

Rost and Frantz (Researches from the Imperial Board of Health of Germany, 1904), found that 10 grams (154 grains) of sulphite of sodium dissolved in water in strengths varying from 10 per cent. to 33 per cent., and introduced into the stomachs of rabbits, cause death in about 40 minutes. The animals generally remain apparently unaffected for from 30 to 35 minutes, when the symptoms rapidly develop and death follows in from four to seven minutes later. This is acute poisoning, however, and it is not likely that any one would add enough sulphite to meat to cause death in this way. We are more interested in the effects of smaller doses continued over a long period. The above mentioned investigation given to rabbits daily for from 13 to 110 days, three grams (46 grains) of sodium sulphite. These lost from 14 to 25 per cent. of their weight, and some of them died between the 20th and 25th day.

Still smaller quantities than those mentioned above have their injurious effects, which sooner or later will accumulate to the detriment of the health of the consumer.

Some of the less marked but none the less disastrous effects, are (1) Neutralization of the acid of gastric juice, (2) Irritation and inflammation of the mucous membrane of the stomach by the liberated sulphurous acid gas leading to gastric catarrh, (3) Destruction of red corpuscles leading to weakness and anemia, (4) General effect upon the nervous system leading to weakness, (5) General effect upon the excretory organs, especially the kidneys.

If meat be good and fresh there can be no object in treating it with sulphite. When sulphite is used in food for any length of time some ill effect is quite certain to manifest itself.

The conclusion is that the State is only doing its duty in protecting the health and life of its citizens when it enacts and enforces laws prohibiting the use of sulphite and other injurious food preservatives.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and joining states who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including July 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The heart co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

PURE FOOD REGULATIONS.

(Editorial from "Altoona Tribune," June 20, 1907.)

Elsewhere in this number will be found a copy of the rules and regulations adopted for the government of the Dairy and Food Division by Commissioner Foust and approved by Secretary Critchfield, of the Agricultural Department.

The Tribune invites the special attention of dairymen, venders of milk, jobbers, wholesalers and retail grocers to the act and to the rules. It violates no confidence when it says that the Dairy and Food Division, under Commissioner Foust, wants above all things else to be the friend and helper of the dealer. While the Division is charged with the enforcement of the law, we are confident that its head would rejoice if the dealers were to observe the law so scrupulously as to render a single prosecution impossible.

And yet dealers must take pains to obey the law and the regulations made under its provisions. They must carefully study the warning explanations of the Commissioner, especially in reference to guarantees secured from the wholesaler or jobber from whom they purchase, and they must be particularly careful to preserve all their proofs of purchase as well as the guarantees in the manner prescribed by the rules. The Commissioner will enter no prosecutions if the law is observed. But the Tribune has reason to believe that the agents of the Division have strict instructions to enforce the law.

Retail dealers complained bitterly during recent years that the law was unjust in that it made the innocent retailer suffer for the sins of the manufacturer. The new act of Assembly, rendered possible by the enactment of the National pure food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, was drafted for the purpose of giving the retailer the protection demanded. Under this act the retailer is protected from punishment for selling adulterated goods if he has a guarantee from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he made the purchase. If he neglect to secure the guarantee, or if he lose it, or if goods of the same quality obtained from different dealers be mixed so that they lose their identity, the retailer is liable to punishment for the sale of impure articles of food.

While the rights of the dealer must be considered, the protection of the public health is of the first importance and must be given the right of way. It was for the purpose of making an end of adulterated and poisonous goods that the Dairy and Food Division of the Agricultural Department was created. That is its mission today. Under the new law the ordinarily prudent dealer can protect himself from punishment for selling contrary to law by carefully securing guarantees from the dealers from whom he makes his purchases. That should be sufficient.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of all the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure fruit jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all of the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food

Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Approved:
N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. Issued July 1, 1907.

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION. SUPPLEMENT No. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and Fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

THE FEDERAL RULINGS CONCERNING OLEOMARGARINE.

Pennsylvania has made an honest effort to protect her important dairy interests against unfair competition. Under our State law the sale of colored oleomargarine is forbidden. Consequently any sale of yellow oleomargarine or butterine is unlawful, and those who engage in that traffic are liable to arrest and punishment. It is the firm determination of Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust to rigidly enforce this sane and sensible act.

There is a prospect, however, of a conflict of an unpleasant nature with the federal authorities. The federal act permits the sale of colored oleomargarine, but imposes a tax of ten cents a pound, which brings its selling price pretty nearly to a level with the price of pure butter. It is charged, however, that the federal authorities have recently passed as uncolored certain brands of oleomargarine which have a decidedly yellowish tinge. This product pays a tax of one-fourth of a cent a pound, a fact which makes it a dangerous competitor of the more costly butter.

The dairymen of Pennsylvania are not pleased with rulings which threaten to do them greivous harm. The attention of Senator Penrose and Senator Knox has been called to the matter, and they will earnestly endeavor to have the federal regulations strengthened so as to make it impossible for the manufacturers of oleomargarine, butterine and renovated butter to palm off their products upon grocers and thus upon consumers as genuine butter. One may concede that a man has the right to eat artificial butter if he desires, but nobody has a moral right to deceive the consumer.

It is true that the possession of a federal license permitting a dealer to sell colored butter substitutes does not exempt that dealer from prosecution and punishment under the State law. And yet it would be better all around if the national rules and regulations forbade the manufacture and sale of all colored substitutes. The least the dairymen will insist upon is the exclusion from the favor of the Washington authorities of all colored substitutes for butter. In other words, the dairymen are not getting a square deal when certain officials of the general government pass colored oleomargarine as uncolored, or when the compromising of civil and criminal prosecutions is permitted in cases where dealers in oleomargerine and other bogus butter products violate the laws.

It is a melancholy fact, as was stated in a telegram sent out to the West Chester Local News from Pittsburg, that certain of the federal laws are so defective that it is almost impossible to convict dealers who persistently traffic illegally in oleomargarine, butterine and renovated butter, to the great detriment of the farmers and dairymen of the whole country. The same telegram says:

"The dairy interests, or at least men who are prominent and influential in farmers' and dairymen's clubs, the Grange, both national and State, as well as the National Dairy Union, at its headquarters in Chicago, Ill., will get into this coming scrap.

"Certain gentlemen in Pennsylvania who are closely identified with the State Grange, the Pennsylvania Pure Butter Protective Association, the Pennsylvania State Dairy Union and the Pennsylvania Food Bureau will in the near future go to Chicago to consult with President Chas. Y. Knight and Secretary S. B. Shilling, of the National Dairy Union, with a view of securing by united action throughout the United States an organization of farmers, Granges and dairymen which it is hoped will better protect the pure butter makers and sellers.

"The plans for the campaign of the farmers and dairymen have not, of course, as yet been perfected. It is, however, known that they will vigorously urge the United States Senators and Congressmen at the next session of the national lawmaking body to make radical changes in certain national laws which deal with oleo and other substitutes for butter.

"It is also said that the dairymen, farmers and Granges will be urged by the leaders who are in charge of this crusade in behalf of pure butter to insist that the next Commissioner of Internal Revenue who will be appointed shall be a fearless man who will vigorously enforce the laws, and that he shall also be an individual who is friendly to the dairy cause.

"Such a person as Internal Revenue Commissioner would be in a position to materially aid in securing the needed changes in national statutes on oleo, etc., and he could also, perhaps, refrain from suppressing public records of sales of oleo, which if placed in the hands of efficient State officials would probably enable them to convict big dealers who are believed to be persistent violators of both State and national oleomargarine laws."

THE VINEGAR LAW.

In the year 1890 some prosecutions were brought in Bedford county under the act then in force regulating the manufacture and sale of vinegar. Although the vinegar was manufactured by farmers, the prosecutions were successful for the reason that the article lacked in acidity and in solids. It did not measure up to the demands of the act of Assembly, although it was perfectly harmless.

Believing that this law was entirely too drastic, and that it did great injustice to the farmers of the State, Senator Miller, of Bedford county, then a member of the House, had the vinegar law so changed and modified during the session of 1901 as to make it both possible and safe for the farmer to manufacture vinegar out of pure apple juice and to sell it to the trade.

Many merchants and farmers are not aware of the modifications that have been made in the act of Assembly. For that reason we reprint the law. Its provisions are perfectly plain. It will be seen that the farmer can safely prepare and sell vinegar made from apple juice containing neither water nor other foreign substances. If the farmer will make his cider in that way, labeling it "Pure Fermented Cider Vinegar," and placing his name on the barrel, he has a legal right to sell it to the trade and the jobber or merchant offering such product for sale can do so with absolute safety.

This act accomplishes the purpose of its creation—the protection of the farmer in offering an important product for sale and also the protection of the purchaser. Under the provisions of this act the average farmer may add quite a snug sum to his annual income, while the merchant who buys from the farmers of his own county has all the protection he needs. The vinegar law is as follows:

AN ACT

Providing for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of distilled and fermented vinegars; and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That from and after the passage of this act no person, firm or corporate body shall manufacture for sale, offer for sale or expose for sale, sell or deliver, or have in his, her or their possession with intent to sell or deliver, any vinegar not in compliance with the provisions of this act. No vinegar shall be sold or exposed for sale as apple or cider vinegar which is not the legitimate product of pure apple juice, or vinegar not made exclusively of said apple cider, or vinegar in which foreign substances, drugs or acids shall have been introduced, as may appear upon proper test; no vinegar shall be branded fruit vinegar unless the same be made wholly from grapes, apples or other fruits.

Section 2. All vinegar made by fermentation and oxidation without the intervention of distillation, shall be branded "fermented vinegar," with the name of the fruit or substance from which the same is made. And all vinegars made wholly or a part from distilled liquor shall be branded "distilled vinegar," and all such distilled vinegar shall be free from coloring matter, added before, during or after distillation, and from color other than that imparted to it by the process of distillation, and shall contain not less than four per centum, by weight, of absolute acetic acid. And all vinegar shall be made wholly from the fruit or grain from which it is represented to be made, and shall contain no foreign substance: Provided, That this shall not be construed to prohibit the use of such amount of spices as are necessary for flavoring, provided such spices do not color the vinegar.

Approved—The 21st day of May, A. D. 1901.

NOT A PROPER LABEL.

In the mail received by the Dairy and Food Commissioner the other day was a letter containing a sample label. The manufacturers desired to use it on certain of their goods, but wished to know whether it complied with the requirements of the pure food laws and the regulations adopted therewith. By way of reply a copy of the law and of the rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof was mailed to the inquirer.

But did the label meet the requirements of the act of Assembly? It was couched in these words: "Concentrated Extract of Pine Apple." This sentence was printed in large black letters, and immediately attracted the eye, as it was certainly intended to do. Directly under the words, "Pine Apple," appeared in very small and inconspicuous type the sinster declaration, "Artificial." It was evidently not the purpose of the designer of that label to particularly attract the attention of the purchaser to the artificial character of the preparation.

The truth is there is no genuine extract of pine apple in the market. Many of this sort of flavors are artificial, made usually from compound ethers, and of the whole lot "pine apple extract" is one of the worst sinners. The manufacturers of these artificial compounds are permitted to make and sell them under the law, but they must label them accurately, so that neither the retail dealer nor the purchaser is likely to be deceived.

If the manufacturers in question had thought a moment, or if they had wished to be perfectly fair and absolutely honest with the consuming public they would have labeled this particular article "Artificial Pine Apple." That would have expressed the exact truth; it would have deceived no one; it would have complied with the rules of the Division. The word "Artificial," of course, should be in the same type as the words "Pine Apple." Under such circumstances, the article could be sold without deception and the law would protect the vendor, so long as it contained no substance injurious to health. Attention is directed to that section of the rules and regulations of the Division referring to misbranding, which will be found on another page of this number of the Bulletin. Those who scrupulously follow the directions therein found will find themselves in perfect harmony with the law.

CLEANLINESS IN THE DAIRY.

It is always worth while to strive for a first class reputation. It is true of any other calling in life as it is of the legal profession that "there is always room at the top." Superiority is a badge of merit which counts for much in the world's mart. The genuine article is soon detected by those who enter the market in search of the best possible product in any line. Even in days of cheap commercialism, at the moment when many dealers imagine that the road to success lies through the devious ways of adulteration and downright cheating, it remains true that the manufacturer or dealer who takes an infinite amount of pains will eventually win his reward in the confidence and patronage of an ever-increasing number of the people.

The majority of the dairymen of the State need no advice. Long ere this they have grasped the vital idea that in the matter of dairy products "cleanliness is next to godliness." That is to say the path of rectitude and success in this important industry lies along the way of special carefulness and scrupulous cleanliness. Pure dairy products, carefully prepared and guarded in every possible way against the dangers of dirt or disease which constantly hover about the milk vessels and the milk itself, soon win the admiration and the confidence of the consumer and establish for their manufacturers reputations which constitute a capital of no mean proportions in the conduct of their business. The prudent and sagacious business man should surely covet such a valuable supplement to his cash capital.

Care in dealing with milk and its various products is highly essential at all seasons of the year for the reason that they are specially susceptible to taint, so that it often happens that wholesome milk is spoiled, so far as the market is concerned, by thoughtlessly bringing it in contact with some foreign substance, not in itself dangerous to health, but possessing the property of imparting to the milk an odor and a taste so nauseating as to offend the palate and arouse the worst fears of the purchaser. Thus it becomes the dairyman not only to observe the strictest cleanliness in all his surroundings, but also to insure the absence of every foreign substance that might put a bad taste in the mouths of his patrons and create the impression among the thoughtless or the uninformed that he was actually selling "poisoned" milk.

The universal use of milk, especially its use as the chief food of many thousands of young children in our Commonwealth, makes it imperative that the Dairy and Food Division set forth line upon line, line upon line, precept upon precept, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little concerning its preservation and protection. The children are entitled to the most ample consideration, and it should be no less the chief thought of the dairyman than of the servants of the State and the parents of the children to take infinite pains to secure it for them. A proper apprehension by the dairymen of their duties and their responsibilities—and most of them need no urging—will do much to reduce infant mortality in this Commonwealth and give us a race of sturdy boys and girls, the pride of their homes and the hope of the future.

CLEANING HOUSE.

The careful housewife has one habit which is earnestly commended to the imitation of the retail dealers of Pennsylvania. Twice a year she gives her premises a thorough overhauling—"cleans house." An important part of her work consists in getting rid of the debris of various sorts which has accumulated during the past six months. Everything that has passed the stage of usefulness or that is simply in the way goes to the junk pile, to be hauled away presently or is cremated. At the end of her house cleaning operations she starts in afresh with the consciousness that the premises look much better and that she has got rid of a quantity of useless material.

The new pure food law protects the retail dealer, provided he can produce a guarantee. But the rules of the Division, framed in accordance with the provisions of the law, make it exceedingly plain that a dealer who cannot produce a guarantee is liable to prosecution, conviction and fine if he is unable to produce the proper guarantee, in case the goods sold from his shelves are found to be adulterated or misbranded. The law is very explicit. It seeks first of all to protect the public; then the dealer. But if the latter wishes to secure its benefits he must scrupulously observe its requirements. This is a perfectly fair requirement. It is necessary for the protection of the public health and should be obeyed.

That is the reason retail dealers should inaugurate a general house-cleaning crusade at this time. It is likely that some have goods on their shelves that have been there for years. They are scarcely as fresh as they were at the moment of purchase; besides, the retailer has forgotten from whom he procured them or is in great doubt about it. Even if he is sure of the dealer, it would be extremely difficult to convince the latter that it is his duty to guarantee goods which passed out of his possession years ago. In some instances the wholesaler or jobber has gone out of business. To sell such goods would be to invite prosecution. A little precaution and prudence might save much trouble and expense.

As has been said, the purpose of the pure food law is to protect the public as far as possible from adulterated food products. That is the first intention of the act. But it was likewise framed with a view to the protection of the trade. In order that efficient protection may be given, the Dairy and Food Commissioner must have the hearty co-operation and assistance of the dealer. Thus, if the retailer will clear his shelves of the old goods that have accumulated there and for which he has no guarantee and can get none, and if the wholesale dealer will demand an indemnifying bond from the manufacturer, certifying that all goods purchased comply with the requirements of the national and State food laws, the problem will be solved and there will be no prosecutions against anybody.

Dealers must take particular notice that the new law requires them to get a re-invoice for all goods now on their shelves. This re-invoice must contain the guarantee provided for in the act. If a merchant has goods for which he cannot obtain such guarantee for the reason that he does not remember from whom they were purchased, or for any other reason, the only safe plan is to destroy them. For the attempt to sell any article which is without a guarantee might be followed by an expensive prosecution. It is quite possible that there will be some such prosecutions before the summer is ended, but no prudent dealer will ignore the plain provisions of the law after the danger of such action has been carefully and repeatedly pointed out.

Let us sum up, by way of emphasis: Every retail dealer doing business in Pennsylvania should clean house, taking care to destroy all goods the purchase of which he cannot identify and for which he has no guarantee. Every retailer should take special pains to get a re-invoice of all goods the purchase of which he can locate, as well as an invoice of all fresh goods purchased, both bearing the legal guarantee. Each wholesale dealer or jobber should demand and secure from the manufacturers an indemnifying bond, certifying that all goods purchased are up to the standard of purity demanded by the national and State laws. If this is done in every instance the best of relations will exist between the State of Pennsylvania and the wholesale and retail dealers of Pennsylvania.

Surely it is not an unreasonable request the Commonwealth makes through the Dairy and Food Division of the merchants of the State. Business men should have little difficulty in understanding the situation and in shaping their conduct accordingly.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

In the matter of selling food products it is well to remember that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Wholesalers and jobbers who secure proper indemnifying bonds from manufacturers will thereby protect themselves and their customers from prosecution and possible loss of both time and money.

The retail dealer who has no goods on his shelves which are not guaranteed has complied with the letter and the spirit of the act of Assembly, and is immune from prosecution under the said act.

The Dairy and Food Division exists to protect the consuming public. To that end it is compelled to enforce the law upon all who disobey or undertake to evade its requirements. The Division is not seeking trouble, but it will enforce the law and the rules made in pursuance thereof.

The careful and conscientious dealer will know the law and obey its mandates. He is safe, cheerful and contented, because his conscience is at peace with himself, the State and the rest of mankind.

Suppose we all work together in obedience to the several acts of Assembly and make it a good year.

This number of the Bulletin should be specially valuable to all persons interested in the manufacture or sale of food products in the State. It contains the rules and regulations of the Division, adopted in conformity thereto, and much other interesting and important matter.

Ignorance of the law is held to be no excuse for its violation. The path of safety lies by way of abundant knowledge. This number of the Bulletin has been largely prepared on the theory that retailers, wholesalers, jobbers, manufacturers, all who are in any way affected by the laws and regulations governing the manufacture and sale of foods in this Commonwealth, are anxious to be informed. A careful study of the contents of this number and a determination to be guided by the information imparted and the advice offered will promote the general welfare.

Venders of milk should carefully examine Rule 5 of the rules and regulations prepared by the Dairy and Food Commissioner of Pennsylvania, and govern themselves accordingly. Milk is so important an item of diet, especially for infants and children, that the State is bound to make special efforts to safeguard the supply.

Labels upon articles of food must exactly describe the contents of the package. False statements on labels constitute a violation of the act of Assembly and of the national food and drugs act.

Hereafter the lovers of ice cream are likely to know by experience what the ice cream of our grandmothers tasted like.

There will be no prosecution of dealers in food products unless the laws are violated. And everybody should know that it is much cheaper, much safer and very much more honorable to conform to the requirements of the acts of Assembly and the regulations made in pursuance thereof.

This publication strives to be increasingly useful to the wholesale and retail dealers of Pennsylvania. It would be pleased to hear from its readers at any time, either by way of suggestions concerning its conduct, or by way of furnishing information desired by dealers or others.

The once famous "poison squad," organized by Dr. Wiley at Washington for the purpose of testing the alleged effect of adulterants upon the human constitution, has been disbanded. It was composed of robust government clerks who submitted to the hazards of their peculiar meals for the benefit of humanity. It is alleged that the federal officials entrusted with the enforcement of the national food and drugs act have by this method secured a body of data which will prove exceedingly valuable in showing the exact influence of "preservatives" and other ingredients upon the human organism.

There is an impression abroad that the results of experiments in the matter of "preserved" foods taken into the human stomach are not going to be as valuable, from a scientific standpoint, as some of the experimenters imagine. There is an old saying that "what is one man's meat is another man's poison," and one meets with instances almost every day which seem to establish its truth. It is well known that an article of food which is relished by one person and promptly digested acts like a virulent poison upon another. Some persons take alcohol freely for many years and reach a hale old age, while it cuts off others in the prime of manhood. On the whole, the best plan, probably, would be to keep all "preservatives" and other doubtful ingredients out of the food of the people. It is not necessary to take any risks of that sort.

The grocer who wants to secure the protection of the law will take special pains to obey its requirements. He will do this cheerfully and promptly, of his own accord. And doing it he will be perfectly safe in the transaction of his business from day to day.

The child is entitled to special protection during the torrid weather. It is unable to choose either the quality or the quantity of its food. Its life may depend upon caution in this respect. Those municipal and State authorities who are striving to educate mothers and others who have to do with the small people are doing a good and helpful thing.

Perfect cleanliness is a virtue which should be sought after by all who aspire to serve the public in the matter of food and drink. It will not only minimize the danger of disease, but it will likewise establish the reputation of all who practice it, enlarging their trade and mightily promoting their success.

The national food and drugs act and all other national legislation having to do with the food of the people should be so amended as to cure the several serious defects that have already been discovered in its operation. Especially should imitation foods be compelled to stand on their own record.

The co-operation of the readers of the Bulletin is sought in the effort to make it increasingly helpful to them. If the Dairy and Food Division and the manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers and retailers work harmoniously together the best of results will follow, not the least substantial of which will be entire harmony.

A WATER CURE.

Two years ago a wise stomach specialist in Boston told William Goodman, of Jackson, N. H., that he had a malady that could not be cured.

The malady had a long Latin name Goodman failed to remember more than five minutes, but it had such an awful sound that he believed the doctor was right.

"You can't live more than a couple of months," the physician said, "so you had better go home and take things easy."

Goodman went home, made his will and waited for death. While he was waiting an aunt from Concord, N. H., visited him and heard all about the terrible stomach disease. She wasn't convinced that her nephew had to die.

"I know a man in Concord who was a lot worse off than you are and he cured himself by drinking water," she said. "He just slushed it down by the gallon."

Goodman had always fought shy of water, believing that it wasn't good for the system, but he now began to take large quantities of the fluid. In a few days he was surprised to find that he felt better.

At the end of a month the improvement was marked, and at the expiration of six months he was considerably stronger and had gained two pounds. From this time on the gain was steady, until today the man is in perfect health, and can eat a Welsh rarebit at midnight without feeling ill effects.

In the two years Goodman drank four quarts of water a day, being careful not to drink twenty minutes before eating or within an hour thereafter. He has thus consumed 2,920 quarts of water. He has used neither tea, coffee nor spirits, but has drunk a good deal of milk. He eats meat, potatoes, vegetables and sweets. In fact he dines on ordinary food, save that he abstains from pastry.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and joining states who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including August 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

TEMPORIZING WITH AN EVIL.

At the Chicago convention of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, William C. Breed, Esq., counsel for the Association, reviewed the scope of National legislation in a long address. Among other things he said:

"If the government should make a rule in connection with the use of benzoate of soda, as I believe it will shortly, allowing one or two years for the manufacturer or dealer to devise some new process of preserving food products acknowledged to be harmless, would the dealer seriously object? Time would have proven whether benzoate of soda be necessary or not.

"If the government should make a rule, as I believe it will, allowing the process of sulphur bleaching in dried fruits or the use of sulphurous acid in connection with wines for a period of years until new processes can be experimented with, the question of the necessity for the use of sulphur in food products would have been demonstrated. Would anyone object to such a rule?

It is said that the federal authorities have determined to allow the use of benzoate of soda in this year's crop, but that they will not permit it to be sold under a guarantee bearing a serial number But if benzoate of soda is really injurious to the human body why allow its use until January 1? Why not prohibit it now, before the year's crop is put up? If it is not injurious why not allow its indefinite use in quantities of one-tenth of one per cent.? But if it is a harmful substance why temporize and put off the inevitable until January 1, or any other period in the future?

THE FIGHT FOR PURE FOOD AND DRINK.

If all men and women were honest and unselfish, those servants of the Nation and the State who are charged with the enforcement of the acts of Congress and the several legislatures relating to the food of the people would have a very pleasant time. For under such conditions no food, no beverage, would be sent out to the venders unless it was exactly what it purported to be. It is only because some manufacturers and some dealers are selfish and avaricious and unscrupulous that some of the State legislatures have enacted pure food laws and provided for their enforcement.

It was the same condition of affairs and the rising tide of popular impatience that forced Congress to act after seventeen years of delay and to pass the Food and Drug law which the Department of Agriculture is instructed to enforce.

The Bulletin does not disguise its conviction that the national law is a very defective measure. Still, it is a long step in the right direction, and it seems that the consuming public have a right to congratulate themselves upon having secured so much to start with. If the interest of the people is maintained, as it well may be, considering the importance of the subject, additional and more stringent legislation may be confidently looked for. It is too true, unfortunately, that much of human nature is not a pleasant thing to consider. The millenium may be just around the corner—let us hope it is—but the rosy pencils of light presaging the dawn, have not yet begun to quiver in the east. On the contrary, greed and chicanery did what they could to defeat congressional legislation concerning food and drink, or to delay it, or to mutilate and weaken the act.

Among the other interesting papers read before the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, at its recent convention at Jamestown, Va., was one on "The People's Lobby and Its Pure Food Work," by Henry Beach Needham, secretary of the People's Lobby. The latter is an organization of public-spirited citizens who have associated themselves for the purpose of promoting legislation needed by the people and of defeating vicious measures. Mr. Needham told about the obstacles placed in the way of pure food legislation by interested parties. The ordinary citizen might suppose that a bill "for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded foods, drugs, medicines and liquors" would meet with little or no opposition. And it is true that when the bill came to final passage it received the votes of all the senators save four, while but seventeen votes were recorded against it in the House. But the movement had been viciously antagonized for seventeen years, and the final result was due to aroused popular indignation.

Dr. Needham declared that while Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, will be known as the father of the Food and Drugs act, an honor which this faithful public servant richly deserves, it must not be forgotten that the Food and Dairy Commissioners of the several states who constitute the National Association, are entitled to a large degree of credit. These gentlemen, he observes, took the initiative in formulating public sentiment and it was through their unwearied efforts that public sentiment was finally moulded into the aggressive weapon which pushed the act through both branches of Congress. That unwearied vigilance and persistent pressure were greatly needed is proved by Mr. Needham who shows how the bill was delayed in the House in spite of the tremendous majority waiting to be recorded in its favor, and how persistently interested parties tried to amend it so as to destroy its original purpose. In fact, as Dr. Needham declares, "but for 'Executive interference' the bill would have remained during the summer and fall of 1906 in a state of suspended animation." The patent medicine lobby was particularly active and succeeded in persuading the committee having the bill in charge to insert an amendment—afterwards eliminated—legalizing the use of alcohol as a preservative of a solvent, and permitting the use of two grains of opium or one-quarter grain of morphine—without notice to the purchaser. The committee yielded to persistent pressure. To undo the wrong, similar pressure was exerted in the interest of the purchasing public.

The foregoing instances are simply a sample of the opposition the friends of protective legislation were obliged to face and are still compelled to watch with unceasing vigilance. Mr. Needham goes on to show how the important work of the Department of Agriculture in establishing standards for foods was halted through the active interference of interested persons after about two-thirds of the foods had been standardized. The provision of the agricultural appropriation bill authorizing the Secretary to continue this work was stricken out on motion of Representative Crumpacker, of Indiana. The Committee on Agriculture of the Senate restored it, but it was again stricken out on motion of Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts. In opposing this action Senator Proctor, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, declared that the objections that were raised in committee against the adoption of standards had convinced him that it ought to be done. And he bluntly charged that the representatives of blended whiskey were particularly active. Mr. Needham justly says, in speaking of the remarkable influence wielded by the chief whiskey lobbiest that the fact "that such an individual, holding no commission from the people, but active always contrary to their welfare, should be able to wield such power is proof enough that his employers have a strong hold on Congress—a hold which is shared by other powerful interests." In addition to the foregoing facts, it may also be mentioned that an amendment offered by Mr. Tawney was adopted by the House, although it was rescinded later, providing that no part of the appropriation for carrying the Food and Drugs act into effect should be paid for compensation or expenses of any officer or other person employed by any state, county or municipal government. If this provision had been permitted to remain, it would have effectually barred co-operation between the Department of Agriculture and State officials and would have increased the cost of the bureau nearly tenfold. The intention was to make the enforcement of law difficult, if not impossible, by reason of the tremendous cost. The People's Lobby took the matter up, issued a statement of facts too powerful to resist, and had the satisfaction of seeing the obnoxious amendment stricken out by the unanimous vote of the Senate Committee on Agriculture.

The foregoing outline of some of the points contained in Mr. Needham's address indicates quite clearly that the National Food and Drug act, imperfect as it is in many essentials, and urgently needing, as it does, to be supplemented by independent state action, is not acceptable to some large interests and there is reason to believe those interested have little intention of obeying it cheerfully and without any reservations. And yet this act with those which have been adopted gy the state legislatures, seeks simply to protect the consumer from the depredations of unscrupulous manufacturers and dealers. The situation would be greatly simplified if the leading manufacturers of the country would all take their stand on the side of the law and order and assist the Agricultural Department and the several Dairy and Food Commissioners of the states to expose and punish infractions of the laws seeking to protect the health of the people. This has already been done to some extent and the Bulletin is confident that it will become general, for no honest and high-minded manufacturer can afford to have any dealings with the unscrupulous and the avaricious manufacturers of unfit food and poisoned drink.

A CONFESSION OF GUILT.

At the Tipton encampment of the Second Brigade, National Guard of Pennsylvania, some of the venders of bogus lemonade were so fully persuaded of the hopelessness of their cases that they deserted their tubs of "lemonade" and literally "took to the woods" when the Agents of the Pure Food Division, under the personal direction of Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, appeared on the ground and began collecting samples for future inspection. As nobody seemed to own the acid-impregnated water which had been doing duty as lemonade, the tubs were overturned and the contents permitted to work havoc with the grass rather than with the stomachs of visitors to the encampment.

This incident—only one of several precisely similar—demonstrated the need of ceaseless vigilance upon the part of those entrusted with the enforcement of the several acts of Assembly passed for the purpose of protecting the consuming public. It likewise shows that visitors to encampments, county fairs and similar gatherings where large companies of people are assembled, should be extremely careful concerning the quality of the drinks they put in their stomachs. It is very apparent that we cannot depend upon the laws to enforce themselves. Nor can we trust to the honor of those who are in business for the purpose of making out of it all they can, regardless of the provisions of law or of the probable effect of their crookedness upon the health of their innocent customers.

The majority of the people of this State, including those engaged in catering to the necessities of their neighbors, are honest. They would not be guilty of poisoning children and adults for the sake of a few tainted dollars. It is the duty of these to give the servants of the State their hearty assistance and constant support in the work of ridding the Commonwealth of the fakirs who are selling poisons under the guise of harmless and refreshing beverages.

POISONED SODA WATER AND "POP."

The State of Pennsylvania now has a very efficient law regulating the traffic in food. With the active co-operation and sympathy of manufacturers and dealers it is believed the Pure Food Division will be able to prevent the sale of adulterated or poisonous articles of food. How many lives have already been saved by the legislation now in force nobody will ever be able to tell. But it is clear that there has been a great improvement in the quality of the food offered for sale to the people of Pennsylvania.

It should be apparent to all who give the matter the least attention that the pure food laws need to be supplemented by a properly framed act regulating the sale of alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks within the Commonwealth. It is quite as important that the people have pure drinks as that they have pure food. The quantity of drink consumed in this State in the course of a year, and especially during the summer months, is simply enormous. To poison the consumer by adulterating his drink is quite as serious an offense against the health of the individual and the happiness of the family as to vend poisoned food.

A bill was presented at the last session of the Legislature the passage of which would have placed in the hands of the Pure Food Commissioner power sufficient to have made an end of the sale of poisoned drinks in the State. It was a moderate and reasonable measure, the result of a conference between the Commissioner and some of the leading liquor dealers of the State. The bill would have given security to the consumer and also to the dealer had it become a law. It failed, however, and recent investigations by Agents of the Pure Food Department have revealed a condition of affairs which leads to the not unreasonable supposition that the manufacturers and venders of "dope" were extremely solicitous to prevent legislation.

Much has been said in the public press and from the pulpit and platform concerning the almost universal and extremely dangerous adulteration of whiskey and other alcoholic beverages. It has been pretty generally taken for granted that pure liquors were the exception and adulterated goods the rule. Nor has the general sentiment been without foundation. Liquors should be brought under the jurisdiction of the State law. The Pure Food Division should likewise be a Pure Drink Division. Since many men will drink it is important that the liquors they consume should be as free from poisonous adulterants as possible. There should be no differences of opinion on this point among consumers or honest dealers.

Recent investigations by agents of the Pure Food Division led to absolute confirmation of a suspicion that the so-called "soft" drinks dispensed in many sections of the State are not free from adulteration. In the city of Philadelphia scores of cheap fountains have been put in operation, largely for the purpose of catching the trade of the children. The stuff sold at the fountains costs the patrons from a penny to three cents a glass and is chiefly heavily and dangerously adulterated. "Lemonade" is also dispensed at the same cheap rate to little customers. Both the "soda water" and the "lemonade" are heavily charged with dangerous adulterants. They do not instantly kill, but they poison the system and help to shorten the lives of their consumers.

In an article on the cheap soda water and lemonade stands now doing business in our largest city, the Philadelphia Record declares that "many of the keepers of these places not only sell drinks that destroy the stomach and plant the germs of innumerable diseases, but the very receptacles from which the poisonous compounds are dispensed are in themselves unsanitary, in many instances filthy. and in most cases dirty." The Record adds: "At one stand nine children paid their penny apiece for a drink of alleged soda water, and seven of the nine drank out of the same glass that was washed but once during the process of dispensing. At another place two white and two colored men, with three little white girls were swilling what was designated on a sign as 'leminad al pur 1 cent a glas.' "

We are further told that the "soda water" was a cheap mixture of saccharin and a carbonate of unknown ingredients. The lemonade was water, coloring and saccharin. Root beer that was offered at another place was composed of tar dye, benzoic acid and water. It has also been established by actual examination that many of the mineral waters manufactured and sold in this State are also heavily and dangerously adulterated by the manufacturers. "Pop," as it is familiarly called, very frequently has saccharin, coal tar dye and other obnoxious if not deadly ingredients in its composition. Many samples of soft drinks and wines recently examined show that the people of Pennsylvania are drinking an abnormal quantity of injurious "dope" in their beverages. Many of those beverages are non-alcoholic.

In a statement recently made by the Assistant Dairy and Food Commissioner of the State of Minnesota, it is asserted quite truthfully, that "saccharin when used in food retards digestion and general metabolism; destroys the life-giving qualities of food; prevents rebuilding of the cells of the tissues of the body; is injurious to health." In the preparation of the soft drinks which are flooding the State, saccharin is extensively used as a substitute for sugar. The latter is an actual food; the former is an insidious and dangerous enemy to the human body. Surely, the present condition of affairs will move the next legislature to immediate and fitting action.

CARING FOR MILK IN THE HOME.

The Health Department of the City of Richmond, Va., has issued an important circular which has been distributed among the householders of the city. Its title is "Care of Milk in the Home," and the attention of mothers is specially directed to its suggestions. The Bulletin has already uttered some warning words of the same general import, but as it is read by many parents it feels that no harm can possibly follow the recapitulation of the contents of this circular.

Householders are warned that it is not sufficient that milk be good and pure when delivered to them. Unless proper care is taken in the home after the milk has been received it will not long remain good. Good milk is the most valuable single article of diet known to man and the only proper food for babies under one year of age, when they cannot get the nourishment which nature intended for them—their mother's milk. Bad milk, however, is one of the most dangerous of foods, being responsible for serious bowel troubles among babies and for the death of very many of them.

The Richmond health authorities tell the mothers of their city that the chief means by which milk is often made dangerous are: (1) Dirty methods of keeping and milking the cows, dirty milkers and dirty milk vessels; (2) failure to cool the milk promptly and keep it cold until used, and (3) keeping the milk too long before it is used. "Bad milk, therefore," say they, "so far as danger to health is concerned, is dirty milk or warm, stale milk." It is added that "in the home, as on the farm and in the city dairy, cleanliness and cold are the two essentials in the securing of wholesome milk."

Then follow some important directions, not new by any means, but timely and very largely ignored all over the country, in spite of their life-preserving value. If they were obeyed in all the homes of the land infant mortality would show a remarkable decline. Here are some of them:

All vessels used for milk should be thoroughly cleansed as soon as empty, using first clean cold water for rinsing, and then scalding them with hot water containing a small amount of washing soda or borax. Do not use soap for this purpose. After thorough washing, the vessels should be rinsed with clean water and then well aired and sunned, in some place where they will be protected from dust.

If your milkman delivers his milk in sealed bottles, see that he does not leave these in a place where they will be exposed to the heat of the sun before being brought into the house. They should be taken in as soon as possible and stood at once in the refrigerator until used. As soon as you have emptied a bottle, wash it out carefully. Do not return to your milkman bottles containing stale milk.

If you are getting bottled milk and if a case of typhoid fever or other "catching" disease breaks out in your house, you should tell your milkman at once, and he should not take away any milk bottles from your house until after the case has gotten well, as one of these bottles might otherwise be the means of carrying the disease to other houses.

If your milkman does not deliver his milk in bottles, it is best to have him deliver it directly to you or your servant, and you should see that it is put on ice immediately and kept cold.

The practice of putting out an uncovered pitcher or other vessel for milk the night before cannot be too strongly condemned.

Such a pitcher or vessel, exposed to the dust and dirt of the street, will collect thousands of germs before the milk is put into it. Many of these may be dangerous to life and health, besides which they will certainly cause the milk to sour in a short time and become unfit for use. The purest milk received in such a vessel may become as bad in a few hours as the worst milk from a dirty farm.

If you are compelled to stand out a vessel to receive your milk, provide yourself with several glass preserve-jars, which should be used for this purpose only. They should be kept well washed and aired as above described. Get jars with clamp tops. Those with screw tops are hard to keep properly cleansed. Do not use the rubber ring which comes with most jars, as it is difficult to keep clean and the jar will be sufficiently tight without it. Instead of a preserve jar, a bowl, covered by a plate, may be used. A pitcher cannot be tightly covered on account of the projecting spout.

Give your personal attention to your milk vessels.

The milkmen of Richmond state that many persons have the idea that if milk is delivered to them warm this is a proof of its being fresh from the cow, and hence better. So far from this being true, only by cooling the milk so soon as it is got from the cow, is it possible to prevent its rapid decomposition in warm weather.

While bad milk is the chief cause of bowel troubles among infants it is by no means the only cause. Improper feeding is another. Never give anything but milk to a child under one year, unless advised to do so by your family doctor. Never buy milk for the baby from a grocery store. Store milk has often been kept over from the day before, and only too often without ice or in an open pitcher in a refrigerator in which meats and vegetables are also kept. It is dangerous as food for babies. Those who follow the foregoing instructions will do much toward preserving the health of the various members of their families—and especially of the little ones—during the balance of the summer. They will also discover that the milk will keep longer and taste better, because it will be purer.

COMMISSIONER EMERY ON UNIFORMITY.

In another part of the present number of the Bulletin the reader will find the material portions of a decidedly interesting and aggressive paper on "The Element of Uniformity in National and State Food Laws." Its author is the Hon. J. Q. Emery, Dairy and Food

Commissioner of Wisconsin. It was read at the eleventh annual convention of the State and National Dairy and Food Departments, at Jamestown, Va., on Tuesday, July 16, 1907. It will be found interesting and striking—some may think a little too striking—and the reader who does not give it his attention will miss an opportunity for some minutes of enjoyment.

It is not the present intention of the Bulletin to discuss the various points raised by Mr. Emery in his admirable address. It will suffice to say that Wisconsin's dairy and food commissioner is well fitted for the post he occupies. That the authorities as well as the people of his state have confidence in his integrity and ability is evidenced by the fact that he is now serving his third term by appointment. Earnest and enthusiastic, thoroughly sincere, devoted to the public interest, the foe of poisoned or adulterated food, those who heard his paper read at Jamestown were convinced that whatever might be said upon the other side, the author of that paper was entirely in earnest and believed from the bottom of his heart every word he uttered.

There is every reason to believe that uniformity of national and state laws regarding the manufacture and sale of articles of food and drink is to be desired. But it would be a great mistake for any state having an efficient act to exchange it for a poorer one simply to get in line with the national government. There is an impression abroad that the Federal Food and Drugs act leaves much to be desired. Every effort should be bent toward increasing its efficiency as a shield of the people.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The most cleanly-disposed grocer may not be able to drive the flies entirely out of his establishment, and he certainly can't keep them from buzzing about the vegetables, fruits and berries he displays in front of his store. But he can keep these articles covered with netting in such a way as to prevent the flies covering them. Many a grocer loses important sales by carelessness in this respect. A goodly proportion of housekeepers will not buy goods which have been covered with flies for hours. The fly is an unclean insect and a disease-carrying one. For that reason it is highly dangerous.

In his admirable address before the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments at Jamestown, Va., Henry Beach Needham, Secretary of the People's Lobby, made the following truthful declaration in the closing section of his address: "The greatest assistance in the enforcement of the pure food law will come from the honest manufacturer. Protected from unjust competition at the hands of those who have fattened on the public, the fair-dealing manufacturer will seek the proper advantage which may be derived from a strict adherence to the letter and spirit of the law." The honest manufacturer—and the country has many such—will derive his greatest benefit from a faithful observance of the National and State laws.

It is a matter of profound regret that the unscrupulous manufacturer or vender of food products makes pure food acts necessary and frequently compels the State to set the machinery of the law in motion to secure the protection and safety to which the consuming public is entitled. He is moved, of course by greed and has no respect for law and no regard for the ultimate consequences to his victims. Reluctantly as the State enters upon legal processes, it must enforce the law upon such unscrupulous persons.

One might as well speak the truth. The man who deliberately and for the sake of gain adulterates or poisons the food or the beverages of a people is just as surely a criminal as the thief who despoils you of your goods or the assassin who takes your life. To poison the body slowly, not killing immediately, but sowing the seeds of disease, to be followed by physical or mental feebleness, or both, is not that one of the most atrocious crimes of which any individual professing to be a business man can be guilty?

What a pity it is that human greed declines to regard such a thing as the health or the life of a child when private gain is involved. If the sanitary surroundings of some of the cheap soda water and lemonade stands in our larger cities are what reputable newspapers declare them to be, would it not be possible for the health authorities of those cities to mend matters? In the absence of an act giving the Dairy and Food Commissioner authority to interfere with the venders of poisoned cheap soft drinks, it should be possible for the people directly interested to find some method of improving the situation. Nobody knows how many children have been killed by adulterated soda water or lemonade this year.

Since the health of the householders of Pennsylvania and the health of the members of their families will be largely determined by the quality of the beverages they drink and the food they eat, each citizen should constitute himself a committee of one to applaud obedience to law and to the rules of health upon the part of honest manufacturers and to secure the punishment of those who deliberately adulterate and poison the products they offer for sale. The enforcement of existing laws and the enactment of others that are needed should be advocated by every voter and every mother.

The Food Committee of the National Consumers' League, with headquarters at 105 East Twenty-second street, New York, has republished a valuable paper on "The Sanitary Importance of Clean Milk," originally read at a Boston Medical Library meeting. The author is Professor Charles Harrington, M. D., Assistant Professor of Hygiene, Harvard Medical School, and Secretary of the State Board of Health of Massachusetts. Professor Harrington shows how milk becomes dirty and is thus transformed from a perfect food into a dangerous poison. He notes the fact that the heavy increase in infant mortality is due to the growing practice of feeding babies by the bottle, instead of having them suckled by their mothers. Dirty milk produces cholera infantum in infants and tuberculosis and typhoid fever in adults. Hence the importance of guarding the milk supply. Dr. Harrington's address should have an extensive circulation.

The American Food Journal says that City Chemist Clarke, of Indianapolis, has been examining ice-cream sold in the drug stores of that city. He finds it of very poor quality, some of it running as low as 2 per cent. butter fat. The Indiana standard is 8 per cent. Realizing that the vendors were innocent of intent to defraud, samples were secured from the manufacturers as the goods were being delivered to the retail dealer and suits will be instituted and pushed to a conclusion. There is no question concerning the intention of a manufacturer who palms off a counterfeit for the genuine thing. He is moved by the controlling purpose of making as cheap an article as possible, and this is in answer to the general demand for something cheap.

MINNESOTA ICE CREAM STANDARD.

E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner Minnesota, has issued a circular on ice cream, as follows:

"The attention of manufacturers of and dealers in ice cream is called to the state law regulating the manufacture and sale of this product. The provisions of the law are, in effect, as follows:

"First—Only pure ingredients may be used.

"Second—Coloring matter is prohibited, except that vegetable colors may be used in other than vanilla ice cream.

"Third—Wholesome ingredients, such as gelatin, etc., are not prohibited.

"Fourth—All ice cream must contain not less than 12 per cent. butter fat by weight.

"The law is now in effect and will be rigidly enforced."

It is a great comfort to the consuming public as well as to National and State pure food officers and agents to know that there are many manufacturers in the United States who are too jealous of their reputation as producers of first class goods to consider the question of adulteration for a moment. They put their conscience into the food products they send out to the jobbers and retailers, so that they are always the faithful allies of pure food officials and the loyal servants of the consumer.

The head of the family owes it to the children whom he is rearing to make his purchases of articles of food and drink from dealers whom he can trust. He will have little trouble in finding such. He should be personally acquainted with his milkman and should know considerable about that milkman's business. He has a right to know. He ought to be familiar with the sources of the milkman's milk supply. He ought to know about the surroundings of the dairy, the condition of the cows, the methods under which they are cared for and all things needful to give him a pretty clear notion of the condition of the milk consumed by his children and the other members of his family.

Reputable and careful dealers may do much toward increasing the purity of the food and drink of the people by standing up resolutely for the enforcement of the laws relating to the preparation and sale of marketable products. There will always be a certain proportion of "crooked" persons in business, but their number may be largely decreased when dealers who have some regard for their reputation and a patriotic desire to conduct themselves as good citizens will come to the assistance of officers. The law is always strong and easily enforced when it is sustained by an enlightened public sentiment.

The American Food Journal for July makes a very pointed and timely observation when it says: "The importance of good state laws is emphasized more than ever by the enactment of the national law. The national law applies only to interstate commerce. It does not inspect food and drugs made and sold wholly within a state, or any adulteration or misbranding practiced after the original package has been changed in the state market. Therefore, the state which does not maintain close inspection over its own commerce will become more than ever the dumping ground for adulterations." The superficial thinkers who imagine that the national law can "do it all," are mistaken.

The first annual convention of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association was held in the city of Chicago during the closing days of June. In behalf of the city of Chicago, the address of welcome was delivered by Franklin MacVeagh, of Franklin MacVeagh & Co. He announced with emphasis that it was the intention of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association to stand for and promote no private interest that cannot and does not square itself with the rights and advantages of the people. He referred to the support given by their organization to the national food law. He said the association also welcomed state pure food laws and plead for uniformity in national and state regulations as to the labeling of food products.

At its Chicago convention the National Wholesale Grocers' Association adopted resolutions urging the adoption by the several states of uniform pure food laws modeled after the national law, also reiterating hearty support of the national authorities in their efforts to execute the food and drugs act and pledging its members to carry out the provisions of that law and to support the authorities by every means in their power.

THE ELEMENT OF UNIFORMITY IN NATIONAL AND STATE FOOD LAWS.

BY J. Q. EMERY, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Wisconsin,

1. "Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon."

2. "Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up."

3. "Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up."

4. "Then an herald cried out aloud, To you it is commended, O people, nations, and languages."

5. "That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up."

6. "And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace."

You will remember at the time when the people heard the sound of this motley group of musical instruments, they fell down and worshipped that graven image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up, except three Hebrews, Shadrack, Meshack and Abednego, who, disliking that sort of a thing, openly disobeyed the decree of the king and after some discussion with the king finally gave their ultimatum as follows: "Be it known unto thee, oh king, that we will not worship the golden image which thou hast set up."

In the past several months, a cry has been sent forth by a national aggregation of food purveyors, that a golden image of uniformity in national and state food laws should be set up and that we should fall down and worship that image. Whether uniformity in national and state food laws is desirable or not depends upon the character of the uniformity and upon who is affected by the uniformity. If we agree with the statement of Attorney General Bonaparte, approved by the President of the United States, that the object of food legislation is the protection of the great consuming public, then the element of "uniformity" to be regarded as desirable is uniformity in vigor and effectiveness in securing protection to the consuming public against deception and fraud in food products.

But, upon the other hand, if the prime object of food legislation is not to make the way of the transgressor hard, but to remove from the "trade" the "hardships" incident to manufacturing and selling wholesome and honest foods under honest and truthful names, honestly and truthfully labeled, then "uniformity" in food laws is quite another matter. What a wail from the trade has been resounding through the country, as to its "hardships" in meeting the requirements of food laws because of their lack of uniformity!

Of course, from this point of view, the hardships of the consumers who ask and pay for a fish and get a serpent instead, or who ask and pay for bread and get instead a stone, who in other words ask and pay for the genuine and receive instead a counterfeit, are not to be considered.

One of the component parts of the golden image of uniformity that takes the form of a proposed food law, which a national aggregation of food purveyors has sought to foist upon the states, is the so-called guarantee clause. On this feature of a national and state food law, I desire to quote a few statements made by the late Hon H. C. Adams, in his address before this association at its St. Paul meeting, on the subject of "A National Pure Food Law." He said: "The Hepburn bill, the Brosius bill, the McCumber bill and other measures which have been before Congress have provided that any dealer charged with a misdemeanor under such a law, having in his possession a certificate of the genuineness of his goods, given by a wholesaler, manufacturer or jobber, should be acquitted. This one provision would absolutely nullify and destroy the force and effect of any national pure food law that might be passed. * * * * A dealer may be a retailer and he may not be a retailer. He may be a jobber in the city of Chicago. He may be engaged in purchasing food products from New England, storing them in Chicago and shipping them to Wisconsin. He may have the most extensive business in the United States in transporting or causing to be transported food products from state to state and yet if, under the Hepburn bill, or the Brosius bill, or the McCumber bill he presents in any court a certain certificate of the genuineness of his goods, whether that certificate is true or false, he is to be immediately acquitted. A provision of this kind would be the rankest absurdity that was even written into law. It would not dam up the rivers of adulteration—it would simply divert their course."

I believe what Mr. Adams then and there said of that feature of the Hepburn bill, the Brosius bill and the McCumber bill is true, and that it is just as true of the guarantee feature of the present national food law; for the present national law does not provide simply that the dealer establishing a guarantee shall not be convicted, but that he shall not be prosecuted. He shall not be brought into court. Was that change in phraseology made in the interest of the consuming public? Yet we are importuned to embody this feature of food legislation in state food laws for the sake of "uniformity" and for the purpose of freeing dealers from the hardship of prosecution for the sale of adulterated food products. Shall we fall down and worship this golden image which the "trade" has set up?

A bill embodying this feature that was introduced into the Wisconsin legislature at its past session met its just fate in a timely death. We hope that it is buried face downward in a grave so deep that when Gabriel sounds his trumpet, its ears will be deaf to the call and that whatever future digging is done, may be downward and not upward. Does anyone dare contend that such a feature of food legislation has for its purpose the protection of the consuming public against fraud and deception in food products?

This feature of the National Food law is contrary to the usual principles and practices recognized in the ordinary business of life. A man is responsible for what he sells. You sell a piece of land and give to the purchaser a warranty deed. Does the fact that you receive such warranty deed from the man from whom you purchased it release you from the responsibility to the man to whom you sold it, provided that it is proven that the title further back is defective? Certainly not.

I have heard no more apt characterization of this feature of food legislation than that given by Dr. Fisher when he likened it to the shell game of the fakirs at the fairs. You bet that a pea is under some given shell, only to find that it is not under that particular shell, if indeed it be under any of the shells. Under this feature of the national food law, the great government of the United States must go out seeking for the pea under the fakir's shell.

A sells an article of food to B, guaranteeing it to comply with the provisions of the national food act. B sells it to C without guaranteeing it, as he is not liable under the statute, and it must be admitted has not sufficient confidence in the guarantee which he has secured to make him willing to furnish a similar guarantee to his own customer C. C finds the product adulterated. The right of C to prosecute for this sale of adulterated food has been taken away from him by law. He has no redress against B, no matter how deleterious the food may have been. Is this justice? Is this good law? But the law naively says that A shall be amenable to the prosecutions, fines and other penalties which would attach in due course to B under the provisions of that act. Do you believe for a moment that A can be brought into court by C as a vicarious sacrifice for B's doings? I do not believe that there is a court in the United States that will for a moment admit that it has criminal jurisdiction over A in such a case as this. If it were not written in the United States statute it would be regarded as the veriest nonsense. A will be responsible in the court for the unlawful sales that he has made; but he cannot, in my judgment, be brought into court to answer vicariously for the acts committed by B.

D, a wholesaler in Chicago, sells adulterated foods to E, a retailer in Wisconsin. When these adulterated foods sold by D become mixed with the goods of E, the Wisconsin retailer, they are no longer under the jurisdiction of the national law. How then is D to be made amendable to "the prosecutions, fines and other penalties which would attach, in due course," to the retailer? And what does this national aggregation of food purveyors propose to have done in such cases as the one I have last mentioned, in the golden-image-uniform-food-bill which they desire to foist on the states? They propose the terribly drastic act of having the state food officer "report this transaction to the United States Secretary of Agriculture!" Then what terrible thing will happen? So far as I can see, the Secretary of Agriculture will "report" the matter to his lately appointed three commissioners for the enforcement of the national food law. Those commissioners, with a smile on their faces, will investigate the matter and "in due course" "report" to the Secretary of Agriculture that the national law has no jurisdiction over the transactions of the Wisconsin retailer and therefore the Chicago wholesaler is not in such cases "responsible" to any prosecutions, fines or other penalties, because none attaches to the retailer under the national law. And so the whole transaction ends in "reports." The seller of adulterated foods goes unpunished; the consumer, unprotected. How long do you suppose the American people will tolerate such subterfuge, or give it respectful consideration. "You can fool all of the people some of the time and some of the people all of the time; but you can't fool all of the American people all of the time."

A paragraph from an opinion rendered by the New York Court of Appeals, in the earliest days of food legislation in this country, seems pertinent here. "It is notorious that the adulteration of food products has grown to proportions so enormous as to menace the health and safety of the people. Ingenuity keeps pace with greed, and the careless and heedless consumers are subject to increasing perils. To redress such evils is a plain duty, but a difficult task. Experience has taught the lesson, the repressive measures which depend for their efficiency upon proof of the dealers knowledge and of his intent to deceive and defraud, are of little use, and rarely accomplish their purpose. Such an emergency may justify legislation which throws upon the seller the entire responsibility for the purity and soundness of what he sells and compel him to know and be certain."

And such food laws have been sustained by the courts. I quote the following from the Ohio Supreme Court: "The act is not a provision for the punishment of those who sell adulterated food or drugs, because of any supposed turpitude prompting such sales or indicated by them. It is a plan devised by the general assembly to protect the public against the hurtful consequences of the sales of adulterated foods and drugs, those consequences being in no degree increased by the vendor's knowledge or diminished by his ignorance of the adulteration of the articles which he offers for sale." * * * "It was the evident purpose of the general assembly to protect the public against the harmful consequences of the sales of adulterated foods and drugs, and, to the end that its purpose might not be defeated, to require the seller at his peril to know that the article which he offers for sale is not adulterated, or to demand of those from whom he purchases, indemnity against the penalties that may be imposed upon him because of their concealment of the adulteration of the articles."

This is the theory upon which the state food laws have been enacted and enforced. But now we are told that these laws work "a hardship" to the dealers. Probably that has been the intent of the laws to work a hardship on the sale of adulterated, fraudulent or deceptive foods. The tendency of those laws is to break up the traffic in fraudulent foods. If there must be hardship borne by either the consumer or dealers, let the dealers bear it. The way of the transgressor should be made hard.

After specifically providing in the national bill for outlawing "imitations," the national law makers, at the behest of certain "interests," proceeded to adopt a second proviso with certain features directly antagonistic to the first. And that Janus-faced feature of the national law, under the seductive title of uniformity, we are commanded to fall down and worship.

In the St. Paul address to which I have referred, Mr. Adams made the following statement: "A national pure food law should have written into its letter such a specific standard for every food product known as will satisfy the best judgment of this association." But no such feature was embodied in our national law.

In the matter of standards for foods there would seem to be not only an opportunity but a demand for uniformity in national and state law. The notion that there can be any real, genuine uniformity in national and state food laws without uniformity of standard for food products is a delusion and a snare. Flour should mean the same thing in interstate commerce as in the local trade of the retail dealer. The same is true for cheese, milk, cream, vinegar, spices, baking powder, honey, sugar, syrup, coffee, extracts, meats, jellies, lard and so on through the list. But are these trade zealots who are clamoring so loudly for uniformity of national and state laws, making any struggle to secure definite, uniform standards for food products thoroughout the country? Upon the other hand, are they not fighting to the bitter end, with the ferocity of tigers, the efforts of the friends of effective pure food legislation in the country to establish such definite and uniform standards? Ah, here is the rub! Definite and specifically defined standards for food products would make our laws vigorous and effective; but effective laws, would they not work a "hardship to the trade?"

Wisconsin has a law making the standard for food products as latest promulgated by the United States Secretary of Agriculture, the legal standard in all cases arising under Wisconsin law, where other standards are not specifically prescribed by state law. But under the bland plea for uniformity, Wisconsin would be asked to repeal this effective law and adopt an impotent one, without standards.

Some of our states have specific laws forbidding the sale of foods containing certain specified preservatives or antiseptics. Wisconsin is one of those states. Such a statute can be effectively enforced. It furnishes protection to the consumers; but under the shibboleth of uniformity, we are asked to have these effective laws repealed and in their stead laws enacted that deal in glittering generalities, and whose enforcement is thereby made extremely difficult, if not impossible; and all this, under a seductive plea for "uniformity."

Another feature of the national law, which it is proposed to use as a constituent part of this golden image of uniformity, is the cumbersome procedure prescribed for the administration of that law. This law puts its administration in much the same attitude as was the national army under Halleck in its movement from Shiloh to Corinth. Grant says, "It was a siege from start to close." And this feature of the national law seems to have adopted Halleck's motto in that movement: "Don't bring on an engagement. It is better to retreat than fight."

One of the purposes of this feature of the national law appears to be to provide legal means whereby the "consulting chemist" who concocted the formula for the adulterated stuff may be afforded the opportunity to analyze it and then swear upon the witness stand that it is unadulterated. "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib."

Permit me to quote the following from Mr. Adam's St. Paul address to which I have before referred: "The highest art in defeating laws is to draw them with much cunning ingenuity that while bearing a fair countenance, they shall carry in every line and section the seeds of disaster in the courts." Certain features of the national law are not wanting in "such cunning ingenuity." Yet the golden-image-uniformity-bill which it is proposed to foist on the states has every one of those features.

Because the open and secret enemies of vigorous and effective food legislation may have succeeded in introducing some weak, ineffective or untried element into the national food law, should the states that for years have been enacting and enforcing food laws abandon strong and effective features of their own laws and adopt instead the less vigorous or effective features of the national law because, forsooth, those features of the state law work a "hardship" on the trade? If the end sought by food legislation is to remove "hardships" from the trade, then why not repeal all food laws—state and national? The fact is that the friends of pure food laws accepted the present national law upon the theory that half a loaf is better than no loaf.

I am in favor of such uniform national and state food laws as can be made to comprise the strongest and most vigorous features of present state and national laws, enacted with the purpose and with the effect of protecting the consuming public against adulteration and fraud, without imposing any hardships on the trade not necessary to the accomplishment of that purpose. But I am opposed to that uniformity in national and state food laws which comes only to relieve the trade from hardship, by writing into those laws the weakest and least effective features of present laws with "such cunning ingenuity," that while "bearing a fair countenance," they carry the elements of disaster to the consuming public. Be it known unto thee, oh king, that we will not fall down and worship such a golden image of uniformity.

If there is a serious desire to enact and enforce effective food laws for the purpose of protecting the consuming public against adulterated or fraudulent foods, let us not hasten to inject into existing state laws, either by amendments or re-enactments, any of the weak and defective features of the national law under the clamor for uniformity. Let us wait until it has been shown what features of the national law can be effectively enforced and what protection can be thereby given the consuming public. Let us wait until the questionable features in the national law have been judicially determined. When uniformity comes let it be upon a higher and not upon a lower plane of protection to consumers.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products. shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all of the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST.
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Approved:
N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. (Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION. SUPPLEMENT No. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and Fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and health condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

PUBLISHED FOR GRATUITOUS DISTRIBUTION—EDITION LIMITED TO 25,000 COPIES.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and joining states who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including September 15, 1907,

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

A JEKYLL AND HYDE AFFAIR.

Some days ago one of the agents of the division undertook to purchase samples of the ice cream sold in the city of Altoona. It was known to the dealers that he was procuring their goods in his official capacity. In some of the establishments patronized by him he was blandly informed by the proprietor that the article he was receiving was "Frozen Compound," no ice cream being on sale apparently. Having a shrewd suspicion that the "Frozen Compound" did not always bear that law-complying name, the agent employed a woman a few days later to make the rounds of the same places. The same quality of frozen mixture sold the agent as "Frozen Compound" was sold the woman as "genuine ice cream."

The "ice cream" was immediately placed in the hands of Dr. Frear, of State College, chemist of the department, and also president of the Food Standards Commission acting under the authority of the government of the United States. Should his analysis show that the goods measure up to the standard of purity by the State of Pennsylvania all will be well. Should he learn, however, that the law has been violated, prosecutions will follow and those who have been trying to evade the Act of Assembly will be punished. There does not seem to be any reason why they should not be.

It may be true, it doubtless is true, that the craze of the consumer for the cheapest possible articles of food and drink is largely responsible for the reprehensible conduct of some manufacturers and dealers. The public demand for cheapness must be satisfied, think the vendors. Hence the production of an inferior brand of goods. It is quite true that genuine ice cream cannot be sold at the prices current in many establishments these days. It is likewise true that the purchaser who is not willing to pay a fair price encourages substitution and adulteration. He tempts the manufacturer and the retailer. Too often they fall. The head of the family should be a better citizen, a better husband and father than that. He may well take the attitude that his wife and children are entitled to the best goods in the market, even if he does have to pay a little more.

Manufacturers and dealers, too, should pray to be delivered from the power of temptation. It is good for a business man as well as for a private citizen to be tempted. It tries and tests him. If he refuses to permit temptation to have dominion over his conduct it strengthens and ennobles him. Men are worth nothing until they have been tried. In business life as in the religious and the political realms, those only achieve permanent success who give everybody with whom they come in contact a square deal. Nothing is more clearly established by the history of individual men and women who have become great and famous by simply declining to play the deceiver in any relation of life. It is best to tell the simple truth all the time.

ANTISEPTICS IN TOMATO CATSUP.

FLOYD W. ROBISON.

The discussion of antiseptics in tomato catsup for all practical purposes may be limited to Salicylic and Benzoic acids and their sodium salts and indeed, lately may be confined almost exclusively to Benzoic acid and its sodium salt. This is true at least, so far as the Michigan market is concerned and I see no reason why the Michigan market should differ in this respect from that of any other State.

Of all food products into which preservation enters, it is usually agreed by those favoring its use that there is the greatest excuse for its employment in tomato catsup. Certain it is that this product is the one first mentioned by the manufacturer in his endeavor to establish a firm foundation for the use of preservatives.

Whatever ingredients are permitted to enter into food products it is generally conceded by scientists that an article, preservative, or other foreign substance should never be added except the food product is improved or made edible by such addition. In this connection I may be pardoned for quoting at length from an address given by Dr. V. C. Vaughan of the Michigan University before the International Pure Food Congress in St. Louis. "The experiments that have been made upon Saccharine are contradictory, and until it has been abundantly proved that Saccharine is not harmful, it certainly should not be used. Now here is a substance which everybody admits is not a food, and as it is taken into the body and passes through the body unchanged, it does not furnish us with any energy at all; we are not able to do any more work with it than we are without it. Now it is a serious question with all things of this kind whether they can pass through the body without doing the body harm. The kidneys are doing some work, and they are doing the work of excreting a thing which has been of no service to the body whatever, and it is fair to presume in all of these cases that a substance that is of no good to the body and which the organs of absorption of the body must take in and which the other organs must cast out, is harmful to the body because it is throwing upon both sets of organs work which does not add one iota to the energy or strength of the body and it is fair to presume at the very start that those things are harmful, and until Saccharine is absolutely shown to be harmless it should not be administered or allowed in any food."

Acknowledging the above position to be a sane one, and I have quoted it simply because it is the position taken by the leading physiological chemists of the world and applies in the main with particular force to preservative agents, it then becomes the privilege of the people to demand that before a preservative shall be used in a food, its harmlessness, to say the least, must be established beyond the shadow of a doubt. In plainer language the burden of proof must rest upon the manufacturer and not upon the people. It manifestly makes a great difference in protecting the interests of the consumer whether the burden of proof rests upon the people or upon the manufacturer. The statute should read, not that foreign products in food products may be condemned if they are injurious, but that they shall not be allowed unless they are non-injurious. With the burden of proof resting upon the manufacturer where it properly belongs, the people are compelled to show, simply, that any article of food contains a substance foreign to it when pure, and on this finding alone it becomes condemned unless the manufacturers furnish proof beyond the rebuttal of the people that the article in question is non-injurious to the public health.

In the winter of 1905 and 1906 the Michigan Dairy and Food Department took up the study of the question of harmlessness of preservatives and the subject has been under study since that date. The lack of a national food law at that time made such experimental work imperative, especially in view of the activity of certain interests to commit the state to some decisive stand favorable to the use of preservatives. This work while undertaken from a different standpoint than the elaborate experiments of the United States Bureau of Chemistry, is furnishing data of untold value. The subject is being studied in the following manner:

1. Is the preservative dissolved and absorbed by the body fluids? —Animal Experiments.

2. If absorbed, has the preservative any detrimental effect on the body fluids?

A. Does the absorbed preservative have any retarding effect on the action of the digestive agents in the body?

B. Is the preservative in the strength wherein there is no appreciable retarding effect in reality a preservative?

C. What will be the effect of feeding to young animals for a long period of time in the food such a quantity of a preservative as has been shown is the least quantity that will act as a preservative and possibly as A. above has shown is the greatest quantity that has no retarding influence on digestion.

The above is the problem.

We have shown in a thorough experiment on dogs conducted through one winter that Salicylic acid, Benzoic acid, Sodium Benzoate, Sodium Sulfite, Formaldehyde, Borax and Boric acid are all dissolved by the body fluids and are eliminated largely in the urine as was expected. Salicylic acid and Sodium Benzoate exert retarding influences upon the digestive fluids clearly in the concentration of 1 to 1000. Sodium Benzoate short of a concentration of 1 to 200 is not a complete preservative and in that concentration its retarding effect upon digestion is very marked, indeed, and this brings me to the main point that I shall dwell upon in this paper, although not at great length.

The preservative that is to be employed in tomato catsup must be used in sufficient quantities to insure its acting as a perfect and complete preservative. It so happens that the problem greatest to the manufacturer in the preparation of tomato catsup is not the one most serious to the consumer. The former's object is to get the product upon the market in such a condition that its saleability is not destroyed by fermentations, etc. For the consumer, it is far better that the catsup should ferment and thus not be consumed by him than that an unwholesome, unclean product be taken into his system. It is true that aside from the moulds that get into the product, the organisms that cause tomato catsup to ferment are the consumer's best indicators of the lack of proper sanitary precautions having been taken in the manufacture of the product. To render them temporarily inactive by the employment of a preservative in quantities below complete sterilization is to remove the warning signal which is the consumer's best guide.

The use of Sodium Benzoate in the strength of 1 to 1000 does not render the catsup much less liable to transmit disease. It does, however, retard the souring and acts as the manufacturer's friend at the consumer's expense. If Sodium Benzoate is to be used as a preservative in tomato catsup it must be used in quantities greater than 1 to 500. In fact my experiments indicate that there is not complete inactivity of the organisms above 1 to 200 and even in this concentration the organisms are not destroyed. Probably a 1 per cent. concentration would be as low as could safely be relied upon in all cases and the preservative if used should be employed in this strength. The real problem to be studied then it is not what is the effect of 5-100 per cent. Sodium Benzoate or 1-10 per cent. Sodium Benzoate upon the human system, but what effect has 5-10 per cent. or 1 per cent. of the preservative.

This question is easily answered as to the influence of Salicylic acid and Sodium Benzoate—the two catsup preservatives—on digestion in vitro. One per cent. Salicylic acid and one per cent. Sodium Benzoate each completely inhibits gastric digestion, and a corresponding retarding influence is noticeable as low as 1 to 2000.

What the effect on young animals or on human subjects of feeding preservatives mentioned in quantities that conform to the requirements mentioned above, I am not prepared at this time to state. From analogy I should expect to find quite decided results if continued for a period of some length. Certain it is that based on my present knowledge my vote would be assuredly unfavorable to the preservatives mentioned. The situation as it appears to me at present is in part not at all unlike the pasteurization of milk as I view that operation and its effect on the product.

Another point which we are compelled to take cognizance of is the effect of the employment of the preservative (quantity not considered here) on the grade or quality of the tomato catsup itself. Who of us have not seen the tomato catsup bottle on the lunch counter, which, if not liberally supplied with preservatives, could not have remained there ten hours. This is, of course, the dealers' and venders' problem in this instance, but the unnatural condition of the product makes possible filthy and unsanitary conditions all along the lines and here again it is the safety of the consumer and not the expedient of the producer that must be catered to.

From my experiments thus far, I must condemn Salicylic acid and Sodium Benzoate in tomato catsup. The remedy, complete sterilization, in what manner it is not my function to explain, nor would I be justified in spending time on that phase of the problem, but the consumer must be protected in these matters with firmness and certainty, but gentlemen, not with malice. And our experience teaches us that when the manufacturer becomes convinced (and we mean to convince him) of the sincerity of our efforts and the entire nonprejudiced outline and prosecution of our experimental work with what I know will be business-like, sane application thereof, the manufacturer and producer will not be the last to give it his sanction and support.

FOOD ADULTERATIONS.

The following excerpts from an interesting and valuable publication, entitled "Foods That Are Drugged," from the pen of Dr. L. E. Landone, indicate the extent to which food adulteration is indulged in by apparently conscienceless manufacturers. They also make plain the necessity for the exercise of care by the housekeeper in the replenishing of her larder.

"Milk is often adulterated to increase the quantity, to thicken it and the cream, to color it, to increase its weight, to sweeten the watered milk and to prevent it fermenting or souring. Water is used to increase the quantity. Many milk powders are on the market for the purpose of thickening. None of these, so far as analyzed, contain the full proportion of each and all elements of the milk. One substance is made up largely of brain matter. Another is 'Agar,' made from the jelly of the sea algae. A substance made up largely of sugar and calcium oxide is sold for this purpose. 'Grossen' is used in cream thickening. Corn starch and talcs are also used. Annato, anilin orange, caramel, tumeric, saffron, carotin and coal tar colors are used for coloring. Salicylic acid, benzoic acid, carbonate and bicarbonate of soda, boric acid and formaldehyde are used as preservatives. 'Ice-line,' 'Preservaline' and 'Freezine' are liquid preparations on the market containing from 2 to 7 per cent. of formaldehyde." The infant suffers greatly from adulterated milk. Borax and formaldehyde are poisonous substitutes for cold and cleanliness. N. E. Jaffa of the University of California, found 55 per cent. of all cows of the 86 dairies along the C. N. & N. S. R. R. afflicted with one ailment or another.

Olive oil is very much adulterated. Pure olive oil contains 30 per cent. of solid fat. The amount of free fatty acids is about 1½ per cent. in the pure olive oil, while in the adulterated olive oil this harmful element often forms 25 per cent. of the oil fluid.

The adulterants used are cottonseed oil, arachis oil, sesame, sunflower, corn, rape, poppyseed and peanut oil, lard, curcas oil, fish oil, castor oil and petroleum. Some of the foreign brands contain as high as 15 to 25 per cent. of cheap castor oils. Of the "pure imported" olive oil, I think there is not one that contains more than 10 per cent. olive oil and most of them do not even contain 4 per cent.

The official reports issued from the Department of Agriculture at Washington show that in testing 65 different brands of imported olive oil, not one was free from adulteration, though purporting to be pure olive oil. One contained no olive oil.

Of the 600 varieties exhibited at the Paris exhibition only a few contained 10 per cent. of olive oil; most brands contained from 1 to 4 per cent. and some not a particle of olive oil.

WHY NOT BE PERFECTLY TRUTHFUL?

The conduct of those Altoona dealers who sold an agent of the Dairy and Food Division "Frozen Compound" out of the same can from which a private customer obtained a supply of "genuine ice cream," suggests a reflection or two. It is perfectly evident that a vendor of food products who acts in that way has abandoned the valuable principle of business honesty and is not only liable to prosecution and punishment, but likewise to a steady and continued decrease of custom. Even the person who wants to pay the least possible price is apt to get angry and decline to have anything more to do with a dealer who tells him one story about an article and tries to square himself by telling a State Agent another.

The fact is a storekeeper should treat the agent of the Dairy and Food Division who calls upon him precisely as he would treat a private customer. Agents should not be compelled to resort to detective methods to obtain the truth about goods sold by any merchant. They are certain to do that if no other alternative presents itself. The result is usually disastrous to the dealer. The very fact that he undertakes to deceive the agent is evidence against him. If he had nothing to conceal he would be glad to show his whole hand at once. It pays to be absolutely fair and truthful in business as in other departments of human activity. This is a truth taught by the example and enforced by the counsel of the world's successful business men.

There is no reason why the Dairy and Food Division and the storekeeper should not work hand in hand. The former exists to help the honest dealer as well as to execute the food laws of the State. The latter is in business to make money, of course, but he also has an interest in his reputation as a business man and he wants to treat the people right. Under the circumstances he should treat the agents of the Division as friends, not foes. This Division is not going about with a microscope to its eye looking for chances to prosecute grocers and others. Its head would be glad if matters so arranged themselves as to put an end to all prosecutions. And that ideal hour will arrive whenever everybody engaged in the sale of articles of food and drink is scrupulously fair and honest.

The existing act regulating the sale of foods in this Commonwealth was intended to protect the retailer from vexatious and burdensome prosecutions. It was held that since he did not manufacture the goods he sold, as a rule, it was grossly unjust to hale him into court, convict him of selling adulterated goods and compel him to pay a heavy fine and the costs when he probably made an honest effort to obtain pure articles and was the victim of an unscrupulous manufacturer. A goodly number of persons shared that view. It was held that the grocer was a badly treated individual in Pennsylvania. So the law was changed—many persons think very unwisely—the purpose being to give the grocer a chance to protect himself from prosecution.

The dealer who complies with the provisions of the Act of Assembly and observes the rules laid down by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, is in no danger of prosecution. If he obtains the guarantee provided for in the act, he is completely protected. Under such circumstances he should be upon terms of the most complete friendship with the Dairy and Food Division and its agents. He should welcome the visits of the agent; should be entirely frank with him, giving him all the information in his possession and helping to hasten the day when the sale of adulterated goods in Pennsylvania will be unknown. Courtesy and kindness toward the officers of the State are valuable elements of the successful grocer's character.

BUSINESS EXPERT POINTS THE WAY.

At the recent annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania, held in the city of York, Joseph H. Appel, advertising manager for John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, delivered an address on the "Master Merchant," which bristled with good points. From the report printed by the York Dispatch the following sentences are selected. The business man who heeds them, studies them—tries to embody them in his life and in the conduct of his business is pretty certain to win a large degree of success:

The ideal busy man is he who has nothing on his desk but a clean blotter and an American Beauty rose. He is always ready to attend to business.

Never be in a hurry; it is only the busy man who can never afford to be in a hurry.

Discretion, diplomacy and tact are great intellectual assets. Tact in the way we manage our employes and our customers. Tact in sizing up the market and manufacturer. Tact in advertising.

It is said America is now producing the greatest diplomats of the age. It is the business of America that is producing these diplomats.

Enterprise and progressiveness show in every piece of goods that you buy. They show in the way you display your goods.

Change your displays and stock frequently. Put on a new front daily. Rearrange your goods. If you cannot always be getting in new merchandise, as the great store can, you can at least change the old goods about to make them look new.

Have plenty of signs about the store and keep them fresh and bright both in appearance and wording.

Be fair.

Have only one price.

Don't substitute.

Orderliness begets system.

Don't permit wrong or misleading labels.

Mark prices in plain figures large enough to read. People want to know prices. They like to look around before they purchase. Place goods where they can be handled. A woman likes to sell herself a thing.

Now, all these virtues—these attributes of right living, physically and mentally—lead up to character. And character is the backbone of store keeping.

The character that you build up in the community is your greatest asset in business.

The man who sands his sugar or waters his milk or gives an inferior substitute to his customers in place of an advertised article that is better—may know that he is doing wrong morally, but he doesn't realize the commercial value of doing right.

Guarantee everything you sell, if possible. If certain things cannot be guaranteed because of perishability—then clearly say so.

Take back goods that prove unsatisfactory.

Avoid exaggerations of the merit of an article or its value.

Peter Cooper carried fairness so far that he gave up the selling of cigars because he thought them harmful to people.

The great Lincoln once walked three miles to a customer's house after he closed his store to refund money that had been overpaid in error.

Justice, honesty and honor, of course, are all a species of fairness.

Robert Morris once asked John Morton, the first president of the Bank of North America, for money to help Washington cross the Delaware. Morton asked on what security. Morris replied, "My note and my honor." Morton, though a Quaker and conscientiously opposed to using money for war purposes, replied, "Robert, thou shalt have it."

John Jacob Astor once said to Thomas Jefferson: "All honorable business must be such as to entitle it to government protection."

Orderliness is simply a law of nature and must have a place in business.

Systematize, but don't tie yourself up with red tape. Don't import a system wholesale. Study out one for yourself.

A desk cluttered with papers, a store cluttered with old goods, and a brain cluttered with cobwebs—all belong to the same man.

What good are memoranda that you forget all about? What good are ideas that you have forgotten? What good is merchandise tucked away under the counter or in corners of the stock room, if the public does not know it is there?

Faith, hope and charity are the mainspring of optimism. And optimism has a leading place in business.

To look up, not down—that is faith.

To look ahead, not behind—that is hope.

To look out, not in—that is charity.

Instead of fretting or fuming when trade is bad and drumming the desk with your knuckles and pulling out your hair—all of which consumes your nerve force—analyze the situation and plan to overcome it. If after due consideration you find you cannot better things, accept the situation and cut down expenses.

Never be a discouraged man. "Take your bumps on the bias," or better still, cultivate elasticity, and catch yourself on the rebound. "Let every knock be a boost," as Hubbard says.

Keep faith. Remember that everybody in town knows you and feels that you are personally responsible for everything you sell. "We make money out of our friends, not our enemies."

Have faith.

Have faith in your own town. Help make it grow. Opportunities are at our very door.

They tell a story in the east of the discovery of the diamond mines of Golconda. Al Hafed lived on a beautiful estate in Persia. He was wealthy because he was contented. One evening an old priest sat by Al Hafed's fireside and told him of the wonders of the world. How the rocks were made by cooling quickly, how copper was made by cooling more slowly, and how silver and gold originated. And then he told him that the first beams of sunlight that condensed on the world's surface were changed into diamonds. Al Hafed went to bed a poor man that night because he was discontented—he wanted those diamonds. The next day he started out to find them, sold his farm, gave up his home, traveled all over the world, came back broken down in health and spirit—only to find that his successor on the farm had discovered diamonds right at his own hearth stone.

Dr. Conwell shows so plainly in his "Acres of Diamonds," that the place to get rich is right where you are—at home.

The bee sets a great example for the man striving to be a master merchant. With every drop of honey that the bee brings into its hive it writes in letters of gold these words: "Ambition and self-sacrifice. Construction and reciprocity. Industry and co-operation. Progressiveness and mutality."

They have a philosophy in India—the Yogi philosophy—which teaches this: Kill off ambition, but live as those ambitious. That is, be ambitious to develop yourself for the good of all. Advance yourself, but sacrifice yourself.

How well the bee teaches this lesson! The 40,000 bees in a hive labor incessantly to store up honey—for themselves? No, for posterity—for the race. When the hive is stocked with food they swarm away and begin again their labors, leaving the honey for their yet unborn children.

Industry and co-operation.

As far back as Plato they had the idea of specializing and of co-operation. In Plato's "Republic" he says: "More will be done and better and with greater ease when everyone does but one thing, according to his genius, at the proper time and when free from all other pursuits.

"The peculiar characteristic of civilized beings," says John Stuart Mill, "is co-operation."

The individual may lose in general capacity in doing one thing well, but society gains by specializing and co-operation.

Constructiveness and reciprocity.

Build up yourself—but help your neighbor, also.

Progressiveness and mutuality.

Make money, if you will, but help those who help you to make money, as well.

There are three parties to every business transaction—the employer, the employe and the customer. The interests of all are mutual.

The merchant is no more than an agent for the people.

Building up a trade means merely that his customers have commissioned him to buy for them.

Keeping store for the good of the community is keeping store for your own good as well.

It was Peter Cooper's boast that he never made money at other people's expense. He would not invest in anything that was not a profit to others connected with it.

George Williams, the eminent London merchant, gives this formulary: "Energy and enterprise, directed by prudence, caution and wisdom; determination to get on, combined with ability to look forward; the first principle of dealing conscientiously and in a straightforward way with all customers, and a kind and generous treatment of employes.

"When selfishness has given way to generosity," says Clarke, and perfect love has cast out fear, then all this shows itself in that equipoise of soul which we call good temper or equanimity.

Selfishness is the root of all sin. We are all brothers and we must live for each other. We are all part of the divine and we must some day all reunite in the divine.

Anger is actual heat, scientists now tell us. It burns up our energy. Two to one in all things against the angry man.

Hate is actual cold. It shrivels up the soul—it shrivels up you.

Equanimity—the control of one's self.

Co-operation—the working together for the good of all.

Mutuality—the reciprocity which involves self-sacrifice of both sides.

These form a trinity without which no business can long endure.

The way to get the most happiness in storekeeping is to serve all as well as you can. You will serve yourself better for serving others. Work for the good of all and you work for yourself. Work for yourself alone and you shrivel up and die.

Success in business is not the financial reward; not the piling up of great fortunes; not the rearing of great buildings.

The test of all success is this: What sort of man are you making out of yourself?

The test of a business man is this: Are you doing all you can to become the master merchant?

Let one thing more be emphasized: It is what we think and what we do that makes us what we are. The vision that you glorify in your mind, the ideal that you enthrone in your heart—this you will build your life by, this you will become.

CONCERNING PREPARED MUSTARD.

One firm engaged in the manufacture and sale of mustard complained about the rule which requires that prepared mustard shall bear on the label thereof a distinct statement of all the ingredients with the percentage of mustard contained therein. But this rule requires no manufacturer to give any of his trade secrets away. While the names of the various ingredients must be given, the quantity is not required. The percentage of mustard used must be given, but surely that is a piece of information to which the purchaser is entitled and it can do the manufacturer no harm, nor the vender either.

The truth is, this rule was brought into existence through statements made by two Washington county merchants who were on a grand jury that considered some milk prosecutions brought in that county. They complained to the agent of the division that a merchant in their neighborhood was selling a quart Mason jar of prepared mustard for 10 cents, whereas the ordinary price of pure mustard is 10 cents a glass. Besides the remarkable price the enterprising merchant was presenting each purchaser of mustard with a glass dish as a premium. They held that they couldn't compete with a man like that and wanted to know if something could not be done to protect the honest dealer and the purchaser. This led to the formulation of the rule which is perfectly fair and just to all concerned.

The theory of the Dairy and Food Division is that the Act of Assembly contemplates the protection of the consumer from unscrupulous manufacturers. It likewise means that the man who purchases mustard shall obtain mustard. The most effective way to promote this aim of the law is to insist upon the observance of the rule which has been complained of. It may prevent the sale of cheap sham mustard, but it will promote the public health and tend to the increase of common honesty.

ABOUT JELLIES, BUTTERS AND JAMS.

That section of Rule 7 of the Rules and Regulations prepared by the Dairy and Food Commission under the provisions of Section 3 of the Act of June 1, 1907, relating to jellies, etc., is as follows:

"Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit, unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure fruit jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used thereon to indicate its flavor."

There has been some criticism of the above rule. And yet it seems to be perfectly fair and proper. What is its chief aim? Surely the protection of the consuming public against deception. It simply undertakes to prevent the application of a good name to a doubtful article. It is in entire harmony with the policy of the Division which steadfastly seeks to so interpret the Act of Assembly as to require such branding or labeling of goods as will enable the intending buyer to perceive at once whether he is getting a genuine fruit jelly, butter or jam, made of the single fruit whose name it bears, or whether he is getting a mixture, compounded of divers ingredients.

If a jelly, a jam or a butter be made of a single fruit and sugar alone, the rule permits and requires that that fact be plainly set forth on the label. Substitutes for the pure article must state distinctly that they are substitutes. In addition to that the name of the various articles or ingredients contained therein must be set forth on the label in plain letters. What's wrong about that? Have not you a right to know precisely what you are buying when you patronize the grocer?

What is the motive back of the criticism of the rule? Why should an honest manufacturer of jellies, butters and jams object to taking his customers completely into his confidence? If he made apple jelly out of nothing but apples and sugar, should he not be pleased at the opportunity of labeling the article so as to exhibit the truth conspicuously? If he make a composite jelly, using a number of ingredients he should not want to style that compound apple jelly. It isn't anything of the sort and it is the right of the consuming public to know the truth. The consumer may prefer the compound because it is cheaper than the pure article or because there is something about the flavor which he admires. But he has just as much right to be told the difference between the two as he has to be told that oleomargerine is not butter, no matter how much it may resemble butter.

The truth is, the Bulletin believes the rule under discussion is one of the best and most wholesome of the lot. The people of this country are increasingly insisting upon getting at the bottom of things. They are convinced that publicity is the cure for many evils that have crept into our social and business life. They believe the formula for jellies and butters and jams and similar articles should be made public. They are getting a bit suspicious of the person who objects to publicity. They feel that a lover of darkness in these days when everybody who amounts to anything is demanding more light is one whose actions will bear watching. They prefer to patronize in increasing numbers those who put their heart and their consciences into their business and who are too honorable to stoop to deceit. He would be a phenomenally foolish business man who would undertake to make progress against this increasingly swift current of righteous public sentiment. That is the opinion of the rule makers; that is why the rule exists and why it will be enforced.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The National Provisioner calls attention to the fact that after October 1, under the provisions of the National Meat Inspection Act, only approved trade labels without stickers shall be affixed to meats and meat food products. Up to that date packers will be permitted to use their old labels in connection with stickers. Afterwards there will be a single label. It must contain the true name of the product; the true name of the manufacturer (if given); the true name of the place of manufacture (if given); and the inspection legend "U. S. Inspected and Passed under the Act of June 30, 1906," with the establishment number in plain characters of uniform size, separately and prominently displayed, but on the same label. The use of the name of manufacturer or place of manufacture is not required, but if given must be the true name.

If the health of the people is promoted by a meat diet then the situation in England should begin to improve. The English Board of Agriculture has just made public a report in which, among other things, it says:

"The greatest relative increase in food importations has taken place in imports of meat, of which we consume twice as much per head as we did less than twenty years ago. This is especially significant in view of the fact that there is no evidence of any diminution in the home supplies of meat. The consumption of imported bread stuffs has increased in a much less degree, notwithstanding the reduction of home supplies. The figures appear to suggest that the proportion of meat to bread in the national dietary has substantially increased, or, in other words, that the average standard of living has risen.

An enterprising inventor out in Wisconsin tells the public that he has discovered in a waste product of the paper mills a preparation which will preserve ice indefinitely. The compound, it is said, can be manufactured at a cost of 47 cents for 1,000 gallons, and housekeepers can buy a cake of ice, coat it with the preparation, and need not trouble the ice man again all summer. The National Provisioner raises a disturbing doubt in the minds of its readers when it adds this comment to the foregoing: "What will happen to the food if the ice never melts is not stated."

The best merchants, the ones the public care most about trusting, are those who tell the absolute truth about the goods they handle. No matter how great the temptation they never undertake to palm off an inferior article for the genuine. If their patrons want the cheapest articles in the market they may furnish them, but they let the facts be known. They say: "Here's two articles. They probably resemble each other so closely that the inexperienced customer could not tell the difference between the two. One is considerably higher-priced than the other. It will be guaranteed to be precisely what it purports to be—a first class article. The other is not poisonous or injurious to health, but inasmuch as it is cheaper it is just that much inferior in actual quality. Under such circumstances nobody is deceived and if the buyer chooses the cheaper goods he alone is responsible.

The householder can do much to aid the work of the State's agents in enforcing the pure food laws if he only will. He must not encourage the manufacture and sale of inferior goods. And that he may not do that he must not insist upon the cheapest possible products. Cheapness is all very well in its way; we should all be economical. But there is a rage for cheapness which does almost infinite harm.

The average grocery store is almost always capable of a little improvement. There are not many perfect groceries. Perhaps, if you are in the retail business, yours is one. Let us hope so. But a goodly number of the purveyors of food to the public will increase their own self-respect and add to the comfort of their customers by exercising that unceasing diligence which is essential to perfect cleanliness. There are lots of opportunities for infection during the warmer months, especially.

Very greatly increased attention is now devoted to the preparation and shipment of milk, as well as to its care after it reaches the home of the consumer, as compared with former practices. Considering its importance as a food for young and old, especially the former, this is a long step in the right direction.

The conscientious manufacturer is in business because he wishes to make his way in the world. But that is not the chief end of his being. He covets a reputation for the production of superior goods. There are many firms of that sort in the country. For obvious reasons they cannot be particularly referred to by the Bulletin. But it is not improper to remark, in a general way, that the example they set is very worthy of wide-spread imitation.

The retail dealer's customers should never forget to give him a word of encouragement when he furnishes them with first class goods. They owe it to him and to themselves. Most men and women appreciate a kindly and an encouraging word. It often encourages them in well-doing and inspires them to do better. Few of us are so constituted that applause does not stimulate us to better work and the adoption of a higher standard for our daily performances. There is a morality of the grocery trade, too.

With the dairyman and the grocer both taking particular pains to do the right thing by their customers, the secret of good health will be discovered when householders are also particularly careful to do the same. Thus food of whatever kind should be prepared just before eating, pains being taken to have it fresh, clean and properly cooked.

Meals should be prepared at regular hours and the food removed from the table when the meal is over. Food left on the table or in exposed places attracts flies and insects which poison it and carry disease from house to house. It is pretty certain that if householders take pains to observe the laws of sanitation they will get a great deal more benefit out of the food purchased from grocers and dairymen who are observing the food law of the State.

It makes one feel unhappy when one notices that a dealer or a manufacturer is sour about an act of the legislature which seeks simply the protection of the health of the people and to guard them against deception. These objects are both extremely commendable and ought to receive general support and obedience. Obedience to law is occasionally a little inconvenient, but it's a great conscience-tranquilizer. Beside that, it has brought more than one manufacturer or vender independent fortune. A man's good name is worth a large sum after he has acquired it by careful and upright action. Integrity is a business asset of great worth.

It's an unhealthy and a dangerous habit to leave garbage, scraps of meat or vegetable, fruit or piece of bread, or any refuse lie on the dining room or kitchen table for any time. All such leavings should be immediately removed from the table after each meal and either burned or put in tightly covered garbage cans.

The situation in Pennsylvania may not be all that is desired, but it is an undoubted fact that the people are being much better served in the way of food than formerly. After the legislature has enacted a bill providing for the punishment of venders of unfit and impure beverages matters will be pretty nearly right.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust has been much pleased during his visits to various sections of the State to discover upon the part of dealers everywhere an earnest desire to comply with the law. Such a condition of affairs must result in general satisfaction all around.

Even although adulteration may sometimes be accomplished without danger to the purchaser or consumer, yet it doesn't seem right or fair to deceive the public. Men and women who order an article have the right to expect exactly what they order. That is one argument against adulteration that is simply unanswerable from the standpoint of the square deal.

Some dealers in New York are in a state of mind over a recent decision which imposes a penalty for the sale of eggs which have lost their first youth. It is said that the law is being enforced relentlessly in some quarters and without discrimination, causing considerable hardship to dealers who claim to have been innocent of any intention of violating the law.

Pure butter is a commodity which is extremely popular with a great many consumers. When it doesn't happen to be exactly pure sentiments other than pious occassionally crop to the surface. Every manufacturer of butter should strive to secure and retain a reputation for making butter that will always command a first class price and that because all who use it are its constant and enthusiastic friends.

Elsewhere will be found the very valuable paper on "Antiseptics in Tomato Catsup," read before the Jamestown convention of State and National Food Departments on June 17, by Professor Floyd W. Robison, State Chemist of Michigan. Particular attention is directed to this paper, not only on account of the deserved eminence of its author, but, also, because it deals with a matter of the utmost importance not only to the manufacturer, but also to the consumer. Dr. Robison treats the topic in a very conservative and careful manner. He is forced to the conclusion by his investigations that the preservatives commonly used in tomato catsup are injurious to health. He also believes—and the consuming public will certainly agree with him—that before a manufacturer is permitted to use any article as a preservative he should be compelled to prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that the said article is not injurious to health in any way. Dr. Robison is also convinced that the manufacturers of the country—at least those who are governed by a high sense of honor, will also take his view of the matter. It will not do to make experiments upon the digestive organs of human beings. The Bulletin commends Dr. Robison's paper to the careful attention of its readers. He has given the subject under consideration masterly treatment.

Considerable space is given to extracts from the remarkable paper read by Joseph H. Appel, before the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania, August 21. This paper should be studied by every merchant in Pennsylvania. Merchants should likewise call the attention of their clerks and other employes to it and induce them to study its suggestions. If the principles outlined therein could be brought into universal practice there would be a marvelous leveling up in the retail mercantile business.

If every retail merchant in Pennsylvania would purchase his goods after the plan pursued by the Retail Merchants' Association of Philadelphia, through its secretary, William Smedley, there would be no prosecutions and the trade and the public would be well served. Mr. Smedley is the purchasing agent for about 750 retail firms in Philadelphia. He always lays down the rules prepared by the Dairy and Food Commissioner under Section 3 of the new law when confronted by an agent and says: "Do your goods comply with the requirements of these rules? If they do I am ready to do business. If not you can sell me no goods." Recently a firm making and selling prepared mustard objected to the rule covering prepared mustards, on the ground that it should not be compelled to disclose the percentage of mustard in the preparation. Mr. Smedley declared that the rule was perfectly fair and added that if the firm wanted to sell any mustard to the merchants whom he represented it would have to comply with the Act of Assembly. He added that the formula should be printed in plain type so that everyone could see and understand just what ingredients the preparation contained. No man in Pennsylvania is doing more to compel manufacturers to comply with the rules of the Dairy and Food Division than Mr. William Smedley. Such service as he is rendering counts continually and forcefully in the right direction.

The Bulletin repeats that it exists for the benefit of the merchants of Pennsylvania and their patrons. It wishes to be useful in a practical way and will always be pleased to receive and consider criticisms, suggestions or other assistance in furthering its purposes. Cooperation between the Bulletin and the men who read it will help mightily in the work of securing and enforcing laws and regulations which will promote the public comfort, secure the health of consumers and prevent unnecessary harrassment of the dealer.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all of the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST.
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Approved:
N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. (Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION. SUPPLEMENT No. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and Fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining states who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including October 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Deaprtment of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

BURDENSOME TO THE DAIRYMEN.

A brief note appears elsewhere concerning the action of the dairymen who supply the city of Allegheny with milk and cream in resenting the requirements of the modified rules recently adopted by the health authorities of that city. It is announced that similar trouble exists in Berwick. Very stringent rules have been adopted by the health board of that place. The dairymen are very much disgruntled over the situation and have indulged in strong and repeated remonstrance.

Finally, as a way out of the dilemma, a case stated has been agreed upon and will be duly submitted to the consideration of the Columbia county court. Both sides have been persuaded to agree to be bound by the decision which may be announced before this number of the Bulletin is placed in the hands of its readers. The court will doubtless take every side of a complicated question into consideration and will render a decision that will redound to the benefit of the greatest number of those interested. At least we have a right to hope so.

There should be no compromise in this important matter that would involve a lowering of the standard. At the present moment the milk supply of the State is of an unusually high grade, as a rule. This is the result of various educational efforts upon the part of the dairy and food department and its agents. Some of the processes were very expensive but in those instances milder methods did not seem available. But it has also been impressed upon the minds of dairymen and dealers that milk is so important an article of food and so susceptible to influences from without that they have voluntarily begun to adopt modern methods.

It is true that some of the dairymen are averse to going to so much trouble. They say it takes time and increases the cost of the milk to them. But the health boards and the courts must remember that milk is the one article of food essential to thousands of small children and that those children have a right to pure milk. So that whatever may be said about the hardships of sanitary rules, there does not seem to be any argument in the mouths of the dairymen potential enough to justify their repeal and a return to old and slovenly methods.

RICHMOND'S RULES ABOUT MILK.

The Bulletin has already published some extracts from the circular of instructions issued by the board of health of the city of Richmond for the benefit of dairymen and householders in the matter of the preservation of milk. The more those rules are studied and the more information comes to hand concerning the results of their enforcement, the more valuable do they appear. The health officials of Richmond are not content with providing rigid rules governing the dairyman and other venders of milk; they go farther and take great pains to instruct the housewife in the best and simplest methods of preserving milk from taint after it has been received from the dairyman. Other cities could do no kindlier act than to procure a copy of the rules and regulations in force in Richmond, study them and then put them into effect.

Everybody knows that milk is peculiarly susceptible to alien influences. Many instances are on record where milk that was perfectly wholesome when purchased from the dairyman became impregnated with poison or some disagreeable odor which rendered it dangerous to the members of the household or so disagreeable in taste as to be quite unfit for use. This fact ought to be so obvious to the householder as to lead her to the utmost care and unceasing vigilance. The adoption of such rules regarding the care of milk in the home as are set forth in the rules of the board of health of the city of Richmond is quite feasible in any ordinary community and would unquestionably improve conditions and promote good health.

In a former number of the Bulletin quoted a recent instance showing what may happen as the result of a little carelessness. Two children in a certain household were taken violently sick soon after drinking some milk. It was at once conjectured that the dairyman had sold the family poisoned milk. An investigation was undertaken, the result showing that the milk had been poisoned by the paint with which the room in which it had been permitted to stand had recently been brightened up. In that case the milkman was in no way to blame. It was simply a little domestic carelessness that precipitated the trouble and caused the children several hours of agony.

DISEASE IN MILK.

From the Wilkes-Barre Record.

Within the past few years scientists and health authorities have recognized more than ever before the alarming effect of impure milk upon the health of the people, and they are advocating preventative measures more strenuously every year.

Dr. C. E. Schroeder, of the Federal Department of Agriculture, who has conducted numerous autopsies on cattle, a scientist of wide reputation, says:

"We now realize that the terrible destruction of human life by tuberculosis is almost invariably caused by drinking infected milk, not by breathing the dried sputum, as is popularly supposed, and the havoc wrought by impure milk is so great that the government would be amply justified in levying a special tax, if necessary, in order that every cow in the country should be tested for tuberculosis, killed if found infected, and the owner recompensed for his loss."

Dr. Schroeder is of the opinion that tuberculosis infection from dried sputum is not nearly so dangerous as infection from drinking milk. He says: "Every recent experiment has gone to prove that the germ must be taken into the system through food, and the indications are largely that the most extensive conveyor of the disease is milk." While the medical fraternity will not completely agree with Dr. Schroeder in minimizing the danger of infection through the air passages, there is no doubt that he is correct in the statement that very many cases of tuberculosis are caused by infected milk.

The relation of the milk supply to tuberculosis in the human being is one of the principal subjects of discussion at the International Milk Congress now in session in Brussels. Dr. Henry L. Colt, of Newark, N. J., president of the American Association of Medical Milk Commissions, said in the course of an address.

"To resort to the compulsory pasteurization of the milk supply of large cities as a protection against tuberculosis, instead of taking more radical measures for its eradication from milk herds, would be protecting only those who live in those cities, and expose all who live in the rural districts. The only real safeguard lies in the complete eradication of bovine tuberculosis."

Dr. Colt summarized the position of American physicians and health officers as favoring pasteurization only as a temporary expedient. The true office of pasteurization is to be found in its application to modified milk in sealed nursing bottles, especially in hot weather, for infant feeding or for invalids with low power of resistance, but it should not be used as an established method, instead of inspection, for the protection of the milk supply of cities, says Dr. Colt in his summary. The contention is that pasteurized milk is hard to keep and is positively deleterious if kept standing for any length of time. The summary included the advocacy of State and federal legislation for the eradication of tuberculosis from cattle and the exclusion of all persons suspected of being afflicted with disease from working about the dairies.

The subject of a pure milk supply is rising in importance. Numerous cities have already taken the strictest measures, at large expense, to insure the purity of the supply, and stations are being established at which mothers may secure pasteurized milk during the summer months. The movement is one of the most pronounced in the modern battle between science and communicable disease.

THE QUESTION OF BREAKFAST FOODS.

By direction of Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, agents of the division recently purchased samples of all the breakfast foods sold in Pennsylvania. The Commissioner is anxious to know something about the elements that go to make up these foods and has sent the samples to Professor William Frear, of State College, who is now busily engaged in dissecting and analyzing them. In due time his work will be completed and the result made public.

There has been in recent years quite a fad among certain people in behalf of those particular brands of breakfast foods which have happened to strike their fancy or appeal to their palate. The foods have been extensively and ably advertised. Extravagant claims have been made on their behalf by their promotors. The variety is something surprising to one who begins to investigate them for the first time. While the list may not extend to the seventy-five mentioned by the newspapers in their reference to this work, there is certainly a large number and human invention has been put to a severe test to furnish new, novel and attractive names for the latest additions to the family.

The breakfast foods have their foes as well as their friends and defenders. Whereas some men and women would feel that they had been cheated out of the choicest portion of their breakfast if by some unhappy mischance they were unable to procure their favorite food as a sort of secondary appetizer, there are others who sneer openly at the entire family of foods and intimate that they are little better, if any, than straw or chaff. And they feel that nothing could induce them to sample such pretended articles of food. What they would do if cast adrift on a desert island with a can or two of milk and a box or so of assorted breakfast foods is another question.

The dairy and food division approaches the elucidation of this problem without prepossessions or resentments. Its work is undertaken solely for the sake of knowledge and in the interest of the consuming public of the State. If the breakfast foods, or any of them, are composed of sawdust the people have a right to know it, and contrariwise. In due time the facts will be published.

PERMITTING THE USE OF SULPHITES.

The federal authorities are allowing California fruit growers to use sulphites, or the fumes of sulphur, in the preservation of their fruits until some other method can be devised. Concerning which two observations seem to be pertinent. One is that so long as the use of sulphites is permitted there is little likelihood that any other method of preserving fruit will be discovered. The other is that it has been established again and again by juries in the formal trial of cases that sulphites are not only injurious to health, but also positively the worst and most mischievous of all known preservatives.

The use of this mischievous and dangerous preservative is forbidden in Pennsylvania. Articles thus preserved or embalmed cannot be sold in this Commonwealth without violation of law. Rule 2 of the rules and regulations prepared by the Dairy and Food Commissioner in pursuance of Section 3 of the Act of June 1, 1907, says:

"The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Is Pennsylvania on the right track or is the federal food department? Is it right to permit the health of consumers to be injured by the use of mischievous preservatives in order that the fruit dealers of one section or the preserve manufacturers of another may be rid of certain inconveniences? Or is it better to insist upon the continued absence of all dangerous drugs or other equally deleterious substances from the food of the people?

The Bulletin is willing to go to the farthest possible limit in facilitating the comfort and convenience of manufacturers and dealers. But whenever the health of the consumer is involved it stops. It believes life and health should not be tampered with under any consideration. And it thinks conscientious fruit growers and others should be of the same mind.

SIMPLE BUT VALUABLE.

From the World To-day.

Sixteen years ago Dr. Stephen Moulton Babcock announced through a tiny bulletin, a small, paper bound, few leaved circular, a most humble affair, "a new method for the determination of fat in milk adapted to creameries and cheese factories." The bulletin was sent to a few hundreds of people. It gave no hint of the enormous economic influence of the discovery so simply set forth.

But this discovery has increased the wealth of nations by many millions of dollars and will continue so to do to the end of time; it is the basis of transactions around the globe, running into many thousands of dollars per day; it has been adopted by the butter and cheese makers of every nation in the world; without it the present advanced position of this important feature of modern industrial life would have been impossible.

Prolonged study led the chemist to the conclusion that any determination of the real value of milk must rest upon chemical action and mechanical force. He knews, for example, that sulphuric acid would dissolve all the solids in milk save the fat, the actual richness of the milk. He knew that a rapidly revolving receptacle would tend, by centrifugal force, to throw forward a liquid confined in a bottle in the receptacle. He combined the two and made the Babcock milk test.

He constructed a machine to put the test in practical operation, primitive in its fashion, but covering all the essential points. I saw this machine not long since, a simple looking affair, which has traveled tens of thousands of miles and has been seen by tens of thousand of people at great expositions in America and abroad.

A PURE DRINK LAW NEEDED.

From the Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

The Dairy and Food Department of the State under Commissioner Foust is doing good work in looking after the purity of the milk sold throughout the State. It should, however, go one step farther in the examination of the drinks used for foods, or simply as beverages. The milk fed to the infant in arms is inspected carefully, but as soon as the child gets old enough to toddle about its drink is no longer safeguarded. If it is the child of well-to-do people it gets distilled water to drink, or can buy fairly pure soda water.

But the child of the alley dweller? How about it? For it there is the alluring "pop," and the nicely sweetened, strongly flavored, highly colored "soft drink." Many, many years ago pop was made by sweetening Allegheny river water (fairly pure then), with good white sugar, adding sarsaparilla extract to flavor it and carbonating. That gave us "sassafralla," you know. For the less fastidious, plain white pop was made. Both were absolutely pure.

But things have changed. Now the average pop bottler takes raw Allegheny river water, with all its hidden terrors, adds saccharine to sweeten it, colors it with scarlet analine dye and flavors it with a raspberry flavor made in the chemist's tubs. Then this decoction is carbonated, and finally sold to the poor little alley tots at two cents a bottle.

With a bottleful of milk the infant, at the worst, gets a drop or two of formaldhyde, but with the "pop" it gets all the germs in the river water, then the artificial sweetener, the artificial dye and the artificial flavor—a whole bottleful for two cents.

It seems that Commissioner Foust's hands are tied. There is no law prohibiting the sale of such "pop." If an unscrupulous bottler wants to dose his pop with prussic acid to give it a nice wild cherry flavor, there is no law to prevent him from doing it.

"EMBALMED" PRESERVES.

From the New York Times.

Mr. Sebastian Mueller, who is declared to be one of the world's leading chemist, writes on the commercial preparation of fruits and vegetables, with and without artificial preservatives, in "What to Eat" for September. Mr. Mueller is a member of a firm that does a large business in preserving foods, and he speaks "from personal knowledge that there are no food products made of fruits and vegetables which the manufacturer cannot put on the market without artificial preservatives."

This statement ought to put out of court the claimants that fruit pie fillings and pickles preserved with benzoic acid that go packed in barrels and tubs to the bakers and delicatessen dealers of the country are needed and harmless. So long as the weight of evidence is against the preservative, and so long as the food may be put up without it, their arguments are futile.

The Board of Food and Drug Inspection at Washington has condemned the use of benzoate of soda and benzoic acid. As a special concession, it permits their use in moderate quantities during the preserving season of 1907. But the board has ruled that products containing the preservatives cannot bear a serial number; that they cannot bear any statement that the article is guaranteed to conform to the pure food act, and that the label of each package containing it shall bear a statement that the food is preserved with sodium benzoate or benzoic acid.

Even this rule does not protect the public. Most of the goods prepared with the doubtful substances are shipped in wholesale packages to bakeshops and provision stores, whence they issue in the form of pies, jelly rolls, bulk jams, pickles, and so on, to the tables of unsuspicious consumers. Of course, canned products bearing the tell-tale label will be shunned. Possibly a single artificially preserved dish at a meal might not hurt, but consumers must be prepared at any time to encounter the acid in several dishes, in an aggregate amount that would be surely harmful.

Until the pure food officials shall effectually prohibit its use, dealers will suffer. Treating the subject as a manufacturer, Mr. Mueller says:

"Through the late Chicago meat agitation that has been going on, the minds of the people of the whole world are inflamed. A deplorable prejudice exists against all American food products, and we believe that instead of injuring the preserving industry by the prohibition of preservatives, this great industry will, on the contrary, be injured by their toleration, through a growing lack of confidence in all prepared foods."

That is manifestly true. We hope the food manufacturers who today are urging concessions by the inspectors appointed under the pure food law will before January next perceive their folly.

REFUSING TO HEED THE WARNING.

It was the hope of the present head of the Dairy and Food Division to minimize the number of prosecutions under his administration by furnishing retail dealers and others with timely information, and appealing to their sense of obligation to law, as well as to their desire to avoid prosecution, conviction and punishment. To that end a sincere effort has been made to conduct a campaign of education. The chief desire of the Dairy and Food Division is to protect the health of the people of Pennsylvania by securing pure food for their use. The prosecution of offenders is merely incidental and never pleasant. If offenders continue to turn up, it must needs be that punishment follows; but the aim of this division is to persuade all dealers that it is to their great advantage to comply with the provisions of law.

In pursuance of this policy, Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust caused to be prepared and published in the Monthly Bulletin an article explaining the provisions of the law enacted at the last legislative session, and urging retailers to comply rigidly therewith. It was explained that the new act was intended to protect the retailer from prosecution for the innocent sale of goods which came under the ban of law. It was shown that the retailer who secured from the wholesaler or the manufacturer a proper guarantee would escape prosecution, the burden falling upon the dealers from whom he purchased. It was also urged that retailers ought to clean house. It was said that it would be very dangerous for a retail dealer to keep on his shelves goods which had not been guaranteed under the new law, and which might contain adulterants.

It was explained that the dealer who did not clean all the unguaranteed stock from his shelves would run the risk of prosecution. It was also shown that a retailer who defied the law in that way would have no proper defense when brought before the courts. While the act of 1907 was meant to relieve retail merchants from petty prosecution, its provisions were very clear. Ample provision was made for securing the proper guarantees; if that precaution were omitted the responsibility would rest upon the shoulders of the retailer, and the consequence could not be got rid of. This was emphasized in circulars sent to the press. The newspapers kindly took the matter up, and by means of editorial and news items did what they could to enlighten the dealers who were chiefly interested. There does not seem to be any reasonable excuse for carelessness or ignorance.

Yet one retail dealer in Westmoreland county did precisely what he was repeatedly and urgently warned not to do. He kept a lot of old goods on his shelves. When asked for, he sold them, although he had no guarantee of their purity. In due course of time, as is always sure to happen, agents of the Dairy and Food Division visited this man's store and purchased some of the goods for which he had no guarantee. These goods did not measure up to the standard required in this Commonwealth. The result may be easily surmised. The dealer has been arrested for selling articles that were adulterated. He has paid the fine provided in such cases. It was not the wish of the State to mulct him in a fine and costs; but his own carelessness brought punishment to pass. He had ample warning, and neither he nor his friends can blame the Dairy and Food Division or its agents.

The Bulletin desires to repeat that the retailer who takes pains to comply with the act of assembly is secure from molestation. He must remove all old and unguaranteed goods from his shelves. He must take a local guarantee from the wholesaler or manufacturer from whom he makes his purchases. If he does that, and the analysis of any of the goods sold by him proves that said goods have been adulterated or misbranded he must quit selling as soon as he is notified of the fact. That is the end of the matter, so far as he is concerned. Responsibility is placed upon the shoulders of the person from whom he made his purchases, and whose guarantee he is able to exhibit to the proper officer. It seems as though anybody ought to be able to comply with these regulations. It seems, also, that any retailer who neglects or refuses to obey a law which was enacted for the special purpose of protecting him from prosecution deserves all he gets in the way of punishment.

THE ART OF CLEANLINESS.

This would be a much pleasanter and a much cleaner world if all men and women had the knack of perfect housekeeping. It is true that cleanliness may be carried to excess. The papers are telling a little story about a maiden lady of somewhat advanced age who lives in one of the most beautiful residences of Richmond. She is a model housekeeper and has no children about the premises to make a clatter. Some weeks ago, however, she did entertain an eleven-year-old niece for a few days. The little girl was much awed by what she saw, and was not precisely happy. Upon her return home. speaking to her mamma of what she had seen and experienced, she remarked in a solemn tone: "Mamma, I saw a fly in Aunt Sarah's house. But," she added, thoughtfully, "it was washing itself!"

Let it be conceded that there is such a thing as a cleanliness that makes the ordinary person uncomfortable; a precision which is positively exasperating to the less methodical; still, the slattern is detestible and repulsive. This is true in all the relations of life; none the less in connection with the sale of groceries, vegetables or other necessaries of human existence. The Bulletin has spoken of this matter before. But its observation leads to the conviction that much remains to be said. The majority of the grocers of the State are careful and cleanly in their habits. They take some pains to protect their goods from the common street dust, from infection by flies, from pollution from other sources. They are to be commended for their careful and cautious conduct.

Did you ever pass a grocery or a fruit store in which much of the stock of goods rested either upon the ground or the floor, or upon low benches or other contrivances only a few inches from the floor? Did you ever notice how the flies were taking liberties with every article from which they found it possible to extract comfort? Some of them fairly swarmed with these disease-carrying creatures, didn't they? Then, if you stayed long enough, or happened along at the proper moment, you noticed that the goods were quite convenient to passing dogs and cats, and that at these times these contributed to the increasing pollution of the various articles of food which you are expected to purchase and in due time take into your stomach. This is a not unusual sight.

One wonders why it is that some dealers in household supplies are so abominably careless concerning the proper bestowal of their goods. It may be that such venders will retain a certain sort of custom, but their manners and methods are quite certain to repel a large number of persons whose patronage would be very remunerative. During the height of the berry season a citizen who wished to purchase a large order for domestic use stopped in front of a certain dealer's place of business with the intention of purchasing. The berries were there, all right, fine ones, too. But they were literally covered with flies, and the expectant purchaser passed on, a look of disgust on his face, the outward expression of an inward sentiment. That was but a single instance. Hundreds of others could be presented.

Many an intending customer has entered a provision store with the full purpose of purchasing a considerable quantity of goods. But he has observed the pet cat lolling over some of the vegetables on the counter or near the floor, or he has seen a stray dog wandering to and fro among the cabbage and the beets, and the potatoes, and other articles which are quite accessionable to him, and inevitably following out the custom of dogs under such circumstances. Is it likely that a person of cleanly habits and delicate stomach will make any purchase in such a store? What would you do, dear sir or madame, if this had been your experience? The chances are that you would not only decline to buy, but that you would herald the unclean fame of that particular grocer among all your friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Grocer, if you have been among the offenders in this respect, do not get angry at the Bulletin's plainness of speech. On the contrary, accept the assurance that it seeks to be your true and helpful friend. Take its advice and turn over a new leaf. When fly season comes around again, cover your berries, fruits and vegetables; take your goods off the ground or the floor; place them beyond the reach of dogs, cats and rats. Brighten up your storeroom. Cultivate the art of cleanliness, not fanatically, but sensibly and rationally. Show the public that you mean to sell untainted goods. If you do that, your patronage will soon show a large increase.

SHAM ROOT BEER, POP AND LEMONADE.

Reports have been received at the office of the Dairy and Food Divison from Dr. William Frear, professor of chemistry at State College, on two samples of root beer and six samples of pop, all purchased from vendors at the Tipton camp during the last encampment of the National Guard of Pennsylvania. The attention of present or prospective lawmakers is urgently invited to this showing. This and equally flagrant instances in every part of the State, especially during the heated term, urgently show the imperative need of State inspection of the drinks of the people, non-alcoholic as well as alcoholic. The facts which follow are precisely as Dr. Frear found them:

One sample of root beer was simply "thin syrup, colored brown with dye, flavored with birch and sweetened with saccharine." The other sample of root beer was "thin syrup, colored brown with vegetable dye, flavored with birch."

A sample of pop made at Gallitzen was "silghtly acidified sugar syrup, colored with coal tar dye, flavored with artificial banana flavor, thickened with gum."

Another sample of pop made at Gallitzen was "chiefly sugar solution, flavored with birch and colored artificially."

Pop made at Hastings was "thin syrup, flavored with imitation raspberry, thickened with gum, colored with coal tar dye and sweetened with saccharine."

Pop made at Altoona was "diluted syrup, flavored chiefly with birch, colored with vegetable brown and contained saccharine." Another sample of pop made at Altoona was found to be "a thin syrup acidified, flavored with synthetic flavor, thickened with gum, dyed with coal tar dye, sweetened with saccharine."

Pop made at Lock Haven was "thin syrup, thickened with gum, flavored chiefly with birch, colored with vegetable brown, sweetened with saccharine."

Two samples of lemonade that were taken from stands having no apparent owner or proprietors were made entirely from acetic acid and water. The fakirs in charge of these particular lemonade stands fled when they learned that the agents of the Dairy and Food Division were on the ground. The stuff was dumped on the grass, so that it didn't do the harm it would unquestionably have done under conditions more favorable to the conscienceless dealers.

The foregoing statements show that many unscrupulous persons are taking advantage of the situation in Pennsylvania to make money at the expense of the health and, in some instances, the life of the children and young people of the State. We have no law forbidding the sale of adulterated and poisonous drinks. During the summer many cheap lemonade stands and soda water fountains are set up in the larger cities for the express purpose of catching the trade of children. The lemonade sold is made of a dangerous acid; the soda water is no better; neither is the root beer nor pop. Nobody can tell how much of the heavy death rate among children during the hot weather, especially in the cities, is due to this nefarious practice.

The fakirs who can make gallons of counterfeit root beer, pop, lemonade or soda water at the cost of a few pennies, not only haunt the crowded quarters of the large cities; they also keep their eyes on military encampments, county fairs, large picnic parties, pleasure resorts. It is their practice to turn out in considerable numbers on occasions of that sort, and to injure the health of many thousands of young people and children. They are in business to make money. The effect of their concoctions upon the stomachs of their youthful patrons is something that doesn't concern them. They know that acids are decidedly injurious to the lining of the human stomach; but what is that to them? The stomachs are not theirs.

The Bulletin feels sure that every honest citizen of this great Commonwealth who reads the foregoing statement of the actual contents of the soft drinks sold at the Tipton encampment will realize the crying necessity for reform of the most drastic nature in this matter. The supervision of the State should be extended to the beverages served the people. It seems likely that adulterated and poisonous drinks do far more harm in this State than adulterated food. And the Legislature should not hesitate for a moment. The lives of the people should be carefully guarded by their servants.

FIXING RESPONSIBILITY.

The Inland Grocer reprints a portion of Commissioner Foust's address before the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania, and indulges in some comments on his criticism of the new food law. It says:

"Mr. Foust's criticism of the Pennsylvania law is not entirely clear, as quoted. The guaranty section deprives the merchant of the protection of the guaranty if he continues to sell the goods objected to after having received notice in writing from the food department that the goods are adulterated or misbranded. He therefore becomes liable to prosecution if the commissioner's notice is disobeyed, exactly as he would be under a provision such as is proposed by the commissioner.

"Branding of goods is a matter of regulation under the national food law, when the goods are the subject of interstate commerce. When they are not, the national law cannot touch them.

"It would be a boon to merchants as well as to officials if a food law could be so framed that a business man could learn it in twenty minutes. To draw and pass such a measure would involve difficulties so great that the proposal looks like a vain hope.

"Mr. Foust's intentions are certainly leading him in the right direction, however, and he should be given all possible support in improving the law and the food supply."

Commissioner Foust holds that it is unjust and oppressive to compel the retail dealer to lose time and money hanging about the court room every time a wholesaler is prosecuted for the sale of adulterated food products. He thinks if something could be done to prevent the undue harassing of the retailer while still keeping a vigilant eye upon the quality of the goods sold to consumers it would be a great improvement over the present arrangement. He believes that every step in the direction of greater simplicity and directness will be an improvement. That is the reason he expressed dissatisfaction with some of the provisions of the act of June 1, 1907.

The law would be better if it were simpler. Why not eliminate everything referring to the guaranty or the misbranding of goods? Let the national food and drugs act, as interpreted and enforced by the officials of the Agricultural Department at Washington, regulate these matters. The question of misbranding is largely a matter of opinion. Since all goods manufactured in Pennsylvania bearing a label are shipped into other states, while goods manufactured in other states are sold in Pennsylvania, they all come under the national law, and there should be no difficulty in enforcing it in the interest of good health and the protection of the consuming public.

The truth is that our laws should deal with the question of adulteration alone. The federal government could manage everything else. It should not be particularly difficult to frame a simple act dealing with this question of adulteration. That act should prohibit absolutely the use of all chemicals known to be injurious to health. Whenever any of the forbidden drugs or acids are found in food products, the retailer should be notified. He should then be required to box up the tainted goods and return them to the wholesaler from whom they were purchased. The latter would be required to return them to the manufacturer. Under such arrangements there would be no prosecutions, and the ultimate burden would fall on the man who made the goods.

Would not that be much better than the present arrangement? The innocent dealer would not be dragged into court. He would not be taken away from his business a day or a week, at much inconvenience and expense. Even the wholesaler would have swift redress. The onus of the whole matter would devolve upon the manufacturer. The results of these investigations would be published in the Bulletin from month to month. In a very short time the manufacturer whose shortcomings would be thus widely advertised to the trade would either reform his methods and make a radical and beneficial change in his formulae, or he would go out of business, so far as Pennsylvania is concerned.

The purpose of the law should be the protection of the food of the people from adulteration. It should not be to prosecute dealers or to put them to inconvenience and expense. The simplest and the most effective way to drive dangerous or inferior goods out of the market would be the best. What more effective than shipping such goods back to the individual who made them?

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Attention is directed to an article from the New York Times, which is reprinted on another page of this number of the Bulletin. It is a review of an article contributed to "What to Eat," by Mr. Sebastian Mueller, a chemist, who is said to be well fitted for the discussion of the question of preservatives. It will be observed that Mr. Mueller takes the position upheld by the Bulletin, that all preservatives are harmful. He adds that they are not necessary; that "there are no food products made of fruit and vegetables which the manufacturer cannot put on the market without artificial preservatives." It is his conviction that those unwise persons who are importuning the administrators of the federal pure food law to bend its provisions so as to permit the use of preservatives are "injuring the preserving industry" instead of benefiting it. The sooner the national law is enforced vigorously and according to its letter, the better. Every indication of feebleness or uncertainty will strengthen the lungs of the clamorers, and increase the disgust and disappointment of the common people.

There are a great many dealers in food products in this country—manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers—who take a wholesome pride in the quality of the goods they turn out. They long ago took the ground that it pays a firm or an individual to strive after a reputation. At the very beginning they began to pay particular attention to the quality of the food products turned out by the establishment bearing their names. They were not so anxious for profits at the start as for a reputation. Presently the profits began to come their way, too, and now they are independent. They get a little more for their goods than less scrupulous rivals, and they have small difficulty in holding their trade. A customer is sometimes tempted to try one of the "just as good" imitations at a lower price, but one sample of the imitation is usually sufficient. After all, it pays to do right in the manufacture of articles of food as well as in other matters. The cheap and adulterated product is seldom in good odor with the intelligent buyer.

Harold Roberts, charged with selling milk containing formaldehyde; George A. Coil, charged with selling milk and cream containing formaldehyde; James McLea, charged with selling cream containing formaldehyde; ——— Hofstaedter, charged with selling cream containing formaldehyde, all of Philadelphia, recently appeared before Magistrate Beaton, of that city, and paid a fine of $50 each, with costs of prosecution.

Other milk cases that have cost the venders some money, considerable time and possibly some other things more valuable than either time or money, are noted as follows: Charles P. Larkin, of Chester, charged with selling milk containing boric acid, appeared before Magistrate Smith, and was fined $50. Magistrate S. S. Gilberts, of Sharon, fined George S. Luce, of South Sharon, for selling preserved milk. For the offense of selling milk preserved with boric acid, Ira Noble, of Easton, was fined $50 by Magistrate J. Straub, of Easton. E. A. Cobb, of Pittston, sold milk preserved with formaldehyde. Magistrate I. V. Robbins, of Wilkes-Barre, fined him $50. Isaac H. Williams, of Chester, appeared before Magistrate F. F. Williamson, of Media, and was assessed a fine of $60 for selling adulterated milk containing 25 per cent. water.

G. S. Allshouse, of Vandergrift, Westmoreland county, who was charged with selling adulterated vinegar, appeared before Magistrate George A. Hynger, of Vandergrift, and paid a fine of $100. George C. Martin, of Philadelphia, was charged with selling colored oleomargarine. He paid a fine of $100 and the costs of prosecution to Magistrate Beaton. This money, with all other sums mentioned in these notes as having been collected, has been promptly deposited in the State Treasury.

From September 1 to September 17, inclusive, eighteen licenses were issued to sell uncolored oleomargarine. The sum of $600.12 received for these licenses was paid into the State Treasury.

Eleven informations were made by Agent Miller, in Pittsburg, against dairymen in Allegheny county, charged with selling milk and cream containing formaldehyde as a preservative. Formaldehyde is one of the most vicious preparations known. It is better known as "embalming fluid." Men who feed their customers upon that deserve the severest punishment.

Agent McGregor has brought one oleomargarine case, one vinegar case and one extract of vanilla case before Alderman Beatty, of Greensburg.

The preservation of food is a question which has confronted people since ancient times. In the old processes of preserving use was made of wood smoke, vinegar, spices, salt, sugar and drying. Sterilization and cold storage were introduced later and applied where possible and convenient.

Next to water supply, the milk supply of a city is the most far-reaching vehicle of conveying infectious diseases. Not only have we records of numbers of epidemics of typhoid fever, diphtheria and scarlet fever, so carried, but far more important than these occasional epidemics is the regular communication of intestinal troubles, especially among bottle-fed infants, by milk which has become dangerous, not by infection from others with similar troubles, but which is simply loaded with bacteria which owe their presence to careless handling of the milk—dirty cows, dirty barns, dirty pails, dirty hands of milkers, delivery of the milk without proper cooling, or when it has been kept too long.

The retail dealer has been carefully looked after by the framers of the present pure food act. The object of the legislators, however, was not to provide immunity for violation of law, but rather to insure the protection of the public health with as little embarrassment to the dealer who wants to do right as possible. The purpose of the lawmakers, and the pains they took to make the way of the dealer easy, should inspire a sentiment of appreciation and gratitude, and lead every dealer in the State to renewed efforts to sell only such things as have been guaranteed to them as complying with the standards established by the State of Pennsylvania.

The agents of the Dairy and Food Division are the servants of the people. It is their duty to treat all with whom they come in contact with courtesy and consideration. If any of them should forget the habits of a gentlemen, that fact should be promptly reported to their superior officer. On the other hand, they are entitled to kindly and considerate treatment, and it is to be hoped dealers and people will receive them as friends and helpers, not as enemies.

The people of Erie have much reason to be proud of their health department. Under the active, energetic and intelligent direction of Dr. J. W. Wright, the department is a terror to evildoers, a protection to the people and a fine example of efficiency and vigor, worthy of the imitation of other health boards.

Out of 7,500 samples of milk and cream purchased by agents of the division during the months of July and August, only seventeen samples showed the presence of chemical preservatives. This is highly encouraging, and in marked contrast to the situation four years ago, when 400 samples out of 4,000 were found to be adulterated.

The determination of the agents of the people to enforce the pure food laws, if compelled to do so, the educative influences that have been at work for some years now, the co-operation of the better disposed dealers in the effort to secure purer food, all these things have worked together for good, and the food products now offered for sale in the groceries of the State are much purer than they were several years ago before the activities of the Dairy and Food Division began to manifest themselves.

In connection with the statements made by the New York Times in the article reprinted in this number of the Bulletin, it occurs to the average observer that the general government ought to be able to render a definite opinion concerning the actual qualities and properties of benzoic acid. The proper officials have been conducting experiments for a number of years. Have they no actual data yet upon which to base a clear and intelligible statement? Don't they know whether benzoic acid is or is not injurious to health? If it is harmful it ought to be prohibited at once. If not, why not permit its permanent use to the amount of one-tenth of one per cent.? Is there no way in which the national officials can be persuaded to give the country a plain statement of the facts with which it should be well armed by this time?

Out of 1,050 samples of milk purchased in Philadelphia by agents of the Dairy and Food Department, four dealers were arrested and paid fines of $50 each and costs. That is a rather encouraging state of affairs. The milk supply of the State, city and country was never in better condition than it is at the present moment.

The householders of Pennsylvania should co-operate with the efforts of the servants of the State who are charged with the enforcement of the food laws, and also with the dairymen from whom they obtain their daily supply of milk, to take care of the milk after they receive it. It often happens that carelessness in the home is responsible for the speedy and serious adulteration of milk that was perfectly pure and wholesome when it was received.

Don't keep your potatoes, cabbage, tomatoes and other articles on the floor of your storeroom. It is not a pleasant thing to the intending customer to see dogs, cats and occasionally rats roaming over vegetables and fruits.

The householder should encourage the retail dealer to sell the best of goods. Sometimes a superior article costs a little more money than the imitation, and honest dealers are disheartened by the conduct of otherwise sensible people, who turn away from first quality goods and purchase poor articles because they are cheaper. Cheaper? Of course, they're cheaper, so far as present expenditure is concerned. But the cost may eventually be far in excess of the cost of good articles, the consumption of which is followed by no after-results of an injurious nature.

The retail merchants of the State ought to organize themselves thoroughly for the express purpose of compelling the manufacturers of the country to make and sell nothing but pure goods. An organization of the retail dealers would soon bring the manufacturers to terms. The result would mightily enhance the reputation of the retailers, and would please the people. For it would insure the production and sale of articles of food containing no injurious substances, and it would mean better health and longer life.

The retail merchants of the State should organize for the purpose of compelling manufacturers of food products everywhere in the Union to send out nothing but superior goods. By the word "superior" we really mean pure goods. It will not take manufacturers long to make an end of any evil practices into which they may have fallen once they understand that purity of products is absolutely essential if they are to be purchased by the retail dealers of Pennsylvania. If such an organization were effected it would not be long until there would be an end of prosecutions in this State for violations of the pure food laws. To hasten such a desirable consummation should be the ambition of every dealer and of every householder.

Information from various sections of the Commonwealth indicates that the farmers are very much pleased with the operation of that act of the General Assembly which allows them to make and sell vinegar, the product of pure apple juice. All they need to do is to convert their apples into juice, and that into cider, properly label the barrel and put it on the market.

Suppose we admit that pure food products may cost a trifle more than the cheap adulterated product. What then? Shall we crave the cheap stuff, and insist upon having it, in spite of the fact that it contains substance injurious to the human stomach, and calculated to shorten the life of the consumer? Isn't it better to pay a little more rather than run risks? In fact, isn't pure food cheaper in the end than the adulterated stuff? Surely there is but one answer to that question.

The regulations governing the distribution of milk in the city of Allegheny have recently been materially modified in the interest of greater cleanliness and purity, and to the end that the public health may be protected. Some of the dairymen complain that the new rules are very burdensome, and are seeking their repeal. But it begins to look as though sanitary regulations have come to the front to stay. And since the preservation of health is a matter of the first importance, objections are not likely to avail much.

The Retail Grocers' Association, of Cincinnati, is talking about holding a pure food show some time during the early spring of 1908. As nothing of the kind has ever been held in Cincinnati, the correspondent in that city of the Inland Grocer thinks it would be such a decided novelty as to insure a good attendance of persons interested or curious.

George H. Filbert, of Minneapolis, vice president of the Minnesota Retail Grocers and General Merchants' Association, contributes to a recent number of the Commercial Bulletin an interesting article upon the handling of green stuff in a grocery store. Here is one good suggestion: "In these days of improvement and advancement it is almost a necessity that the grocer have a large ice-box for his fruits and vegetables. The average store must carry sufficient stock for all day, and it is impossible to judge your exact supply. Now to properly handle this line, it is money in pocket to carry your extra supply in a refrigerator, for it gives your trade fresh goods, and also keeps the goods from spoiling. As a rule goods which have been standing all day in a hot store are unfit for sale next day, and a merchant can generally save the price of two refrigerators in a season on goods kept in salable condition over night."

PSALM OF LIFE.

From the Retail Grocers' Advocate.

"The business man's life is full of crosses and temptations. He comes into the world without his consent and goes out against his will, and the trip between the two extremities is exceedingly rocky. The rule of contraries is one of the important features of the trip. When he is little the big girls kiss him; when he is big the little girls kiss him. If he raises a large family he is a chump, but if he raises a small check he is a thief and a fraud, and shunned like a Chinaman with a seven years' itch. If he is poor, he's a poor manager; if he is rich, he's dishonest; if he dies young, there was a great future ahead of him; if he lives to an old age, he has missed his calling. He is introduced to the world by a doctor, and to the next world by the same process. The road is rocky, but man likes to travel it."

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name, and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all of the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Approved:
N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. (Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device, and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 11. (Issued September 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSION. SUPPLEMENT NO. 2 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE NO. 11. EVAPORATED FRUITS.

Rule 11. It should be understood by the trade and the public that Rule 2, specifically referring to meat and other articles of food, covers evaporated fruits, and that if said fruits contain any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health, such as sulphurous acid, the sale thereof will be treated as a violation of the law.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

HARRISBURG, PA.

Issued by Direction of Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—W. H. SCHWARTZ.
MANAGING EDITOR—OLIVER D. SCHOCK.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to such who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining states who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including November 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Deaprtment of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

THE LAW AND THE DEALER.

The Bulletin is conducted in the interest of manufacturers and venders of food products quite as much as for the benefit of the consuming public. We have laws and rules in this Commonwealth governing the preparation and sale of articles of food. These have been prepared and put in force for the reason that unscrupulous manufacturers, urged on by a desire to gratify the popular rage for cheap things as well as by the wish to make the largest possible profits, have permitted conscience to slumber while they listened to the voices of greed and expediency alone. The manufacturers are not the only guilty ones. They have partners in the guilt of imperiling human life in the consumers themselves, many of whom ask but one question of an article put on the market. That question is: "Is it cheap?"

The Bulletin strives to inculcate the truth that a cheap thing is not necessarily a good thing. It understands that the workingman with a large family and a limited income must practice economy and it supposes that there are occasions when it is not a question of selection with him but of urgent necessity. Under such circumstances the cheap thing is selected per force. In times of prosperity, however, it is true, the average workingman is in a position to choose, and the Bulletin wishes to assure him that ordinarily the article that costs the least at the start is the most expensive in the end. Things that are put up to sell at the very cheapest rate may be harmless, but the chances are that they are worse than worthless. It was to make the sale of adulterated goods difficult and dangerous that the State enacted its pure food laws.

Many of the retail merchants of Pennsylvania and a constantly increasing number of the manufacturers of food products are now convinced that it really pays to make and sell wholesome and pure articles. It is the sincere purpose of the Dairy and Food Division to extend this very proper belief so that the food laws may practically enforce themselves. The food division does not covet the reputation of a vengeful Nemesis, ever on the track of violaters of the several acts of assembly. It prefers to be the friend and helper of those citizens who are engaged in the useful and necessary business of preparing the food of the people. Those charged with the formulation of its policy and the shaping of its action would be pleased if such a condition should presently appear as would make prosecutions wholly unnecessary. That would be an ideal condition.

There are manufacturers in this State who could not be induced to cheapen the quality of their goods by the employment of any adulteration processes. There are grocers who would not consciously keep upon their shelves any article of food that is a counterfeit or that contains ingredients likely to injure the health or shorten the life of any consumer. These manufacturers and retailers take an honest pride in the reputation they have won by years of honest service. They are content with a smaller profit than might otherwise have been secured if but they may have the approval of their own consciences and the confidence of their customers. Every reader of the Bulletin knows one or more of these men. They are successful, in spite of the fact that they do not make a speciality of "cheap" goods, because the public trust them.

When every manufacturer and retailer is animated by a similar spirit, when the chief ambition of all is to furnish pure articles to their patrons the food laws of the Commonwealth will enforce themselves automatically. Perhaps that ideal day will never dawn, but we are approaching a little nearer to it with each passing year.

DIVISION OF RESPONSIBILITY.

Matters would be very much simplified if the Dairy and Food Division of Pennsylvania were merely required to devote its time and energy to the task of putting an end to food adulteration among the manufacturers of the Commonwealth. The national government might well be allowed to attend to matters outside the jurisdiction of our State while the food officials here contented themselves with the performance of their duties within State limits.

Food products manufactured or prepared for consumption in the State naturally come under the purview of the State authorities. They ought to be held morally responsible for the quality of those products. For that reason they should vigilantly oversee the processes of manufacture and take pains to see that the food sent out from State-limited concerns is exactly what it purports to be. The national government now has a food and drugs act—decidedly defective as yet, but a good beginning—and its officials and agents may well be left to enforce its provisions.

It is true that many consumers throughout the State feel at present that they need the assistance of their own pure food bureau in guarding against the introduction of impure or adulterated articles of food. They tell us that the federal law is by no means what it ought to be and that the vigor with which it is being enforced leaves much to be desired. But these good people must remember that everything must have a beginning. The efforts of the government at Washington on behalf of the health of the people have merely begun. Much has already been accomplished and there is every reason to believe the succeeding steps in this matter will be forward and not backward. Division of responsibility would be wise and increasingly efficient.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Are you exercising the care that you should in the purchase of your goods, in order that you may have the protection afforded you under the new Pennsylvania Food Law, approved June 1st, 1907?

Do you examine each invoice? Do you see that the invoice is properly dated? Do you see that the goods purchased are all named in the invoice? Do you see that the invoice bears a guarantee, similar to the following:

"We, the vendors of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee the same to be in full conformity with the Federal Act of June 30th, 1906, and also guarantee the same to be in full conformity with the Act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania known as the Food Act, approved June 1st, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the aforesaid acts."

SIGNED, ...

Under the new Pennsylvania Food Law the retail merchant must establish a guarantee signed by the party from whom the goods were purchased to the effect that the goods are not adulterated or misbranded. Are you doing this? If not, why not?

If you are discounting your bills in order to save the discount, why not examine your invoice when you purchase goods and see if it complies with the suggestions above, and by so doing you will protect yourself from prosecutions, fines and costs.

ABOUT THE BEVERAGES OF THE PEOPLE.

Readers of the Bulletin will recall the fact that when agents of the Dairy and Food Division appeared on the ground at Tipton during the encampment of the Second Brigade, National Guard of Pennsylvania, last summer, several venders of lemonade hurriedly departed for the adjacent woods leaving their beverage behind them. It will also be recalled that an examination of that "lemonade" showed that it was largely composed of acid, containing enough to do deadly harm to the stomachs of consumers. The results of the analysis of various soft drinks of which samples were taken at the camp showed that they were not the genuine article but were heavily adulterated. The same condition of affairs existed in our large cities during the summer months. Cheap pops and lemonades and soda water were produced by the use of acids or drugs, thus imperiling the lives of the consumers of those drinks, mostly poor children.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is without an act regulating the manufacture and sale of so-called soft drinks. Under the circumstances the agents of the Dairy and Food Division are practically powerless to bring about a better state of affairs. Where there is no law there is freedom of action. It is true that the man who poisons his patrons may possibly be brought to justice if the crime can be definitely fixed upon him, but it is a vexatious and an uncertain process and should be supplemented by incisive and effective legislation. There cannot be two opinions concerning the depravity of men who for the sake of making a few miserable dollars will sell beverages made largely of acids which will destroy the lining of the human stomach, shortening life and exposing the innocent to all the horrors of a lingering death by poison. Men who are guilty of that sort of conduct are criminals of the deepest dye and the law should provide for their exemplary punishment.

Nor should the coming act of assembly confine its activities to the soft drinks manufactured and sold here. It should likewise deal with the alcoholic beverages sold in the State. There is some reason to believe that the stories one hears every now and then concerning the fearful and wonderful ingredients in many of the stronger beverages consumed by the people are true. The wines sold over many bars are believed to be heavily adulterated. The effects of alcoholic beverages upon the human system are of questionable utility at best, but the evils of drink are tremendously accentuated by the poisonous drugs which are employed in the preparation of many whiskeys, beers and wines. Whatever may be the private conviction of many excellent persons concerning the relation the citizen should sustain to the drink problem, everybody should be willing to concede that so long as the State authorizes the sale of liquor it should also throw restrictions around that sale in the direction of greater purity and the elimination of the deadly drugs which produce such a deplorable effect upon their victims.

The legislature will not convene until January 1909. But this question of the regulation of the sale of beverages, alcoholic and non-alcoholic, should be carefully considered by our future lawmakers. There will be an opportunity for some Representative or Senator to distinguish himself and earn the gratitude of a very large majority of the people by the preparation of an act, or of a series of acts, regulating this business and providing severe penalties for violation of the provisions of the acts. It is expedient to provide a remedy for existing evils in the drink trade at the earliest possible moment. The drink of the people is quite as important as their food and the same care that is exercised to secure pure food should be taken with reference to pure beverages.

SANITARY MILK DEPOTS.

The Bulletin has devoted a great deal of attention to the milk problem during the last few months. It is likely to continue the subject at frequent intervals. Nothing is more important than the preservation of the public health and no article of food consumed by man has a more positive effect upon his physicial condition than the milk that he drinks. It is also a fact that milk is a well-nigh universal food. It constitutes the sole food of the human family during the opening months of existence, for which reason its purity is a matter of the utmost consequence.

Most of the city and State governments have taken special pains to regulate the business of the milkman. Rules and regulations hedge him about in every way. Sometimes he gets impatient, feeling that he is the victim of an irksome and costly tyranny. Nevertheless the municipal and State authorities are doing the right thing in the right way when they insist upon careful periodic inspection of the dairyman's herd and when they demand perfect cleanliness of surroundings and of the vessels in which he carries his milk to market. Milk is a perfect food when it is pure. It is easily infected and is a violent poison under such circumstances.

The Bulletin thinks existing rules and regulations are wise and right. It believes there should be an extension of sanitary rules and regulations rather than any curtailment. It is a notorious fact that the alarming and costly mortality among children during the months of July and August is largely the result of their food. Sometimes they are permitted to eat articles of food which should never be given to young children, but most frequently sickness or death is the result of feeding them impure milk. Nor is the dairyman always at fault. Circumstances may easily arise which change the pure milk he delivered to the family or the retailer into a pestilent poison. Such incidents are not uncommon.

Thus far the milk depots, from which a very large proportion of the consuming public receives its milk supply have escaped regulation. There is not the slightest reason why this should be so. On the contrary the condition of the milk depots is a matter of quite as much importance as the conditions of the dairy, or the dairyman's herds, or the vessels in which the product of his cows is carried to market. An unsanitary depot would soon reduce the purest milk in the world to a dangerous condition. If anything should happen and the trouble should be traced to the milk the dairyman would be compelled to bear the brunt of public censure, although he might be wholly innocent. That would be unfair.

Under the circumstances it occurs to the Bulletin that it would be distinctly in the interest of the public health if the legislature at its next session would frame a bill and enact it into law providing for the constant oversight of milk depots in towns and cities containing more than 5,000 inhabitants. No careful and cleanly vender of milk would object to such inspection; the fact is he would gladly welcome it for the reason that the finding of the inspector would be a good advertisement for such a dealer. Those who would object are those for whose benefit such a law is necessary. The experience of men who have the faculty of observation teaches them that constant vigilance is the price of cleanliness and good health.

Should some sensible legislator draft an act providing for systematic inspection of milk depots, as indicated in the foregoing remarks, he will do a fine thing for the babes and other children and help to reduce infant mortality in the State. Besides, if the milkman is to be under rules the retail dealer should not be permitted to spoil all by possible carelessness. From the cow to the consumer there should be constant and careful inspection.

CONCERNING ICE CREAM AND ITS SUBSTITUTES.

It has been urged in some quarters that ice cream is not really fit to eat if it be made chiefly of cream. Divers allegations are made concerning the evil effects that would follow if manufacturers would be true to the name of their product and make its principal ingredient genuine cream. The young who have had no actual experience may well be frightened by this clamor and insist upon the continued manufacture of "ice cream" containing everything but cream.

The Bulletin may have some readers who were young before the Civil War came to change conditions and inaugurate new methods in our business and social life. If so they may be able to recall the ice cream they ate in those far off days and to remember that it really was cream. The old-time manufacturer was also the retailer. The ice cream parlor was generally managed by an enterprising widow who took that method to rear her children. She thought ice cream should be chiefly manufactured from cream and acted accordingly.

Genuine ice cream never did anybody any harm. But the time came when the people did not care to pay the price. Some enterprising genius began to make ice milk, still calling it by the old name and selling it at a lower rate than the genuine article could be manufactured for. Of course he got the custom. Why should anyone pay 50 cents for a quart of ice cream when it could be had for 40 or even 35 cents? Later on somebody began to adulterate the milk cream, thickening it with corn starch, gelatine, etc., and still further reducing the price. Competition had produced an inferior article, but it was cheap and that was what the consuming public wanted. The manufacturers are not a whit more to blame than their bargain-hunting patrons.

The Bulletin believes in calling things by their right names. When a manufacturer offers retailers an article which he sells for ice cream it should be precisely what it purports to be. Such goods could not be sold for the prices now most popular. Cream costs money. A good article of genuine ice cream, containing nothing but first-class materials would cost double the price for which the inferior article can be sold. Imitations are usually much cheaper than the thing they imitate, and the person who is satisfied with the imitation should be allowed to have it. But the law should step in and prevent the sale of imitation goods for genuine. Every citizen has the right to enter the open market and buy what he wants, but the law should compel the dealer to tell the exact truth.

We are told that the frozen compounds put on the market and sold to the general public as ice cream—although the existing law demands that compounds which do not comply with the regulations governing the manufacture of ice cream shall not be called ice cream—are composed of entirely harmless substances; that they do not affect the health of the consumer in any way and that their only effect is to provide the public with a cheap and wholesome article so much resembling ice cream as to be mistaken for the same by all but experts. Nevertheless, there are some stomachs upon which the frozen compounds do have an injurious effect. Genuine ice cream—made in the good old-fashioned way—never compels the consumer to realize that he has a stomach. The counterfeits frequently produce extremely disagreeable sensations.

The next legislature should enact a comprehensive and stringent law dealing with the manufacture of ice cream and all frozen compounds. Persons who, insist upon cheapness should be permitted to gratify their whims, but everything should be given its right name. There should be no room left for counterfeits to pose as the genuine article.

THE PROSPEROUS FARMER.

Amid the convulsions of stock exchanges and the frantic efforts of conscienceless speculators to avoid reaping the crop which they have sown, the farmers of Pennsylvania and of the other states of the union are able to look on without other emotion than that general concern which occupies every humane heart at the sight of misfortune, even though that misfortune was invited by the victims. If the farmer is not contented he surely ought to be, for nature and Providence have been very kind to him during the year now drawing to a close.

A little over a decade ago the farmer was probably the most discontented man in the country. He was beset by numerous unfavorable circumstances. He had been the victim of drought and bugs, of floods and worms, of hail and storm and of various other calamities, any one of which was well calculated to put an edge on his temper. And then prices were low, so low, in some instances, that the western farmers found it more profitable to use their corn crops for fuel than to go to the expense of trying to market it. The farmer was in a frame of mind to fly to the support of any demagogue.

But the passing years have wrought a magic change. Sometimes the farmer has been blessed with bumper crops at the very time that a failure of the European crops kept up a brisk demand for American products. So he had a most happy combination—a tremendous harvest of almost everything grown on his fields, with high prices. This year the crops have not equalled in magnitude those of 1906, but prices are away up and the tiller of the soil is reaping a substantial reward. He has to work pretty hard and he has no 8-hour day in his business, but the rewards of his toil are extremely gratifying and will enable him to add considerably to that balance in the bank.

The prosperity of the farmer is a good thing for the man and for the country of which he is so important a factor. The agricultural section of our nation is by far the most important. The farmer feeds us all, thus furnishing the physical force necessary to the successful prosecution of the varied material, intellectual and spiritual enterprises of the republic. If he were to become dissatisfied with the rewards of his toil and declare a general strike the results would be very serious. It is of vital moment that the rewards of his employment be sufficient to encourage him to stay on the farm. It is a very happy circumstance that has checked the tendency to leave the country for the city.

Under such conditions as exist to-day the American farmer is the most independent of beings. He is not troubled about his daily bread or concerning wherewithal he shall be clothed. He produces almost everything essential to comfortable existence upon his farm and he leads a quiet and unexciting life. He toils with great energy during the long days of the spring and summer reserving for the long nights and short days of the winter whatever of vacation hours he may enjoy. But the joy which fills his heart as he looks upon the fruition of his hopes, the completion of the harvest, is something far different from the restless and feverish emotion which moves the magnate of finance or the veteran speculator who prospers upon the misfortunes of his neighbors and friends.

The farmer is not only independent in his possessions and his surroundings, but he is also actually surrounded by many comforts of city life without its distractions, its clamor or its fierce temptations. He may be in instant communication with his neighbors by means of the telephone while the free rural route delivery system brings him his daily news of the outside world every morning. In short, he ought to be a very happy man. His circumstances are well nigh ideal these opening days of the new century.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The successful grocer is good-humored and alert in the business of accommodating his patrons. He has a knack of flattering each customer without seeming to do so. He cultivates the customer's self-esteem and makes him (or her) feel that the grocer would be distressed beyond measure by a withdrawal of custom. He keeps his storeroom bright and clean and has the faculty of arranging his wares in such a way as to attract attention and arouse admiration. He devotes all his energies to the proper management of his business and is always posted concerning new and winning cards in the trade.

This state needs a law regulating the sale of cold storage eggs and another providing a separate penalty for the sale of watered milk. The ordinary customer now finds it a very difficult matter to procure fresh eggs unless he goes to the trouble of raising chickens. We are hearing every day something about the tremendous increase of cold storage business. There ought to be a rigid act of assembly regulating and supervising the sale of this important article of food. Some people are of the opinion that cold storage eggs are no healthier than embalmed beef. And they believe the state should do something to discourage this particular industry.

There is every reason to believe that since the national government has entered upon the work of supervising the quality of the food and drink of the people it will not only continue in the good work but likewise enlarge upon existing laws and regulations and by the addition of proper amendments that will greatly increase the efficiency of the bureau charged with the inspection of food products. While the existing laws is by no means as efficient as it ought to be, it has already done considerable good and its rigid enforcement will promote the public health.

Many of the importers of foreign foods are displeased with the regulation adopted by the three secretaries who have to do with food inspection requiring all labels describing the contents of a package to be printed in English. They complain that they have in some instances been compelled to re-export goods which bore simply a foreign label. Some contend that a French label on a package is a sign of superiority and they allege that no harm is done by the use of such a label, especially if the consumer be able to read French. But the chances are that the rule was adopted for the protection of the great bulk of consumers who can read no language but English and who would therefore be ignorant of the contents of a package the label on which was not in the language of the country.

Dr. S. J. Crumbine, secretary of the State Board of Health of Kansas, has issued an order prohibiting the manufacture or sale in Kansas of distilled or grain, or any other kind of vinegar to which color has been added. Manufacturers were given until November 1 to dispose of stock on hand at the time the order was issued; jobbers until January 1, 1908, and retail dealers until July 1, 1908. This rule is made to protect the manufacturers of genuine cider vinegar from what is regarded as unfair competition. The same officer permits the sale of pickles that have been processed with alum until December 1, 1908, because of the short crop this season and also because the stock now in the hands of dealers has mostly been prepared that way. No further extension of time or indulgence will be granted, it is said.

In a recent issue the "Public Ledger," of Philadelphia, suggested that legislation is urgently needed in this Commonwealth in connection with milk depots. These should all be rigidly inspected by a proper officer at frequent intervals. This inspection should be under the direction of the State. The penalty for violating the rules and regulations established by the State should be from $5 to $25, not enough to embarass an honest man who accidentally permitted his establishment to get below the standard. Should any dealer, however, develop into a chronic offender he should be definitely put out of business. Many serious cases of sickness can be traced to unsanitary milk depots. Nobody should be permitted to handle milk when typhoid fever or any other contagious disease is in the house. Every room in the building should be kept clean and pure and the depot itself should be located in a sanitary place.

Many observant citizens who are carefully watching the slow progress of the national authorities are sorry the Federal Government didn't take up the pure food question many years ago, enacting suitable laws. They realize that a general food law is necessarily very different from the State statutes dealing with similar matters. The federal act must go to the bottom of things. Under the circumstances it will take officials years to get their true bearings and to get down to work zealously and efficiently as agents of the popular demand for pure food and pure beverages. Thus far not a single prosecution has been instituted under the Federal law and many concessions have been made. Some believe that if Dr. Wiley had his own way in everything and was assured of the cordial and consistent support of the three secretaries and the entire strength of the government things would begin to move a little faster.

One hundred samples of candy—principally penny goods—have recently been purchased by agents of the Dairy and Food Division and are now in the hands of various chemists. In due time an official report of the results of the analysis will be made public. The goods were bought in Blair, Venango, Warren, McKean, Allegheny, Washington, Bucks, Berks and Philadelphia counties. If the children are eating poisoned or adulterated goods their parents should be put in possession of the facts. On the other hand if the confectionery is pure manufacturers and dealers are entitled to full credit for their carefulness and their regard for law.

Some of the agents of the Dairy and Food Division are finding certain catsups which contain twice the amount of benzoate of soda that is announced on the label. This is a serious violation of law and a gross deception of the purchaser. The matter is being carefully looked into and in due time prosecutions will be instituted against offenders.

The purpose of food legislation is chiefly to protect the health of the people. The consumer is seldom an expert and even if he were he would not care to take the time or go to the trouble of analyzing every article purchased for home consumption. So the State steps in. Its supreme purpose is to guard the public health against poisonous or adulterated food. If the existing laws of Pennsylvania do this nothing better can be expected. If they do not, if they leave loopholes through which unscrupulous dealers may escape, there will certainly be a serious effort to induce the next legislature to enact a statute that will accomplish the desired end. All the facts will be laid before the lawmakers at the proper time. Then they can act with intelligence, judgment and patriotism.

The Dairy and Food Department of Minnesota has recently been making some inquiries concerning the quality of the eggs placed on sale by the merchants of that State. The action of the department is said by the Grocery World to have had a good effect, merchants having set about to exercise greater care in marketing eggs. They are also disposed to be particular about the eggs they buy. This is a good movement.

At a recent meeting in the rooms of the Business Men's Association, of Philadelphia, E. J. Buckley, Esq., editor of the Grocery World, delivered a short but interesting address in which he declared that the trade is vitally interested in the enforcement of the rules and regulations made in pursuance of the pure food laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. He intimated that some time ago the trade was restive and the consuming public alarmed. This, however, is a phase of the situation which has apparently passed away. He declared that business men and consumers are interested above everything else in getting the exact facts. They want the truth. He was good enough to add that he knew of no better way in which the entire public, dealers and patrons, can receive proper enlightenment than by reading the monthly issues of the Bulletin. At the same meeting William Smedley, secretary of the United Business Men's Association, and also of the Retail Merchants' Association, referred to the sincere and zealous efforts now being made by the retailers to compel manufacturers to obey our law and the rules and regulations made in accordance with its provisions. When the dairy and food officials and agents have the unanimous co-operation of the business men of the State there will be few prosecutions and the consumer will be well served.

The State of Indiana had a food show some weeks ago which was largely attended by an interested public. The affair was held in Indianapolis and is said to have far surpassed all its predecessors in the quantity and the variety of its entertaining features.

The midweek half holiday has been such a success in those communities which have tried it that one is not surprised to hear that an effort is now on foot in Zanesville, Ohio to have it extended so as to embrace the entire year instead of simply the four summer months. After the patrons of grocers and meat dealers become accustomed to the weekly half holiday it would be no particular trouble for them to keep right on observing it. While too many holidays are not good there is an impression abroad that a few hours each week devoted to relaxation pay the employer who is wise enough to provide therefor.

At a recent meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Allegheny county a resolution was adopted providing that "every merchant report to the secretary of this association any violation of the State food law, giving all the information he possibly can, and that the secretary of the association take the matter up with the State Dairy and Food Department." That is unquestionably the proper attitude for retail dealers throughout the State to take. The existing act was framed and enacted largely for the purpose of preventing petty and vexatious annoyance of the trade. It is so constructed as to insure immunity to any retailer who complies with its requirements. It is therefore the duty of the grocers to aid the division, just as this Allegheny county association proposed to do.

With such co-operation we will soon make an end of adulterated or poisoned food products in this Commonwealth.

He who advises retail dealers that if they think well of their trade they will give it the benefit of the best there is, gives wise and judicious counsel. It should be the proud ambition of every dealer in food products to educate his costomers to expect and demand the best brands; goods made by firms that pride themselves upon the fact that they never put their trade mark upon an inferior article. Such a policy will bring rich rewards in the end. For after all, the craze for cheapness is a passing disease and will eventually disappear before the demand for genuine articles.

Out in Michigan a circuit court judge has dissolved an injunction obtained by a meat packing firm against State Pure Food Commissioner Bird, restraining him from prosecuting and issuing bulletins against the said firm for selling sausages alleged to be impure. The sausage contains a certain proportion of cereals and this, in the opinion of the court, is a violation of the State law. In any event the circuit court judge holds that the manufacturers ought to get a decision from the Supreme Court affirming the purity of their sausage. Until they do so he concludes that the State Pure Food Commissioner should be left free to enforce the law as he understands it.

The New York correspondent of the Grocery World remarks that "an immediate effect of the pure food law has been the practical exclusion of the 5-cent bottles of flavoring extracts, about which there has been so much complaint on the part of many people in the trade." This affects the cheaper trade but has no effect upon the venders of higher priced goods.

The threatened advance in the price of milk in Philadelphia has not yet taken place and the chances are that it is to be indefinitely postponed. The dairymen declare that they have been receiving unfair treatment from the venders and that there is really no reason why their request for a more adequate share of the profits should be followed by an increase of price to the private citizen. The evident intention of the public to decline to purchase if the contemplated increase in the retail price were carried out has halted the movement, for the present at least. In the matter of so vital a food supply as milk it is important that the price should be kept as low as possible. The poor need it quite as much as the rich.

Word comes from the national capital that the producers of oleomargarine are going to make a special effort at the coming session of Congress to get rid of the special tax of 10 cents a pound on the product. They intend to make the high price of butter the basis of their plea. It is proposed to have a law prohibiting coloring so that oleomargarine may be put on the market for exactly what it is, no effort being made to palm it off as butter. The butter interests are likely to be as influential at Washington as those behind oleomargarine. And as the country is about to indulge in the expensive luxury of another presidential campaign it is not likely that the Congress will enact any laws at the coming session calculated to anger the dairymen.

Butter containing more than 16 per cent. of moisture is to come under the ban of the national authorities. It is denominated watered butter and is regarded as an adulterated article. However, in future, actions for the sale of watered butter are to be brought against the creameries and not against the dealers who will be regarded as the agents of the creameries.

The Dairy Record, of St. Paul, Minn., gives its patrons some cheery advice in a recent number, advice that is as applicable to grocers as to butter makers: "If once in the while you get the blues, if you think yours is a tough job, if the patrons are kicking without reason, if your starters go off for no apparent cause, if your butter is poor, if your best girl leaves you—just think of the hundreds of thousands of people that are far worse off than you and thank your stars that you are living and that very, very likely everything will come out all right—that is if you yourself will help matters along a little.

THE UNSANITARY GROCERY.

H. E. Bernard, State Food and Drug Commissioner of Indiana, has been making an inspection of the grocery stores of his State. He publishes the result of his visitation, stating that out of 481 stores inspected, seventeen were found in excellent sanitary condition, 170 were good, 229 were fair, 250 poor and thirteen bad. Concerning the result of his inspection Mr. Bernard remarks:

"The grocery store or market is the distributing agent of the food manufacturer. It is probable that ninety-five per cent. of our food passes through the hands of the grocer or meat man. The prosperous merchant is usually awake to the fact that his business will suffer if his shop is not attractive and his stock fresh. But in every community there are some dealers whose meat blocks are unclean and covered with flies, whose refrigerators are slimy and foul smelling, whose back rooms are filled with accumulated filth, whose cellars are damp and dirty, whose dried fruits are wormy, whose fruits and vegetables are decayed and whose cat sleeps in the cracker barrel."

It appears that an enterprising editor took the figures of Commissioner Bernard and proceeded to write a highly sensational article which he printed in his magazine. The Inland Grocer strongly objects to this action, declaring that some of the statements in the magazine seem to be exaggerated while the whole article will have a bad effect, something similar to Upton Sinclair's stories about conditions in and about many of the packing houses. And yet there is something to be said on the other side. The agitation concerning the packing house situation bore excellent fruit in the Federal meat inspection law and in the act passed by our own Legislature at its recent session. It is nauseating to read some of the things told by investigators, but if the revelations are true and if the purpose of the publication be to protect the public from careless or filthy employes in packing houses or groceries, it is fully justified.

THE ASSAULT ON AGENT MILLER.

A singular incident of short-sightedness occurred in Pittsburg some weeks ago. Agent Miller, of the Dairy and Food Division, visited a grocery and purchased samples of oleomargarine, acting in accordance with his instructions. Soon after he left the store the proprietors, two brothers, overtook him. They assaulted him with great violence; threw him to the sidewalk and proceeded to rob him of the article he had just purchased from them. Agent Miller was somewhat bruised and cut up in the affray. He immediately brought suit against the two men who had assailed him, charging them with highway robbery, assault and battery and felonious assault. They were arrested and the State will push the case with all possible vigor.

Such incidents are few and far between. The overwhelming majority of the oleo dealers of Pennsylvania are orderly, well-behaved citizens. They realize that the agents of the Dairy and Food Division are also the representatives of the Commonwealth. They understand that an agent has the same right to make a purchase that any citizen has and that after he has paid for an article it is his property or the property of the State whose agent he is. They do not consciously and deliberately violate law. If they have any articles in stock that are adulterated or misbranded they are willing to co-operate with the State in the important work of securing absolutely pure food for the people.

The two oleo dealers in Pittsburg were guilty of a very foolish criminal action. They practically assaulted and robbed the State when they maltreated Agent Miller. They will be compelled to face the power of the State when their case comes to trial. It will be quite out of the question to let them go, for the reason that men who act as they did must be taught that they cannot afford to take the law into their own hands. Their punishment is necessary also by way of admonition and example.

REGULATING THE SALE OF PATENT MEDICINES.

The German government has quite recently put into effect certain decidedly stringent rules and regulations concerning the sale of patent medicines. As one of the Bulletin's valued exchanges remarks, this excellent example will almost certainly be imitated by the government of the United States in the not distant future. Following is a short summary of the provisions of the German law:

It enacts that the exteriors of bottles, tins and other vessels containing medical compounds shall bear conspicuously printed upon them (A) the name and address of the firms manufacturing them and (B) the name and address of the retailer who sells them. (This does not apply to wholesalers.)

It forbids the use of any written or printed statement in praise of the article or compound, any testimonial or recommendation or anything in the nature of an advertisement or an inducement to buy.

Chemists and other retailers are required to know the ingredients of the compounds if they sell them on their own responsibility. Where they do not or cannot know the ingredients of the articles and compounds they are forbidden to sell them except by order of a qualified doctor, dentist or veterinary surgeon (in the latter case the article must be for the use of animals only), and a separate order, duly signed and dated, must be received for each separate supply. The retailers must also see that medicines, which they can only supply to the order of one of those qualified practitioners, bear labels which conspicuously state their condition.

Lengthy lists of patent medicines governed by these restrictions have been officially circulated, and it is enacted that public advertisements of the articles mentioned is strictly prohibited, the term advertisements to include anything and everything whatsoever in the nature of an advertisement, directly or indirectly, such as an announcement offering to supply on request printed matter, the object of which is to further sales.

While some of the crusades against patent medicines may have been inaugurated and carried on from sinister or sensational motives, it is very evident that the step already taken by our government to compel the manufacturers to disclose the nature of the contents of medicines has done much good. What has been done should be regarded merely as the beginning of a needed effort to protect the credulous or the despairing invalid from the depredations of manufacturers of compounds which cure nothing, but which too frequently create dangerous and degrading habits.

It is said by thoroughly conscientious chemists who have taken the pains to investigate some of the catarrh remedies and other preparations that they are composed largely of dangerous drugs. The victim of disease, attracted by the glowing language of the advertisements and the wonderful testimonials which accompany them is tempted to use them and does so. In every instance the relief which he experiences is illusory and too often he finds himself the victim of a habit from which it is very difficult to free himself. He is an ignorant victim of deadly drugs.

If some such regulations were in force in our country as the foregoing the suffering public would be much better guarded than they are at present, although it is much better now than before the enactment of the national food and drugs law. When one is sick and the ministrations of the family physician do not seem to be followed by good results one is tempted to grasp at every straw that presents itself. That is one reason why the patent medicine trade is such a prosperous business. Men and women long for a restoration to their former health. Hence their willingness to experiment with a new medicine every time an attractive advertisemnt falls into their hands.

The Bulletin believes each family should have a reputable and experienced physician to whom those who are ill should unfold their symptoms. It believes that the best results follow a special preparation for each individual case. For that reason it urges care in the use of patent medicines and increasing severity in government regulations.

SECRETARY WILSON'S RULING.

The following article appears in a recent number of the Grocery World. It indicates that there is a great deal of uncertainty about the policy of the national secretary of agriculture and some feebleness of purpose which threatens mischief:

For months there has been speculation among the trade as to whether the Federal food authorities had or had not given specific permission to the Louisiana molasses manufacturers and the California evaporated fruit interests to use more sulphur than F. I. Decision, No. 76, permitted, i. e., thirty-five one thousands of 1 per cent. Practically all manufacturers of the two lines of products named are using more than the above percentage of sulphur and it has been widely stated that they are doing so with the positive sanction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

It has been said by some that this sanction was given by word of mouth and by others that it was given by letter but up to this time no letter granting definite permission has been produced.

The "Grocery World" now presents the text of a letter signed by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson which for the first time clearly shows as a matter of record the position of the Department on this highly important question. The letter was addressed to a well known molasses handler of New Orleans, La., and bore the signature of James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture. In part it is as follows:—

"I gave the California people assurance that I would not take them into Court if they were doing the best they could along the line of sulphur, even if they did use more than was permitted by F. I. D. 76. Of course, I have said the same to your people (molasses manufacturers), and I do not think there need be any apprehension with regard to your handling of this coming crop."

"The California people wanted me to abrogate or suspend the ruling—I cannot do that. It was made in conformity with the law and agreed to by the three Secretaries. I can refuse to prosecute where I am not satisfied that people should be prosecuted. We can modify the decision, and if we find from further investigation that it should be modified, we shall do so. Just assure them that they should go on with their business and everything will come out all right. If it be found that Decision 76 may be well modified, it will be modified."

The above seems to be as definite as anything short of an official regulation can be, yet the fact remains that it is not a regulation, but is rather a permission to temporarily evade a regulation. For this reason the Pennsylvania courts, if the above were looked to for protection against dried fruit prosecutions where the sample contained more than 35-1,000 of 1 per cent., would probably refuse to allow it to be considered.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name, and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all of the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Approved:
N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. (Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device, and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 11. (Issued September 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSION. SUPPLEMENT NO. 2 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE NO. 11. EVAPORATED FRUITS.

Rule 11. It should be understood by the trade and the public that Rule 2, specifically referring to meat and other articles of food, covers evaporated fruits, and that if said fruits contain any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health, such as sulphurous acid, the sale thereof will be treated as a violation of the law.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rules Nos. 12 and 13. (Issued October 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION. SUPPLEMENT NO. 3 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 12, LABELS. RULE 13, SODIUM BENZOATE AND BENZOIC ACID.

Rule 12. Numerous requests are referred to this Division for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Pennsylvania Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907. This Act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any Agent of the Division, to approve labels. The Division, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Division has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

Rule 13. No prosecutions will be based upon the manufacture, sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, foods and food products manufactured or packed during the season of 1907 which contains sodium benzoate in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, provided sodium benzoate or benzoic acid has hitherto been generally used in such foods and food products; and provided further that sodium benzoate or benzoic acid is not used in connection with coal-tar dyes or any foreign coloring matter.

The label of each package of food or food products containing sodium benzoate or benzoic acid shall bear a statement that the food contains one-tenth of 1 per cent. of sodium benzoate, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, as the case may be.

JAMES FOUST,

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURING, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is specially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th of May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

OF THE

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT THE OFFICE OF THE STATE PRINTER OF PENNSYLVANIA,

HARRISBURG, PA.

Issued by Direction of Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—W. H. SCHWARTZ.
MANAGING EDITOR—OLIVER D. SCHOCK.

NOTE.

This publication relates to the operation of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture. It is distributed to those who are interested in the work of enforcing the dairy and food laws of this Commonwealth. Each number gives a brief resume of the work accomplished by the Commissioner and his force of assistants during the preceding month.

By authority of law, nearly twenty-five thousand copies are distributed monthly. The bulk of this large edition reaches grocers and general storekeepers, while the miscellaneous list includes the representative people of this and adjoining states who are interested in the enforcement of the dairy and food laws.

A strong, hearty public sentiment in favor of pure and better articles of food and drink has been aroused, and whether the comparatively small tradesmen come under the ban, who might possibly complain, because of the publicity given to suits brought against them, or whether a business produces millions for the investor, the same publicity is accorded to all in the columns of the Monthly Bulletin. This medium of publicity has already accomplished an almost incalculable amount of good, and assisted very materially in successfully enforcing the various acts of Assembly placed under the administration of this Division.

The several lists giving the names of licensed oleomargarine and renovated butter dealers which appear in this number, are especially noteworthy for those interested in the sale of these commodities. This list includes all licenses granted up to and including December 15, 1907.

The Commissioner has instructed the Special Agents of this Division of the Department of Agriculture to make a careful examination in their several districts for unlicensed or illegal dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter. Violators of the law will be promptly arrested and punished when the evidence is regarded as sufficient to secure a conviction.

The Commissioner recognizes the fact that this is due to all concerned, as the licensed dealer is entitled to the protection of the law, and the unlicensed vendor will not be permitted to escape his responsibility for disregarding legislation which was enacted for mutual protection.

The hearty co-operation accorded, and the friendly help extended by the public and the press generally, demands grateful acknowledgment. Without their support, the best efforts would in many cases have been thwarted or rendered futile.

STATE INSPECTION OF MEATS.

Among the more important measures passed by the Legislature at its regular session was the act "To protect the public health by providing for the prevention of the preparation and sale of meat and food products which are unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, and otherwise unfit for human food; defining what shall be regarded as meat and meat food products; authorizing the employment and compensation of local meat inspectors; authorizing the State Livestock Sanitary Board to enforce the provisions of this act, to make rules and regulations for its enforcement, and to appoint agents for its enforcement; and to provide penalties for the violation or perversion thereof." That is the complete title of the measure and it gives the reader a comprehensive view of the act's purpose and scope.

The national government took a long step in the right direction when it enacted its food inspection law and provided for official inspection of all meats and meat products prepared for interstate commerce or for export to foreign countries. The enactment of the law was precipitated by some rather sensational revelations, dealing with the alleged unsanitary condition of many of the large packing houses and with the uncleanly methods and surroundings of the employes. The packers charged that much that was said concerning their establishments was pure exaggeration. It may be so. But the final result was good all around. It furnished protection to the consumer and the certificate of the Federal inspectors is a recommendation of the packers' products.

The Pennsylvania act is supplemental to the Federal law. It proposes to furnish a proper oversight of local enterprises, of state-limited slaughter houses and other establishments where animals are killed or where meat and meat products are prepared for the market. The enforcement of this act is delegated to the State Livestock Sanitary Board, but the actual work is done by Dr. Leonard Pearson, State Veterinarian, and his capable assistant, Louis A. Klein. Both these gentlemen have devoted themselves with great energy and much intelligence to the enforcement of the law and they deserve great praise for the very practical results which have followed their efforts. The State Veterinarian has also been fortunate in the agents who have been appointed under the provisions of the act to assist in the protection of the public against unfit or unhealthy meat or meat products. The people will probably never know just what they have been guarded against by the untiring efforts of Dr. Pearson and his careful and enthusiastic assistants. The result of their investigations shows that the law was needed. Peculiar dangers lurk in diseased meat, dangers which can only be surely guarded against by careful and intelligent inspection by vigilant and competent officers. Dr. Pearson deserves hearty congratulations upon the organization of his important work.

ADULTERATING TOMATO CATSUP.

A few years ago about one-half of the catsup contained artificial coloring matter and starch. It was the practice at many of the canneries to gather up all the waste products, the water, the rotten parts of the tomato, the skins, and after pressing the water and tomato parts, ship the same to the makers of catsup under the name of tomato pulp. This stuff was very little better than colored water, dirty colored water, at that. Starch was added in liberal quantities to give it body. Then coal tar dye was added to give it the required brilliancy to make it a good marketable product.

This disreputable and uncleanly practice has been largely broken up under the provisions of the National pure food law. Only one sample containing artificial coloring matter was purchased in Pennsylvania during 1907. But there is another matter requiring attention and caution. The National rules and the State rules and regulations allow the use of one-tenth of one per centum of sodium benzoate in articles of food in which it has been used heretofore. The fact must be stated on the label. However, in Eastern Pennsylvania, out of thirty different brands of catsup collected by the agents of the Dairy and Food Division and analyzed by one of the most eminent chemists in the State, twenty were found to contain twice the quantity of benzoate of soda allowed by the rules and regulation. This is clearly a violation of the misbranding feature of the law.

Since the law has been defied and the rules and regulations made in accordance with law ignored and since it is the conviction of those who have given the matter careful attention that such a quantity of this preservative is injurious to health, prosecutions will follow. This will be the result of carelessness or indifference upon the part of those who prepare and those who sell articles of food thus adulterated and misbranded. It will be done reluctantly but resolutely and impartially, in the interest of the public health and in defense of law. In the meantime the Bulletin wishes to urge upon retail merchants, wholesalers and jobbers who sell catsup the wisdom of getting an indemnifying bond from the manufacturer guaranteeing that the goods purchased do not contain more than one-tenth of one per centum of benzoate of soda. This caution may well be exercised in the purchase of other goods also. Under the circumstances no risks should be taken by retailers or other dealers. If they ignore the advice of the Bulletin and continue to take risks they will have nobody but themselves to blame in the event of trouble.

COLORS AND PRESERVATIVES.

In a recent article on the pure food law, Dr. Thomas J. Bryan, food analyst, had this to say about colors and preservatives:

Some of the preservatives which have been in common use in this country have been studied with a great amount of care by the United States Department of Agriculture. According to their investigations formaldehyde, saccharine, salicylic acid, boric acid, and fluoroids have been found to have injurious effects upon the human system when used in very small quantities for the preservation of food. These preservatives cannot, therefore, be used in the manufacture of any salable food products from this time on. Preservatives other than household preservatives when used in standard food products must be indicated by a statement on the label giving the kind and maximum amount used. Only harmless preservatives may be used.

Color is used in a great variety of food products. Most of the colors used to-day are undoubtedly harmless in the small quantities in which they are used. They are introduced to please the eye, to conceal inferiority, or to make an article appear better than it really is. There are two classes of colors which are in general use—vegetable colors and synthetic colors or coal tar dyes. The first class is generally held to be harmless, and the second class has frequently been condemned as a whole as being injurious to the human system.

The colors offered for sale for use in foods are now in all cases subjected to such tests by the most reputable manufacturers, and although it would not be wise to leave the question of the injurious quality of color entirely in their hands, we may safely say that no manufacturer will willfully sell a poisonous color for use in food products which would subsequently cause him a loss of trade through a reduction in the number of consumers. Color, when used in any standard food product, is an adulteration, and must be indicated on the label by some such word or words as "Colored," or "Artificially Colored," or "Colored with aniline color," etc.

Citric acid is often added instead of lemon juice to give a tart flavor to jams and preserves. Standard goods which are rendered not standard by the addition of citric acid may be sold if it is clearly stated upon the label that the substance contains added citric acid. In other words, we may state a general principle that any food product that is not standard, if it be not unwholesome, may be sold if it is so clearly labeled that the purchaser not only can, but must, understand the nature of the substance he is buying.

This same principle will apply to the manufacture of goods which are not up to standard by reason of the intention of the manufacturer to make an article of inferior grade. This is illustrated very clearly in the case of extracts. The standard for lemon extract requires five per cent. of oil of lemon by volume dissolved in ethyl alcohol. There are many inferior extracts on the market containing from three to one per cent. of oil of lemon. If these possess true flavoring value, they may be sold if the percentage of oil of lemon be clearly stated on the label in the same sized type as the words "Lemon Extract." Vanilla extract contains the extractive matter of ten grams of vanilla bean in 100 cubic centimeters. An extract containing the extractive matter of five grams of vanilla bean in the same volume would clearly be of one-half the standard strength, and is salable when so labeled, "One-half Standard Strength Vanilla Extract." Mixtures of pepper and pepper shells can doubtless also be sold if labels state clearly and truthfully what they are. As regards the value of such extracts and spices to the customer, we may readily believe that he who purchases the standard goods will get very much more flavor in proportion for his money than he who purchases goods that are not standard.

The food officials of the United States Department of Agriculture, and those of the different states, are being continually asked by the manufacturers of goods not up to the standard whether this or that label will answer the requirements of the law. Many manufacturers have expressed great disappointment at not having received answers to letters addressed to Washington upon such matters, and the same disappointment has been felt at like treatment by very many if not all of the State food commissions. Replies to such communications are frequently withheld because the food official himself does not know exactly how to interpet the law in that special case as it is represented to him.

THE PURE FOOD MOVEMENT.

The agitation for better protection of the public from adulterated food products has already secured some notable results. Encouraged by what has been done, the men and women who are interested in this important matter can be depended upon to maintain the enthusiasm which led to the initiation of the movement and to press forward unweariedly to further and more substantial victories.

Among those who deserve great credit for their intelligent activity in this matter the Bulletin believes Miss Alice Lakey, of Cranford, N. J., merits special mention. Miss Lakey is the very efficient chairman of the pure food committee of the National Consumers' League, an organization that was active and influential in securing the passage of the food and drugs act and in defeating mischievous amendments intended to neutralize its influence. She has been energetic and earnest and has been able to render great service to the pure food propaganda.

The Chicago Record-Herald recently published a pure food edition to which Miss Lakey contributed a very interesting article describing the progress of the pure food movement with particular reference to the work of the committee of which she is the head. After describing what has already been done she proceeds to outline plans for the future, as follows:

"1. To secure annually the appropriation of a sufficient sum from Congress to enforce the Federal pure food and meat inspection laws.

"2. To secure the enactment of a model and uniform state food law and the establishment of adequate food standards and definitions.

"3. To secure the administration of the state laws and especially the publication in each state of a monthly bulletin showing in detail the work of enforcement.

"4. To work specifically to secure a supply of clean, pure milk in every state.

"5. To secure sanitary conditions in connection with the manufacture, storage and sale of all food products.

"6. To secure the protection of the health and welfare of employes in all establishments for the manufacture of food products.

"7. To urge consumers to study labels and to refuse to buy products condemned by official chemists."

The committee of which Miss Lakey is chairman is now devoting its time and energies to the work of procuring needed amendments to the Federal laws and inducing the several states to secure local pure food laws that will not copy the defects of the Federal measure. The matter of meat inspection will likewise be given much earnest attention. It is a great satisfaction to those who are charged with the enforcement of laws intended to preserve the public health from the effects of adulterated food products to know that they have the support and assistance of such enthusiastic and tireless men and women as Miss Lakey and her associates of the National Consumers' League.

THE OPTIMISTIC DR. WILEY.

One of the most interesting personalities of the present day is Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry, and the man who is charged primarily with the interpretation and enforcement of the Federal food and drugs act. Naturally enough, Dr. Wiley is one of the men most talked about in this country. There is a great variety of opinions. For one thing it was charged against him that he was responsible for the advance in prices. His rules and regulations, his prying into the composition of things, his insistence upon labels that exactly described the contents of the package, and his various other activities imposed such burdens upon manufacturers and others, we were gravely told, that the increase in prices was inevitable.

Soon after the financial stringency began to make its disagreeable presence manifest some of those who were hunting around for some of the causes drew attention to Dr. Wiley's baleful activities, and strongly declared that his interpretations of the food and drugs act were responsible for the disappearance of currency from the market and the other inconveniences and perils which momentarily threatened the country and its people. Some of us who have felt that the doctor has not been as active as he might have been feel like reconstructing our conclusions. At any rate, he shall be permitted to speak for himself. Unaffected by the criticism of which he and his work are the subjects and feeling that better things are presently about to make themselves felt, he maintainns a cheerful optimism and believes that the future will more than justify all his conclusions. In a recently published interview he is reported to have said:

"I have no desire to injure anyone's business nor have I any objection to foods being sold under their proper names, but I do object to manufacturers deceiving the public. I have for instance, no objection to my old friend glucose, but I do object to his being called honey; or when mixed with hayseed and coal tar dye, strawberry jam.

"Legitimate food business cannot be ruined; it is only the manufacturers who deceive the public that are hurt by the pure food laws.

"The time is coming, and coming soon, when we shall have pure foods in every line. Already many of the worst offenders have reformed, and in the drug business every one of the great manufacturers is doing his utmost to comply with the law. Laws are of force only when public sentiment is back of them, and public sentiment is back of the pure food laws.

"I look forward to the time when we shall have New Orleans molasses as it was 'befo' de wah,' and when white flour shall be no longer used for bread. Within the last year there has been a revolution in the drug trade and people are now reasonably certain of getting physicians' prescriptions properly filled. This work must continue despite all the protests about 'hurting business,' until all food and drugs are sold upon an absolutely ethical basis."

SOME DIFFICULTIES OUT IN WYOMING.

Out in Wyoming the officers charged with the analysis of food products offered for sale in that state and with the prosecution of those dealers charged with selling adulterated goods have been holding conferences lately to consider a proposition submitted to them by some of the manufacturers and jobbers who ship goods into the state. The practice of the state food commissioner hitherto has been to prosecute all dealers in food products found by the state chemist to be in violation of the pure food laws. The minimum penalty is $50 and a large amount of money has been collected from unfortunate dealers. Under the laws of Wyoming the money goes to the counties in which the convictions are had.

It is said the manufacturers and jobbers have now requested that the rules and regulations in force in Wyoming be modified so as to permit of the removal of goods which come under the ban there, but which may be lawfully sold in other states where the laws are less stringent. In their communication to the commissioner and his assistants the jobbers and manufacturers say: "Technically we may be found guilty, but morally we have committed no wrong, and we desire some modification of the rules of the commission that will permit us to collect and remove articles condemned by the commission and which have gotten into Wyoming by mistake or under a misapprehension of the meaning of the rules of the board."

The meaning of this seems to be that if the state chemist discovers that any retailer in Wyoming is selling food products which are adulterated within the meaning of the law, the state commission shall notify the retailer who will in turn inform the jobber or manufacturer from whom the purchase was made, at the same time ceasing to sell the article. The person or firm that shipped the condemned goods into the state will then remove them. Under such an arrangement there would be no prosecution of anybody and the jobbers or manufacturers would simply remove their goods and send them somewhere else, presumably into a state yet lagging behind in the crusade for better and purer food.

The Wyoming commission should procure a copy of the Pennsylvania act and study it. As the readers of the Bulletin know, under the provisions the retailer who takes pains to obey it in every particular is exempt from prosecution. If there has been an offense committed by the manufacturer that fact is communicated to the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington, provided the manufacturer's business is carried on in another state. If his plant be located in Pennsylvania he is taken care of by the state authorities under our own laws. This regulation gives the retailer complete protection and also insures the sale of pure foods to the consuming public. It might suit the people of Wyoming better than the proposition of the jobbers and manufacturers.

ENTHUSIASM IN BUSINESS.

The publication entitled "Salesmanship," contained an article recently about "enthusiasm." It was directed primarily to the salesman and the purpose was to impress upon his mind the great truth that he willl not make a success out of his business unless he be animated by enthusiasm. It affirms that the world is tired of lukewarm people. It might have said with truth that it has been tired of them from the very beginning. The man who has no sparkle in his eye, no animation in his voice, no expressive warmth in his countenance is not going to win out in any enterprise upon which he embarks.

The following extracts are worthy the attention of all men, young or old, who desire to score successfully in the strenuous game of life:

"The men who get a hearing are the irrepressibles. The men who are chosen by their comrades as leaders are not always the men who know the most or are best fitted for leadership; they're generally the men whose intense faith in themselves and their fitness has inspired others' faith.

"A man of mediocre ability but of mighty enthusiasm rises to an emergency better than the man of great endowments who lacks the power to put his whole soul into his purposes. Without enthusiasm a man is like a watch without a mainspring. It isn't so much what a man knows as the degree of energy with which he applies his knowledge that counts for results.

"Enthusiasm is a principle in business getting. You don't spend your money with the merchant who sends you a formal impersonal letter saying that he has goods to sell and expects you to buy. You might as well try to thaw out a frozen pipe by applying ice-cake, as to interest a customer in your proposition unless you are interested yourself.

"Put your heart into your business. Warm up to the work in hand. Forget, while you're trying to make a sale, that there's anything else worth doing."

If the agents and officers of the dairy and food division cherish the sentiments contained in the foregoing extract and carry them into practice in the daily performance of their duties, who shall blame them? Surely not the people of Pennsylvania whom they serve. And if they endeavor by every honest and honorable means to impart their enthusiasm for pure food to the retail dealers of the State, and, for that matter, to the wholesalers also and the manufacturers, they will be doing only what the State expects of them. Much has already been accomplished. Much yet remains to be done. But things are moving in the right direction. Presently the National authorities and the servants of the State will develop plans which will allow them to work energetically and harmoniously toward a common end—the preservation of the public health by the rigid exclusion from the market of all food products which have been adulterated by poisonous or other ingredients.

THE GROCER'S WIFE.

From the far off Pacific coast comes a generous word for a too often neglected factor in the grocer's success. As the Bulletin in its effort to make itself increasingly helpful to the trade as well as to the consuming public knows that it must depend upon the good and sensible women who are the real heads of so many happy and prosperous households, it takes much pleasure in reproducing the following extract from an article in the "Oregon Tradesman" concerning the "Grocer's Wife:"

"Truly the helpmeet of the grocer deserves a good deal of attention at the hands of the trade press, for she it is who exercises the greatest influence over his life and its course, from the lady who clerks in her husband's store to the richly clad fair one who sweeps into the palatial offices of the rich city merchant, along the entire line of gradation between.

"The wife of the grocer may be a tower of strength or a source of weakness, depending upon her personality and her will. She may help him almost infinitely, or she may be a drag upon him. We know a grocer's wife who helps. She does not clerk in the store, for he does not need her there. His business prospers, but not through her personal appearance behind the counter. But she is a lady of ability and charm. She has made friends of the entire community of people. They know her and know that she is willing to help in anything which pertains to community life and prosperity.

"She is cheerful and ready to assist the needy and her home life with her husband and small family is a lesson to others. While her assistance is not of the direct kind, nevertheless it is far from small. She has established her family as one of the best in the part of the town in which they live and elevated the reputation of her husband above that of a mere purveyor of groceries into the dignity of a merchant who has the best interests and welfare of his town at heart.

"She has not done this without his assistance, but without her influence he would never have thought of half the things he does and which help to establish him, not only as a man but as a business man. She has given tone to his store, which is something worth doing."

The "Tradesman" goes on to speak of a less desirable and less helpful woman, but as the Bulletin is built along optimistic lines it declines to go into that branch of the subject. It does believe that the young unmarried grocer should straightway begin to look about him, putting all his business tact and energy to work in the effort to secure a wife who will be a real helpmeet in his business adventures. Many a man has been made by a wise and resolute wife and no man who has been fortunate enough to win the affections of a good woman but realizes that almost every success that has come to him has been the result of her gracious counsel and loving sympathy. There is nothing in this world the equal of a really good woman. That is the experience of all men who have lived with such.

AGAIN THE SOFT DRINK QUESTION.

H. C. Stiefel, Ph. D., Pittsburgh, Pa.

The effervescent drink called "pop" is made by carbonating sweetened, flavored, and usually, colored water.

Before the discovery of saccharine and the brilliant aniline dyes, "pop" was sweetened with cane sugar, and if a color and flavor were desired sarsaparilla extract was added.

With the advent of saccharine and the aniline dyes, unscrupulous manufacturers cheapened the cost of making the drink by the use of these two articles. The difference in the resultant beverage is shown by the following analyses:

Charm Pop, white:

Sugar,	6.85 per cent.

J. C. Buffum's Red Pop:

Pure Food Brand:

Sugar,	6.98 per cent.
Red vegetable color,	0.08 per cent.

Acme Brand, Red Pop:

Saccharine,	1.08 per cent.
Aniline dye,	0.26 per cent.

We have here the two extremes, an absolutely pure white and colored pop, and one of the other kind.

The failure to pass a law prohibiting the manufacture of this so-called "pop" would be an injustice to the honest manufacturer and an incentive to the unscrupulous to continue the manfacture and sale of their concoctions.

SCRUTINY OF BREAKFAST FOODS.

Under the above title the "National Stockman" indulges in the following interesting statements and reflections:

"Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust of Pennsylvania has sent to the chemists samples of all the breakfast foods on the market for analysis. The result will be interesting, and one cannot help but wonder how much more nutrition there is in these foods than is claimed. It is a matter of common knowledge that much of the inferior grain and screenings on the market goes to breakfast food manufacturers—which ones we do not know, but probably not all of them use inferior stuff. And as long as the public is satisfied to eat it there can be no objection, provided nothing injurious to health is used. This is an example of the power of advertising. The public is led by effective advertising to pay high prices for foods made of the most inferior material while it kicks like the proverbial steer over every advance in the very best meats and breadstuffs."

PREPARATIONS CONTAINING ALCOHOL.

The Bulletin has more than once regretted the fact that Pennsylvania has no law regulating the sale of beverages consumed by the people. It has given some incisive facts to show how drinks are adulterated—both soft drinks and alcoholic beverages—and it has expressed the hope that the Legislature will take the matter up at its next session and supply the lacking legislation. Ohio has a law which apparently gives the dairy and food commissioner of that state considerable authority and imposes upon him large responsibilities by way of protecting the people against alcoholic preparations under the guise of medicines. These preparations cannot be sold in the ordinary way as the following extracts from a circular issued by Dairy and Food Commissioner Dunlap indicate:

"Proprietary medicines and beverages which contain alcohol in sufficient proportion to render them intoxicating, and do not contain a sufficient proportion of medicinal agents to prevent their being used as intoxicants, are deemed to be intoxicating liquors within the meaning of the law.

"The sale of such preparations, except for medicinal purposes, upon the written prescription of a regular physician engaged in the practice of medicine, renders the seller liable to the payment of the Aikin Liquor Tax, and to all other restrictions placed by the laws of Ohio upon the sale of intoxicating liquors.

"Beers, ales and porters, spirituous or vinous liquors, whether sold under their true names or under other names used as a disguise, should be sold in the manner prescribed by law.

"Evidence received by this department indicates that the following preparations come within the class of intoxicating liquors as above defined, to-wit.: Duffy's Malt Whiskey, Pabst Malt and Hops, 'Swankey,' Rye Phosphate, Prima Tonic, Hop Tonic, Ideal Tonic, 'Beverage,' 'Rikk,' Schlitz Malt Extract, 'Ritz,' Hard Cider, or cider artificially fortified by addition of alcohol."

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Public sentiment throughout the country is rapidly developing in favor of laws severely restricting the sale of cocaine, one of the most dangerous of drugs. The latest commonwealth to wheel into line was Illinois, where an anti-cocaine act was passed without opposition in either branch. It imposes a heavy penalty upon the individual who sells that drug at retail.

Some time ago the city of Galveston provided for the erection of a public abattoir outside the city limits. The time has arrived for putting the new arrangement into effect, but the contractor who agreed to build the abattoir has not yet carried out his agreement. The city decides that the butchers must close their small plants inside the city and the result is much confusion and uncertainty. The refusal to grant another extension of time looks rather arbitrary, under the circumstances.

Delaware has a new food law which went into effect in November. The new rules prepared by the state officials under the law have not yet been made public, but some Delaware people are expecting that great improvement will result, especially in the local meat trade. The Delaware act will supplement the Federal law, and will reach those who are not engaged in interstate trade.

"Eli Grocer" is prompted to wander from the straight path of dry narration occasionally, as witness the following jibe at a very worthy man: "A Wichita, Kan., grocer is afflicted with a curious trouble. The hair of his beard is growing inward. The doctors do not understand him. Either he has been eating too many prunes or some customer came in and paid him with real cash money, thus scaring his whiskers in."

North Dakota's law regulating the labeling of foods and beverages in package form is one of the strictest in the Union. Professor E. F. Ladd, State Food Commissioner, notified the trade some weeks ago that he would begin to enforce the law with much greater stringency that ever before after November 9. He wanted everybody to have ample warning so that if any got into trouble it could not be said that they were taken unaware. It is said by those who know him that the Commissioner is a man of his word.

There is trouble between the State Pure Food Commissioner of Nebraska and some of the packing houses. The Commissioner alleges that the packers have been violating the Nebraska regulation requiring the net weight to be stamped on all packages of meat, and has begun some prosecutions. We hear that the trouble is over the technical form in which meats shall be marked or branded. Let us hope an honorable compromise may be reached. Of course it ought to be a compromise which recognizes the omnipotence of law.

Dealers in coffee and also consumers will be interested in the statement that the Bureau of Chemistry of the National Department of Agriculture has finally received an official document from the Government of Holland in which the Dutch government deals specifically with the extent of territory which it considers included in the word "Java." As the "Spice Mill" says, "the report will be of great weight in determining the position to be taken by the Bureau of Chemistry in the matter of branding coffee as "Java" or otherwise. The coffee interests have held that the term "Java" is a trade term rather than a geographical designation.

Some enterprising grocers who live in not too large communities increase their trade by keeping on the lookout for newcomers to the town to whom they address personal letters, or to whom they may even make personal and friendly visits. This is taking a leaf from the note book of the more aggressive and wideawake churches. Men are fond of recognition. One who comes to a strange town to live is grateful, as a rule, for the friendly glance or voice. He knows nothing about grocers and is likely to become a permanent customer of the one who is enterprising enough to recognize his existence and give him a friendly invitation to call and look around, even if he doesn't want to buy.

The new pure food law of the state of Louisiana becomes effective January 1. Its enforcement has been placed in the hands of the State Board of Health. We are told that the board has prepared itself for public service by making a careful and complete study of the laws and regulations of the other states and that its new regulations, which have been prepared as the result of such comprehensive study, are unusually complete and promise to leave few loopholes for escape. Public hearings have been given many trade interests and will be continued from time to time, all questions affecting canned goods and the labels of all classes of foods being taken up and carefully considered.

New and very stringent regulations have recently been put into effect by the food commissioners of North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois. Under the regulations adopted it will be illegal to sell vanilla extract that contains any coloring matter or which does not contain information on the label of both carton and bottle giving the net weight or measure, percentage of alcohol by volume, and the true name and business address of the manufacturer. Druggists will be affected by the resolution prohibiting the sale of soda fountain syrups and crushed fruits containing any preservative other than sugar, and by another regulation making it illegal to sell solutions of coumarin and vanillin unless they are labeled as such and contain no artificial coloring.

"Eli Grocer," which keeps its eyes and ears open for the benefit of retailers, urges the importance of using every legitimate advertising method. It believes there is advantage to be gained by the adoption of a particular shade of wrapping paper and adhering to it year in and year out. It notices a couple of the objections, which it brushes away, suggesting: "If you wrap in blue paper, or any other color, and some farmer whose trade you want sees a neighbor whose judgment he respects carrying home a parcel wrapped in your color, what is the effect? You know it does you good." To attract the attention and awaken the interest of one's neighbors in a proper way is certainly good business policy.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Federal Department of Agriculture, hopes to see a pure food congress, international in its scope and representation, holding a meeting in the National Capitol in the not distant future. This idea came into his mind during a recent trip to the Old World, and the more the Doctor thinks about it the more favorably is he impressed. In discussing the matter, Dr. Wiley made the following observations, among others: "As to the scope of the deliberations of such a congress, it seems to me that the first question to be considered would be the desirability of the adoption of uniform standards of purity for food and drug products. Such standards when proclaimed by all the parties to such an agreement would have the greatest possible weight and would facilitate the work of executive officers operating under pure food and drug laws in every country in the world. It would also be well to adopt uniform systems of analyses and determination and generally to provide the greatest possible uniformity in the data upon which the pure food and drug laws of all countries are to be administered. It would not be practicable to attempt to outline a statute for general adoption nor to circumscribe administrative methods, but uniformity in standards, analyses, etc., would be of great advantage and would be entirely practicable."

Professor H. S. Grindley, of the University of Illinois, recently conducted some experiments intended to determine the nutritive value of meats. The Federal Department of Agriculture has published a bulletin giving the results arrived at. Some of the conclusions of Professor Grindley are very different from those hitherto supposed to be established. For one thing we are told that all kinds and cuts of meat were very thoroughly digested, whatever the method of cooking. The relative fatness or leanness of the meat made no difference. It will also be surprising to some to learn that there is no difference in the digestibility of red and white meat, beef or pork, tender or tough meat. These old-established notions are exploded as a result of Professor Grindley's experiments. The final conclusion of the investigators will be a sad blow to the vegetarians, for they declare that "these investigations conclusively demonstrate the fact that meats have a very high nutritive value, considered from the standpoint of their digestibility."

The baking powder people are having a little dispute with the state of New York. Former Attorney General Meyer ruled that each package of baking powder must bear upon the outside the names of the ingredients contained therein. The present attorney general endorses that decision. A firm engaged in the manufacture of baking powder sent out its wares with the names of the ingredients missing. A Buffalo grocer who sold this baking powder was visited by agents of the State Agricultural Department after which the attorney general brought suit against him to recover the penalty of $100 for violating the ruling. The manufacturers employed an attorney to defend the grocer. He held that there is nothing in the pure food laws of the state of New York which provides for or justifies the imposition of a penalty of $100 or which prescribes that the names of the ingredients of baking powder must be published on the package. The court decided in favor of the defendant. The state will appeal.

The Bulletin regrets to observe upon the part of some of the trade journals on its exchange list a slight tendency to irritation over the crusade against unsanitary and filthy groceries recently inaugurated by one of the monthlies. Whatever may have been the ultimate motive of the editor who began this assault upon unpleasant groceries, or however much the statements already printed may be exaggerated, the fact remains that there are stores which answer the description set forth in the articles already published. There are not many of them as compared with the whole number, but they exist and an attack upon them is likely to do good. The majority of grocers are careful about the appearance of their storeroom or the condition of their goods. Such articles do not hurt them or do not in any way prejudice their regular patrons who know exactly what to expect.

There are all sorts of opinions in the world. The value of an opinion depends largely upon the knowledge of its author and his relations to the subject under consideration. Sometimes selfish interest is powerful in the formulation of an opinion which thus becomes practically worthless. The Bulletin does not mean to insinuate that this principle should be applied in estimating the worth of a recent action of an organization known as "the New York Section of the Society of Chemical Industry." The Bulletin knows nothing about this society or the different human units who constitute its membership. It has had Dr. Wiley, Chief of the Federal Bureau of Chemistry, under consideration, and has unanimously condemned the rules and regulations issued by him under the Federal food law, declaring that they show "a lack of expert knowledge of the facts." An appeal is made to the Secretary of Agriculture to suspend the publication of Dr. Wiley's circulars for the present.

The Chambre Syndicale des Chocolatiers held an important meeting in Paris recently. Attention was called to a foreign cocoa on the French market advertised and labeled, "Cocoa 50 per cent. cheaper than chocolate." It was suggested that every member should protest against assertions of this kind in his advertisements. The readers of the Bulletin may be interested in the following resolution which was adopted: "The Chamber censures any addition to chocolate that is not declared; it does not admit that any product sold under the name of chocolate may contain anything else than pure cocoa, pure cocoa-butter, sugar, and a small quantity of harmless flavoring matters; any addition, even of good and inoffensive material, should be declared in very readable letters."

Every retail grocer is a servant of the public rendering to the community a needed service. He is of far greater value to society than the fellow who makes a fortune by Wall street speculation, promoting schemes, on the race track, or through pandering to the vices of mankind. The more he encourages his helpers and makes them sharers in the business, the better will be his reward. There is a satisfaction in helping others to a competency that is greater than is felt over the acquisition of dollars. So says the American Grocer.

Here is another item from the American Grocer, which ought to be of use to the young man beginning his career: "Faithfulness is the explanation of many a successful career. Opportunity, ability and the friendly assistance that may be given all tend to further one's efforts, but the persistent, undaunted faithfulness to the labor in hand, in the very face of opposition and hindrance and obstacles is that which conquers. The character that is developed by devotion to duty, in life's smallest undertakings, is being equipped for glorious achievements. Therein is found the secret of success.

Brains behind a retail counter need to be encouraged, says a wise observer. The store that regards the workers as tools and changes clerks frequently will not be likely to gain much of a hold on trade. Keep in mind the old truth which Solomon proclaimed: "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth: and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Poverty of soul is worse than poverty of riches. The man who gets gold and shrivels his soul, gets very little out of life. The retailer can get much enjoyment out of life if contented in his calling, mindful of his helpers. He is of value to his fellows and the better he serves, the surer and more ample the reward.

During the progress of a suit to recover damages in one of the Indianapolis courts recently a witness testified that he had loaded up a lot of hogs that were sick with cholera and transported them to the Indianapolis stockyards where he sold them to a dealer after telling him that the animals had cholera. Some of them died on the way, but the balance passed muster. The testimony created some consternation among dealers and consumers in Indianapolis.

The pure food authorities of Illinois have discovered that dealers in Chicago are making imitation buttermilk and selling it to the misguided public for the genuine article. They take their skimmed milk, for which in its original state there is practically no market, and by the addition of lactic acid convert it into an imitation of buttermilk which completely deceives the purchaser. It is said this has been going on for years. It is a direct violation of the food laws of Illinois, and it is said that many prosecutions will be brought. The city bacteriologist of Chicago says he has known of this imitation buttermilk for years, but has not concerned himself about it because he believes it is actually healthier than the genuine article. But he admits that its sale is a violation of law.

The convention of state and national food dairy departments at Jamestown last summer adopted the following comprehensive and pertinent resolutions, among others, before it adjourned:

"Resolved, That sanitary inspection should be extended to include small slaughter houses, small poultry and killing houses, creameries, cheese factories, dairy farms, milk depots, ice cream factories, restaurants, hotels, groceries and meat markets and all other places where food is produced, manufactured, stored or offered for sale, and that such inspection should include the sanitary condition of the buildings and utensils, herds, workmen and their clothing, and the condition of raw material and the finished product.

"Resolved, That the use of mechanical carriers and other devices to obviate the necessity for handling the food products should be encouraged."

The chief fault found with artificial or imitation preparations put upon the market by certain manufacturers is that they are imitations or artificial compounds offered as the genuine article. It is claimed that there is nothing injurious to health in most of such articles. Even if analysis and investigation should prove the truth of that statement beyond the shadow of a doubt, the state is still justified in prohibiting the sale of all imitations or artificial preparations unless the label distinctly states the exact facts. The consumer may have the right to purchase an artificial preparation or an imitation, but he certainly has the right to know precisely what he his getting so that when he desires the genuine article he may be able to secure it.

The Chicago Retail Journal recently treated its patrons to a bright and pertinent article on the value of tact in business life. It suggests that there is a way of receiving and treating customers, especially those who are just looking about for a permanent place at which to deal, that attracts and holds patrons, just as there is another manner of receiving visitors to the store which chills and repels. It is a great advantage to the proprietor of a store, or to his clerks, to be able to remember names and faces. The ordinary man or woman is pleased when one whom they have met but once or twice in a business way remembers their names and knows where they live. A little civility displayed at the right time goes a long way.

Once upon a time a certain man entered a store of which he had heard considerable, thinking of making some needed purchases. He was not an utter stranger there, having made a few purchases in other days. He entered the room. At first nobody was visible. At length a clerk slowly sauntered in his direction. The man made his wishes known. The clerk hesitated a moment, said he didn't know but what they were out of the article, looked about in a leisurely way and finally produced a single very poor specimen of the article desired. The intending purchaser took it in at a glance, said he reckoned he didn't want anything after all, and swiftly retraced his steps to a rival establishment where he was courteously received and kindly treated. The result was that he purchased and paid for a considerably larger bill of goods than he originally meant to get. Two sentiments moved his heart—indignation at the cavalier treatment he had received at the one store, satisfaction at the pleasant experience he had in the second place visited.

The Bulletin is pleased to observe a growing disposition among all classes of citizens to observe the provisions of the pure food act and to obey the rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof. When the time arrives when it will be a usual thing for the Bulletin to appear each month without the record of a single prosecution for violation of the law the condition of public sentiment and business policy toward which the division is constantly working will have arrived. The law is not irksome. It is especially kind to the retailer who will not be unduly harassed in the pursuit of his business if he be careful to comply with its provisions and to conform to the rules. The result will be to make the situation more cheerful all around. The consuming public will get purer and better food with the best results, while the retailer will have the assurance of his conscience that he is not selling any article that contains ingredients calculated to shorten human life or to bring sickness to healthy men and women. And the manufacturer will be happier too when he turns out good things only.

Among recent food inspection decisions promulgated by the National authorities is one to the effect that the privilege hitherto given to permit the use of labels on hand when the food and drugs act went into effect, provided they made no mis-statements, expired October 1, 1907, and will not be renewed. Here is the closing paragraph of the decision: "Any person has a right to use a label which is not false or deceptive in any particular, even though this result is arrived at through the use of stickers, erasures, or other suitable means. Attention, however, is directed to the fact that misleading and deceptive statements must be obliterated. In other words, it is not sufficient, in the opinion of the Board, that a deceptive statement should be allowed to remain on one portion of the label with a corrective statement upon another portion of the label. This principal of correction will be waived until further notice in case of decorated sardine tins which were printed and manufactured prior to January 1, 1907. In these cases the corrections may all be made in one label attached securely to one side of the package. Each invoice should be accompanied by a certificate from the exporter, showing the date of manufacture of the tins."

In the course of some remarks concerning the operation of the food and drugs act of the Federal Government, Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief Chemist, has the following to say concerning the activity of his department: "We now have forty laboratories and one hundred and fifty inspectors in the field. They do their work well but they do not cover the country thoroughly. There are spots, particularly in the Middle West, which we have had to neglect. To make the application of the law universal we should have more inspectors and laboratories, and that will require a larger appropriation from Congress. We now have $650,000 a year and we need $1,000,000. During the coming session of Congress I shall ask for an increase of $100,000."

The August Bulletin of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, the last number seen in this office, says that out of 502 samples of foods and drugs examined during the month of August 377 were found to be of good quality, leaving 125 that were adulterated or varied from the legal standard. One dealer was convicted on the charge of selling adulterated extract of Jamaica ginger.

According to Dairy and Food Commissioner Edward K. Slater, of Minnesota, the greatest fraud now being perpetrated in the state in the sale of food stuffs is the short weight and short measure fraud. He tells us that "the laws of the state prohibit misbranding of food products and when a container is labeled giving the net weight the statement must be true. The law requires a statement of the net weight on a few products, but does not require such a statement on a great number of staple articles."

The new code of regulations under the Federal meat inspection law is to go into effect with the beginning of the new year. It is said the new code was made necessary by the numerous amendments to the regulations now in force and that the changes were calculated to produce confusion and uncertainty in the work of inspection. So the whole matter has been given a complete overhauling.

The Bulletin finds no more interesting reading matter anywhere than that contained in the Monthly Bulletin issued from the office of Economic Zoologist H. A. Surface. It is the best possible testimonial to the great practical value of the Zoological Division of the Department of Agriculture under the general direction of Secretary Critchfield. Each issue of the Zoological Bulletin contains a very large amount of practical original material for the benefit of farmers, gardeners, fruit growers and private citizens. Its preparation necessarily involves much labor and research, and makes it of very great interest to a large section of the people of the Commonwealth. Secretary Critchfield has organized the various divisions of his important department in such a way as to secure the greatest possible practical service. The work of the Zoological Division is a very excellent illustration of the result.

Dr. S. G. Dixon, head of the Department of Health in Pennsylvania, has recently been the subject of very complimentary remarks by newspapers in every section of the country, although the Louisville Courier-Journal, the New Orleans Times-Democrat, and probably some others have misnamed him "Nixon." The immediate occasion for their generous offerings of praise was his order forbidding the brushing of passengers by Pullman porters in the aisles of sleepers or chair cars. But that is only one incident in the active and useful official career of Dr. Dixon. He has spread much useful information by the publication at short intervals in the newspapers and elsewhere of timely articles concerning the prevention of certain diseases and he has also given much attention to the matter of protecting the streams of the state from pollution.

The Bulletin has some readers and correspondents who think the time has come when the National authorities who are charged with the enforcement of the food and drugs act should begin to show the teeth of the act to those who persistently and recklessly defy its provisions as well as the rulings made under it. They believe that manufacturers or others who disregard the rulings of the National Pure Food Department and imperil the health of the consumer by excessive use of preservatives which are known to be injurious ought to be brought before the courts and made to pay for their temerity. It is held by some observers that the uncertain course of those charged with the enforcement of the food and drugs act may bring the law into general disrepute, since if it becomes known that a few persons have been disregarding the decisions of the Bureau with impunity, it will not be long until the entire act will be regarded by the general public with disfavor.

Investigations by agents of the Bureau of Chemistry at Washington show that benzoate of soda is injurious to health. Yet its use, in prescribed quantities, is to be permitted until January 1, 1908, but no serial number will be permitted in connection therewith.

Many plain persons believe that if benzoate of soda is injurious to the human system and detrimental to health its use should be abolished. But if it is not injurious then it should be used indefinitely and no restriction should be put upon the manufacturer. What the people want is the truth—something positive concerning this and other questions. It seems only reasonable to expect the authorities at Washington to be able to present definite information concerning such important matters after investigations extending over a period of two years and the expenditure of a large sum of money. Do they expect too much?

It has been shown that some manufacturers of catsup are using in the preparation of their product twice the quantity of benzoate of soda permitted by the rules of the National Pure Food Bureau. Would not it be a good idea for Dr. Wiley to cause a few violators of the law to be arrested in two or three states and bring the matter to a judicial decision? The sooner the public and the trade have definite information concerning the power and scope of the law, or the rights and privileges of manufacturers, the better will it be for the consuming public and all others concerned. The time has surely come when those who disregarded the provisions of the federal law should be summoned before the bar of judgment.

Every retail merchant, every wholesaler, every jobber who purchases catsup for sale should surely obtain from the manufacturer an indemnifying bond certifying that the article purchased does not contain more than one-tenth of one per centum of benzoate of soda. This caution may well be applied to other goods containing benzoate of soda. It is best to take no risks.

There is every reason why the consuming public should realize that he who insists upon purchasing the very cheapest article in the market is always in more or less danger. The extensive adulteration of food and drink which rendered the creation of pure food departments in the various states and the nation necessary, grew largely out of the popular craze for cheap things. At a time when competition is keen and sometimes unscrupulous the ability to sell an article for a little less than a rival dealer may mean the difference between ruin and success. Human nature is frequently too weak to withstand temptation. Hence the expedients of adulteration, short weight, inferior brands of goods, etc. The people who consume these dangerous foods and drinks are largely responsible for their existence. They have the remedy at their command.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substance whatsoever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name, and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distincty identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. (Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device, and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 11. (Issued September 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 2 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE NO. 11. EVAPORATED FRUITS.

Rule 11. It should be understood by the trade and the public that Rule 2, specifically referring to meat and other articles of food, covers evaporated fruits, and that if said fruits contain any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health, such as sulphurous acid, the sale thereof will be treated as a violation of the law.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rules Nos. 12 and 13. (Issued October 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 3 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 12, LABELS. RULE 13, SODIUM BENZOATE AND BENZOIC ACID.

Rule 12. Numerous requests are referred to this Division for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Pennsylvania Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907. This Act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any Agent of the Division, to approve labels. The Division, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Division has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

Rule 13. No prosecutions will be based upon the manufacture, sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, foods and food products manufactured or packed during the season of 1907 which contains sodium benzoate in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, provided sodium benzoate or benzoic acid has hitherto been generally used in such foods and food products; and provided further that sodium benzoate or benzoic acid is not used in connection with coal-car dyes or any foreign coloring matter.

The label of each package of food or food products containing sodium benzoate or benzoic acid shall bear a statement that the food contains one-tenth of 1 per cent. of sodium benzoate, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, as the case may be.

JAMES FOUST,

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

---

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is specially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th of May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thouand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

A NEW YEAR SALUTATION TO OUR READERS.

The New Year greeting of the Bulletin will be somewhat belated, but none the less sincere. The Bulletin is feeling rather good natured at the beginning of the year of grace 1908 for various reasons and it sincerely hopes all its readers have sound livers, healthy hearts and perfect digestion. Nothing contributes more to bright and cheerful views of life than good health. And nothing promotes or prolongs health more surely than pure food partaken of in moderate quantities at regular periods during the day. Why should not the Bulletin be cheerful and happy, since its chief reason for existence is to promote the cause of pure food and drink and thus prolong the lives of the good people of Pennsylvania.

As the voice of the Dairy and Food Division of the Agriculture Department, it has been the privilege of this Bulletin during the last half of the year 1907 to define the intent of the several acts of Assembly regulating the sale of milk and other foods; to bespeak absolute obedience to law upon the part of manufacturer, wholesaler, jobber or retail dealer; to request co-operation upon the part of dealers with the Dairy and Food Division in the effort to eliminate adulterated or dangerous food products and to ask no less earnestly for the generous support of the people of the Commonwealth, in whose behalf all pure food laws and regulations have been enacted and for whose well being this Division exists. It is a great pleasure to note that the response has been immediate and general.

The Bulletin believes that a large majority of the retailers of Pennsylvania wish to give their customers a square deal. It is conducted upon that theory. The first numbers of the publication under the direction of Commissioner Foust have been largely devoted to efforts along educational lines. Special emphasis has been laid upon the comparative ease with which the act of 1907 may be complied with by careful dealers. The people have been urged to insist upon pure food even if it should cost a little more than the adulterated article. It has been suggested that consumers are themselves largely to blame for the inferior products which flooded the markets and made the adoption of pure food laws imperative. It has been whispered that there is little ultimate profit in a policy which patronizes poisonous food products simply because they are cheap.

Confident that conditions have improved during the year, the Bulletin tenders the congratulations of the season to all who have to do with the preparation or sale of articles of food, as well as to the rank and file of the people. It trusts that there will be scrupulous obedience to law upon the part of all and that the coming year will be a blessing to us every one. A Happy Year may it prove to all.

RESULT OF DR. FREAR'S ANALYSES OF BREAKFAST FOODS

Various complaints concerning the quality of many of the Breakfast Foods sold in this Commonwealth having reached Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, agents of the Dairy and Food Division were directed to collect samples of said products. As a result samples of eighty-two different brands of breakfast foods were gathered up. These were forwarded for examination and analysis to Dr. William Frear, of State College. Dr. Frear is President of the Foods Standards Commission, acting under the immediate authority of the national government and is one of the country's most eminent chemists. He has completed the work assigned him and submits to Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust an elaborate report, covering fifty-two type-written pages. The investigation made by Dr. Frear was purely chemical and microscopical. He says that "the determination of nutritive values was confined to ascertaining what the ingredients of the foods are and whether or not they are normal in composition." No attempt was made "to compare their digestibilities and nutritive values by direct physiological experiment." The examinations were conducted in such a manner as to ascertain as far as possible the truth or falsity of the high claims made by the manufacturers of these preparations or the charges made by others that "certain of these foods are highly medicated and that many of them are extensively adulterated with worthless materials, such as corn cobs, corn stalks, wheat bran, etc." The result of the examination tends to show that the claims of many manufacturers are highly colored and sometimes absolutely false, while the charge that drugs or foreign substances have been used is not sustained.

The following paragraphs from Dr. Frear's report indicate one weak point in many of the Breakfast Foods. The cleanly housewife, the consumer who does not wish to mix bugs and worms with his food, will certainly be interested. "Freedom from insect invasion and destruction is an important condition for merchantable breakfast food. Many of the samples when opened for examination, were found to be infested, and many of them exhibited evidences of very extensive destruction. This was true, however, not only of packages that were manifestly shelf-worn, but of many that were fresh in external appearance. In view of the fact that these samples had been shipped in the same case with many other samples and had necessarily been stored for a time in the same lock-closets prior to examination, and also to the well known fact that the insects causing such destruction are able to pass rapidly from package to package and equally well work their destructive effects, it has seemed fairest not to make a specific report with respect to the particular samples found infested, lest injustice be done to dealers and manufacturers whose goods were sound when sold to the agent." Nothing could be fairer than the caution of Dr. Frear. But a product so peculiarly susceptible to infection should be used by no householder until after it has been given a careful microscopical investigation.

Seven samples of rolled and crushed oats were examined. These were found to be practically all they were represented to be. There was no evidence that sulphurous acid had been employed as a bleaching agent and no instance of false labelling as to package weight. Except as barley is represented, in whole or in part, in some of the so-called malted breakfast foods, only one barley product appeared among the samples. The statement on the label that this food "contains more brain producing elements than any other breakfast food," is declared by Dr. Frear to be "not true, since there are other breakfast foods richer in cereal germs that contain more phosphorus." The samples of corn products examined consisted of corn meal, hominy or grits and cooked products. No harmful foreign products were discovered, although some of the labelling is not justified by the actual facts. Many samples of wheat products were examined. No foreign tissues were found in the samples, but the claims of many of the labels are false. Several cases of flagrant misbranding are noted. In the examination of the so-called malted or predigested breakfast foods Dr. Frear found that in almost every instance the claims of the label are not borne out by the actual facts. Many of these foods claim great medicinal virtue and are presented to the consumer as restorers of brain power or nerve force, builders up of the human system. Claims of this sort are undoubtedly meant to deceive the public and attract buyers; there is absolutely no basis for many of the assertions found on the labels of some of these products. They constitute misbranding of the most flagrant sort and are violations of the pure food law. In reference to self-raising flours, Dr. Frear says the samples examined "showed the presence of no sulphurous acid." There was no evidence of misbranding except in two samples which have on the principal face of the package in large type the name "Buckwheat," though it is explained elsewhere in small type that the articles are mixtures of buckwheat with other flour. These are distinctly in violation of the United States regulation. Several of the samples revealed considerable amounts of nitrous acid used for bleaching purposes. Dr. Frear says:

"The sale of flours that have been bleached should not be permitted without a proper declaration of this treatment, for, while it may be said that the effect of the treatment is an improvement in the appearance of the flour, the real object is to make possible the sale as a high grade article of flour known by its color to be an inferior product. It is thus in violation of the spirit of the Fourth article of Section 5 of the act of June 1, 1907, which defines a food as 'adulterated' 'if it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated, or stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.' It is not only in violation of the spirit of the act, but also contrary to its letter, if the definition of the verb stain is held to be 'to discolor;' that is, 'to alter the natural tint or hue.' United States regulation 12 embodies this view. It says: 'The term 'stain' includes any change produced by the addition of any substance to the exterior portion of the food which in any way alters the natural tint.'"

The report of Dr. Frear will appear in full in a special Bulletin of the Dairy and Food Division, to be issued within the next thirty days for the information of the trade and the consuming public. In that report the various breakfast foods examined are distinctly named, with the results of the chemical analysis and the comments of the chemist upon the quality of the products and the character of the claims made by the manufacturers. While it has not been shown that the various foods contain anything injurious to health, it has been demonstrated that many of them are peculiarly susceptible to infection by insects and worms and that every household using them should own a microscope. And it has also been shown that they possess no superiority over other foods and that the extravagant claims put forth by their manufacturers are without foundation. That is the most serious charge that can be brought against them. They are sold in many instances because of the claim for medicinal properties which they lack.

The demonstration that bugs and worms exhibit a marked partiality for breakfast foods suggests that some regulation should be adopted to bring the product directly from the manufacturer to the consumer. If the newly manufactured samples sent to the chemist by the agents of the Dairy and Food Division were contaminated by associating for a few days with some samples that were more ancient, it is a fair inference that the shelves of a retail grocery, no matter how careful the grocer, would ere long contain few cases of breakfast food that were free from bugs or worms or both. In no instance would the consumer be justified in eating the food without subjecting it to a microscopic examination, and in every instance it should be as fresh as possible, coming directly from the factory to the consumer, not subject to association with that manufactured some months previous, and almost certain to be infested by creatures that would relish nothing better than the change to new pastures in the fresh breakfast foods.

A brief summary of the result of Dr. Frear's investigations follows:

It has been shown clearly that the materials used in preparing the cereal Breakfast Foods are wholesome grains, or some of their more valuable products; and that the addition of bran, corn cob, corn stalk, or similar foreign substances, sometimes said to be used as adulterants, is purely imaginary.

Furthermore the samples exhibited a good condition of dryness, but many were wormy when received.

In general, they exhibited no evidence of the use of bleaching agents, except in the case of a few pancake flours.

The test for tonic materials, such as strichnine, and also for morphine, were negative.

On the other hand, the net weights contained in the packages were most variable.

The representations concerning the chemical composition and nutritive value of the preparations were often very highly misleading and sometimes utterly reckless.

The cost of these foods is low, if they are regarded as confections to please the taste, but very high if they be treated as substitutes for the ordinary domestic cereal products.

SOME ADDITIONAL LEGISLATION DEMANDED.

The Bulletin has already suggested that the next legislature will be asked to make some amendments to the pure food act of June 1, 1907, to the end that its efficiency may be increased and the consuming public be given adequate protection. The act as it now stands was meant to protect the retail merchant from unnecessary annoyance and expense, while securing to the consumer that protection to which he is entitled. In its practical working defects have been found which will be called to the attention of the law-makers at the next session.

In order that the suggestions of this division may have due weight with the representatives of the people it is essential that the latter interest themselves in the quality of the food sold them and in the amendment of old laws or the formulation of new ones that will accomplish the object sought at less expense of money, time and energy and thus tend to accomplish the purpose of those who framed the original pure food act. When the rank and file are interested in amendments to laws because such amendments would benefit them and their children it will not be long until legislators begin to take a lively interest. Public interest in good laws usually secures them.

Something ought to be done to put additional guards around the State's milk supply. There should be rigid inspection of dairies and their surroundings. Good milk is not produced by sick cows. Pure milk soon becomes infected with disease germs if it be kept amid unsanitary surroundings. The health of the person who does the milking and his habits are matters of much interest. The interest in this matter should extend to every step taken from the feeding and housing of the cows to the position of and the surroundings of the milk in the household. The dairy should be carefully guarded and the milk depot should be a complete sample of sanitary cleanliness.

It is important, too, that the State oversee the manufacture and sale of the beverages consumed by the public. The Bulletin has already published detailed statements of fact showing what pernicious substances are taken into the stomachs of many patrons of so-called soft drinks. The greed of gain has induced many manufacturers to use acids in sufficient quantity to seriously injure if not actually destroy the lining of the human stomach. It is feared that there has been little improvement in the quality of many of the wines and other beverages sold over the average bar in Pennsylvania. At present there is no law under which the Dairy and Food Division can take cognizance of the adulteration of beverages. It is as important that the people should drink pure beverages as it is that they eat pure food.

CONSCIENCELESS DEALERS IN MILK.

The city of Chicago has been having a good deal of trouble in one way or another with dealers in milk. Sometimes the vender has taken pains to mix the milk with water to such an extent as to produce a very inferior article; sometimes he has sold infected milk. the result being general sickness among consumers and heavy mortality among young children. Recently he has been giving his patrons short measure. When brought to bar for this bit of sharp practice he undertakes to put the responsibility upon the manufacturer of the bottles. The testimony of the latter has not yet been received.

The Board of Health of the city of New Orleans has likewise been having trouble with milk dealers. Recently samples lifted from various dairy wagons were found to contain as high as 29 per cent. of water which had beeen pumped directly into the milk cans. A very large proportion of the milk sold in the city was found to be thus adulterated and weakened by the admixture of water, a harmless substance in itself, but not needed to improve the quality of milk. One dealer when approached by an agent of the Board of Health declared that he had no milk in his can. A careful examination showed that the faucet had been clogged with a piece of dirty muslin.

Men who tamper with milk are engaged in a dangerous and a criminal business. When it is weakened by the addition of large quantities of water it loses the virtues which it ordinarily possesses and which render it the one essential and admirable food for the infant and the young child. This weakening of milk is a species of small dishonesty, a dishonesty that should be punished severly because of the possible consequences. Those who are careless in their handling of milk, often permitting it to become impregnated with poisonous substances, highly dangerous to infant life, cannot excuse their conduct upon the ground of ignorance. The literature of the subject is too large and has been too largely circulated.

In Pennsylvania there has been a marked improvement in the quality of the milk product during recent months. This is a very gratifying situation. Nevertheless much remains to be done. Since milk is the only food of the infant and the chief source of supply for children up to two or three years of age, it behooves dairymen, venders and heads of families to exercise the utmost caution. The excessive mortality among children at all seasons, and especially during the two hot months of July and August, is largely due to the quality of their food. Milkmen must share responsibility with careless or ignorant parents. Pure milk is nature's most perfect food, but impure milk is a deadly poison. It takes on infection with the utmost ease, for which reason the utmost care should be exercised constantly in the home, the milk depot and the dairy. Those who allow greed to strangle conscience should be summoned to judgment by the State.

DR. WILEY AND HIS CRITICS.

One Hugh Gordon Miller contributes a long article to a recent number of Leslie's Weekly. It is entitled "Making the Pure Food Law Unpopular, Obnoxious and Hurtful to Business," Mr. Miller is described in the editorial columns of Leslie's Weekly as a "well-known and reputable lawyer." The purpose of his article is well-expressed by its title. It is at least interesting to observe that a busy lawyer has the time and the inclination to fly to the defense of harassed industries. It is equally interesting to know that some of the trade journals most widely circulating among the retail dealers of the United States resent his intrusion as little short of an impertinence.

Mr. Gordon makes himself ridiculous and creates suspicion concerning the absolute disinterestedness of his motives by assailing Dr. H. W. Wiley. He directly charges that Dr. Wiley "is as much responsible for the present demoralization of a great mass of the business of the United States as any person in the country." That is to say the conservative efforts of Dr. Wiley to enforce the provisions of the food and drugs act of 1906, caused the suspension of the Knickerbocker Trust Company, not the unlawful speculations of its head, as was generally supposed. It is pleasing also, to observe that this "well-known and reputable New York lawyer" absolves the President of the United States from any considerable responsibility for the financial turmoil.

Ignoring the surplusage in Mr. Miller's fulmination, we come directly to the heart of it. It appears that those for whom the gentleman speaks have two grievances: They disapprove of the department of agriculture's action in undertaking to fix food standards, holding that there is no authority in law for such action. They are vexed because mixtures of gelatine and milk may not legally be labeled "ice cream." To these Leslie's Weekly adds another, the ruling that so-called "corn syrup" must be designated "glucose," its proper name. It is to be feared that the effort to arouse public indignation over the woes of certain manufacturers or to secure congressional action in the line of larger liberty is doomed to flat failure. It is difficult to stir a people up to action prejudicial to their own health.

It ought to be understood that nothing has absolute authority except the national and State laws. Concerning the rulings and opinions which issue from time to time from his department, Secretary James Wilson states plainly that they do not have the authority of law. If their correctness is doubted by manufacturers or dealers they may be disregarded until the courts have authoritatively decided whether the agents of the department were right or wrong in their conclusions. So far as this Bulletin is concerned, its observation of Dr. Wiley's movements convinces it that he has been moving with great caution and exercising sound discretion. No step is taken without previous counsel with his associates or without the approval of Secretary Wilson. The supreme effort of those charged with the administration of the law is to secure the correct branding of food products offered for sale. There is no objection to the use of gelatine in the preparation of frozen compounds. What the agents of the government do object to is the effort of manufacturers to convince the consuming public that pure ice cream and a frozen compound heavily loaded with gelatine are identical. The consumer has the right to information. If he wishes real ice cream he has a right to know that he is getting it, or that the dealer is offering him a cheap substitute. Is there anything wrong about that? Is the determination to insist upon compliance with so simple a rule likely to embarrass any honest manufacturer or injure his business? The same thing is true concerning so-called "corn syrup." It is glucose under a more attractive name. In his letter of protest to the secretary of agriculture, Secretary Green of the National Association of Retail Dealers, rushes into the breach declaring that the use of the word "glucose" will injure business. The National Grocer, which has fair means of knowing the situation, hints that he represents nobody but the directors and himself and utters a broad truth when it declares that if glucose is as healthful and valuable as its friends claim it ought to be allowed to win its way on its own merits. That is the crux of the situation. Honest names for all products offered for sale; no deception of the consuming public.

As for Leslie's Weekly, it is far more intemperate than its legal correspondent. It is a pity that so old a newspaper should thus set itself across the pathway of progress and endeavor to create unwarranted prejudice against officers who are animated by no other motive than a desire to prevent the deception of the public. If men want to buy strawberry jam the chief ingredients of which are coal tar and hayseed they should have the opportunity, after due warning. It is the effort to sell coal tar and hayseed under a strawberry jam label that is forbidden by the food and drugs act and the rules and regulations made in accordance therewith. When Leslie's Weekly, following the lead of its correspondent, dogmatically affirms that "Not to President Roosevelt, but to the chief chemist of the Agricultural Department, must be ascribed a goodly measure of the depression from which the business of the country is now suffering," it insults the manufacturers of the land, for the inference from its conclusions is that the effort to enforce the rule of common honesty is a deadly menace to American business. The Bulletin declines to believe such a ridiculous assumption.

UNSUSPECTED INFECTION OF MILK.

Discussing the important matter suggested by the foregoing headline, the Washington Herald indulges in the following interesting observations:

An effort will be made this winter to secure legislation establishing a model system of regulating the distribution and sale of milk in the District. It is proposed that the daily milk supply shall be subject to thorough inspection, and that licenses shall be issued only to such dealers as purvey a product that comes up to the prescribed standard. In addition to local regulations, Congress will be asked to provide a system of interstate milk inspection by the Bureau of Animal Industry.

The investigations of the Department of Agriculture and the exhaustive inquiry into the Washington milk supply made by the Milk Commission have greatly stimulated interest all over the country in the subject of pure milk, and, with the assistance of government officials, fifty municipalities have gone into their local milk problems. The department has paid particular attention to the conditions of the Washington milk supply, which is already under regulations that are considered by many dairymen as sufficiently onerous. Yet the most careful farmer may be deceived as to the healthfulness of his herd, and may be unconsciously furnishing milk to his customers that contains the seeds of disease and death. A bulletin just issued by the Bureau of Animal Industry gives pictures and decriptions of a number of apparently healthy cows found in herds supplying milk to Washington. No one would have any reason to suspect from the physical appearance of these animals that any of them had serious disease, yet all were found to be affected with tuberculosis. Forty per cent. of tuberculosis cows show no external symptoms of ill-health, a fact indicating the seriousness of unsuspected sources of infection.

Dr. E. C. Schroeder, author of the bulletin mentioned, thinks that if the public were thoroughly informed of the dangers to which it is exposed through the use of impure milk, "the demand for milk of approved purity would rise to the magnitude of a concerted national movement and would sweep all objections and difficulties out of its way." The importance of milk, he says, is only second to that of air and water. Without it, thousands of infants and children would annually perish. Where the purity of milk furnished children has been assured by municipal or private philanthropy, a striking reduction in infant mortality has resulted. But a milk supply of the standard of purity required for absolute healthfulness cannot be furnished without an increase in the price of the commodity. Dr. Schroeder has this to say on that subject:

"The dairyman is not alone to blame for impure milk. As a rule he attempts to supply a pure milk to his customers and is not conscious of the impurities and infection in the article he is distributing. The price he receives is too low for the production of a constantly pure milk. He should be better paid. If the money that now goes to druggists, doctors, undertakers, and burial grounds directly through the use of impure and unwholesome milk could be diverted to the dairyman, he would be amply paid for producing a wholesome, safe milk, and the entire community would profit by having better health, fewer deaths, and less suffering."

Dr. Schoeder makes the astounding statement that so long as the use of milk from tuberculous cows is permitted, practically every member of the human family is exposed to tuberculosis. It is evident that the warfare against tuberculosis, to be effective, must not neglect so widespread a source of infection.

"A GOOD RECOMMENDATION."

Under the foregoing title the able Harrisburg Star-Independent of a recent date contains in the following statements and reflections:

"The Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Commissioner will recommend to the next Legislature a measure providing for regulation of the sale of eggs, and especially cold storage eggs. Such a recommendation would have the hearty approval of everybody but the dealers. The difficulty will be to regulate with impartiality the traffic in a food product that is as necessary as meat.

"There would be less objection to cold storage eggs if they were sold for what they are instead of what they are represented to be. In the semi-weekly markets of this city any investigator can ascertain for himself that ancient cold-storage eggs are sold as fresh and that the highest prices are demanded and received for them. Often from three to five out of a dozen are unfit for human consumption. Here is a swindle that should be prevented or punished.

"As to swindles, it may not be improper here to call attention to the vile compounds that in these same markets are sold as pure and fresh butter. Some of the stuff is rancid when purchased by the unsuspecting customer and much more turns rancid in a few hours after purchase. It is sold at the highest market price. That is another swindle against which it seems it is nobody's business to protect purchasers.

"Moreover, some of the swindles are perpetrated by persons who insist upon the enactment of laws to prevent other people from selling substitutes for butter. They would prevent any and all traffic in oleomargarine, while at the same time they sell, at the highest market price for the fresh and pure articles, rotten eggs and rancid butter or their own compounds that masquerade under the name of butter."

The Bulletin is quite as much concerned for the suppression of rancid butter as it is for the exclusion of rotten eggs. Neither is fit food for men and women, not to mention children. Those who deliberately engage in the manufacture of butter that begins to emit an unfragrant odor almost as soon as it comes into existence are doing a great wrong to the consuming public and to their own order. The Bulletin does not believe the representative dairymen of Pennsylvania would be guilty of such questionable conduct or that they approve it in others. Bad butter ought to be driven out of the market. There is not the slightest excuse for its existence. If hucksters and others persist in palming it off upon their customers they should be deprived of their market.

The dairyman and farmers of Pennsylvania are vitally interested in this matter. They know that unscrupulous venders of bad butter are working harm to the entire dairy interest. For that reason they should set a good example every day in the year and should also let the public understand that they have no sympathy with the methods complained of by the Star-Independent. Bad butter should receive no countenance from honest manufacturers of that indispensible article of household use.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

While considering the subject of store improvement, it is worth mentioning that in this, as in all else, the force of example is an important factor. The renovation of a single store in any town is generally followed by improvements in the other stores in the same line. The following excellent story bearing on this point is told by a correspondent of the Druggist Circular, and although the merchant referred to in this case was a druggist, the argument applies to any merchant:

For the proprietor of one of the oldest pharmacies in town, he wore a strangely depressing and dissatisfied air. "What's your trouble?" he was asked. "Oh, I've been away." "You've been away! Well, does going away usually depress you so?" "It wasn't the going away so much as it was the coming back," he answered. "Everything around the store looks different. I was going to say every old thing looks different, for things do look old now and a good many look shabby. I wish that years ago I had gone away long enough to realize when I returned that things around the store were getting rusty. That I was getting rusty. I tell you, there'll have to be some paint and varnish spread around this store, and a can of metal polish put to the proper use; and it can't be done any too soon to make this store one of the fine stores. I have just been sitting turning over in my mind observations made on my trip. I believe that there's one pretty sure thing that will make the average man feel like doing something and being somebody, and that is prosperous-looking surroundings that make people think he is somebody and is doing something unusual. Now, I am very glad that I got away from these old, familiar fixtures long enough to realize that the successful store is not the oldest store, but the store that keeps the newest. I've come to the conclusion that many long-established druggists would do more business if they didn't look quite so long-established, and I intend to get right to work and make this 'old, reliable' pharmacy appeal to up-to-date people."

SHORT-WEIGHT GOODS.

In discussing the "short-weight" problem the Inland Grocer says:

The retailers as a body have taken the only defensible stand in their contention that goods should be delivered to them in definite quantities and invoiced according to weight or other measure. The consuming public demands more and more a definite quality of goods and the retailer to avoid loss through a discrepancy must insist upon receiving definite quantities.

If hams, butter or other commodities shrink after packing the manufacturer should make such allowance for shrinkage as to enable the retailer to receive full weight at the time of delivery. If potatoes shrink after the retailer has purchased them his price per bushel of sixty pounds should be such as to cover the loss through shrinkage. The safest method is undoubtedly to stick to definite weights and to make allowance in prices to cover the shrinkage.

THE MENACE OF THE DISEASE-BREEDING DAIRY.

Secretary Wilson, in recounting the tuberculosis investigations of the Department of Agriculture, recognizes the danger that lurks in the disease-breeding dairies and creameries of the country, and recommends a rigorous system of inspection to wipe out tuberculosis at its source. He says:

Tuberculosis has continued to be the subject of special investigations by the Bureau of Animal Industry. Further work has confirmed the view that the location of tuberculous lesions in the body is quite independent of the point at which the infectious material enters, and that the frequency with which tuberculosis occurs as a lung disease, justifies the conclusion that the lung is not always infected directly through the air.

The work of the year also demonstrated that the commonest mode for the discharge of tubercle bacilli from the bodies of tuberculous cows is with their feces, that about 40 per cent. of the tuberculous cows that show no outward symptoms are expelling and scattering tubercle bacilli, and that tubercle bacilli passed with the feces of tuberculous cows are actively pathogenic.

When it is borne in mind how frequently milk contains cow feces, and that the percentage of dairy cows known to be tuberculous is considerable, the facts presented seem to warrant the conclusion that tuberculous cows are responsible in a great measure for the prevalence of tuberculosis in the human family.

Disease-Breeding Dairy Cows.

During the past year there has been considerable agitation in the District of Columbia with reference to the improvement of its milk supply. The Commissioners of the District appointed a committee or conference composed of scientists, physicians, veterinarians, milk producers and dealers, attorneys and business men to consider methods for obtaining pure and wholesome milk and to advise as to proper legislation to that effect. In order to assist in this work, the Secretary of Agriculture, about April 1, directed the Bureau of Animal Industry to apply the tuberculin test to the herds of all dairymen who might request such action.

In tests made by the Bureau and by the Health Department of the District of Columbia, covering 37 herds with 658 cattle, 18 per cent.

were found to be tuberculous. Some of the reacting animals had every appearance of being in good health, and several of this kind were removed to the Bureau Experiment Station where it was found that they were discharging tubercle bacilli in great numbers and that their milk produced tuberculosis in guinea pigs.

How Creameries Spread the Infection.

The examination of sediment taken from the cream separators of public creameries throughout the country has demonstrated the presence of tubercle bacilli in about one-fourth of the samples. These creameries must be regarded as an important source of tubercular infection for the hogs and calves that are fed upon the separated milk that is returned to the farm from the creamery. State laws should be enacted requiring the sterilization of all milk and other products before they are returned by the creamery to the farmer for use as food for livestock.

The length of time that tubercle bacilli will live and retain their virulence in butter under usual market conditions is also being made a subject of investigation, but the work has not proceeded far enough to give definite results.

For the past five years careful and extensive scientific studies have been made of the comparative characters of human, bovine and avian tubercle bacilli, and the results have been published.

The immunization of cattle against tuberculosis is being investigated.

Continued experiments with hog cholera have again demonstrated that the contagion consists of virus which exists in the blood and other fluids of diseased animals, but which can pass through the finest filter, is invisible under the microscope, and therefore can not be isolated or discerned by any of the usual methods.

The method of immunizing hogs against cholera, to which reference was made in last year's report, has been tested much more extensively, and the results show quite clearly that a comparatively certain method of protecting hogs from the disease has been secured. Hogs that have been exposed without contracting it are injected with suitable amounts of virulent blood from diseased hogs, and thus their immunity is heightened. The blood serum of these immunes is then used in vaccinating the hogs which it is desired to protect.

The method giving the best results is to inject blood from diseased hogs simultaneously with the immune serum. By this method of vaccination hogs are protected for three and a half months or more, while by the use of the serum alone the protection cannot be expected to last longer than three weeks. The immunized hogs probably retain for several months their power to furnish a potent serum. The serum probably cannot be used successfully as a curative agent unless administered within four days after actual infection has taken place.

In order that this method may be more extensively tested, it is expected to make arrangements for the State experiment stations to test serum which will be furnished to them by the Department. It is hoped that the practicability of this method for combating hog cholera may thus be determined within a short time.

SULPHUROUS ACID AND SULPHATES.

The Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, in Circular No. 37, just issued, deals exhaustively with the "General Results of the Investigation Showing the Effect of Sulphurous Acid and Sulphates Upon Digestion and Health," from which the following conclusions were adduced: "The relations of sulphurous acid to health are perhaps of greater importance than those of the preservatives already studied—namely, boron compounds and salicylic acid and its salts. The reason of this is found in the fact that the use of sulphurous acid at the present time is more general, and in certain classes of food products, according to the statements of manufacturers, more nearly approaches a necessity than is the case with boron or salicylic acid compounds.

"As sulphurous acid in some form is almost universally employed in the manufacture of wines, molasses and syrups, and in the preparation of desiccated fruits, it is evident that the prohibition of its use would necessitate a radical change in method of manufacture. This fact, however, it might be stated, has nothing whatever to do with the purposes of the present investigation. Assuming that in the manufacturing process certain added bodies are used which are found on investigation to be injurious to health, the rational conclusion of such an investigation would be not to excuse or overlook the use of such bodies, but to institute investigations looking to their suppression. If, therefore, the results of the present study indicate that sulphurous acid, even in small quantities, is a deleterious substance when added to foods, it would be reasonable to expect that manufacturers, as well as investigators, would immediately take steps looking to the early suppression of the injurious substance. While it is not likely that such an event could be accomplished within a year or two, it is reasonable to suppose that it could be eventually brought about without any disturbance to manufacture and without any diminution in the output of the article.

"In matters of this kind it is advisable to proceed when possible with conservative steps and to avoid any attempt at sudden and revolutionary changes in methods of manufacture. In all such cases, however, it will be found not only possible and desirable to make the food products in question without the use of the deleterious substance, but there is evidence to show that the products thus manufactured will be more palatable, more wholesome, and more valuable than those made according to the methods commonly used at present."

"From careful consideration of the data in the individual cases, and the summaries of the results, it appears that the administration of sulphurous-acid in the food, either in the form of sulphurous-acid gas in solution or in the form of sulphites, is objectionable and produces serious disturbances of the metabolic functions and injury to digestion and health. This injury manifests itself in a number of different ways, both in the production of clinical symptoms which indicate serious disturbances, malaise, or positive suffering, and also by inducing certain changes in the metabolic processes which are not manifested in the way of ordinary clinical symptoms, and are only detected by careful chemical and microscopical study of the excretory products. It can be safely said from the evidence adduced that the administration of sodium sulphite and sulphurous acid, as above indicated, produces a marked influence of an unfavorable character on metabolism. As a result of this action, an assimilation of food materials containing organic phosphorus is retarded, while there is evidence of increased sulphur katabolism. The sulphur balance sheets show what an immense burden has been added to the already overworked kidneys, which are called upon in this case to remove nearly all, if not quite all, of the added sulphur from the body, previously converted, in great part, to sulphuric acid. It is not possible that placing upon the kidneys this increased work of excreting sulphur can result in anything but injury.

"These tendencies can not be interpreted as being other than of a decidedly harmful nature. Another effect which the administration of the sulphur produce, and one of a more serious character still, is found in the impoverishment of the blood in respect of the number of red and white corpuscles therein. The administration of a substance which diminishes by a notable percentage these important component particles of the blood must be regarded in every sense as highly prejudicial to health. Some of the most important functions of the blood, as has been well established by careful physiological studies, are intimately connected with the number and activity of both the red and white corpuscles. The bleaching effect of the sulphurous acid upon the color of the blood is a matter of less consequence and no great effect is produced upon the hemoglobin, but the diminution of the number of red and white corpuscles is a matter of serious concern.

"There is no evidence whatever that the sulphur added to the foods in the form of sulphurous acid of sulphites takes any part in the nutrition of the tissues of the body containing sulphur, namely, the proteids; hence no claim of food value can be established for these bodies. The evidence all points to the fact that they are purely drugs, devoid of food value, having no favorable effects upon the metabolic process, but, on the other hand, exerting deleterious and harmful effects. The conclusion, therefore, is inevitable that as a whole the changes produced in metabolic activity by the administration of sulphur in the forms noted above in the comparatively short time covered by the experiments are decidedly injurious. The verdict which must be pronounced in this case is decidedly unfavorable to the use of this preservative in any quantity or for any period of time, and shows the desirability of avoiding the addition of any form of sulphurous acid to products intended for human food."

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Every now and then the ordinary layman is forced to the disagreeable conclusion that the interpretation of law is frequently a matter of individual temperament or prejudice rather than a close adherence to the probable intent of the lawmakers. Here is a case in point: Not long ago the Supreme court of Missouri handed down a decision in which it held that the sale of groceries, provisions and drugs on Sunday is a "work of necessity," and therefore not punishable under the Sunday closing law. Almost at the same time the Supreme court of Pennsylvania sustained the law against Sunday trading. To the fair-minded person who is not learned in the law it looks as though the Sunday sale of things which may be purchased on week days in sufficient quantities to last over Sunday should be unlawful, but the filling of prescriptions is another matter.

"Up-to-Date," Scranton's fine looking trade periodical, is kind enough to say that "Commissioner Foust is certainly exercising good, sound judgment in the management of the affairs of the food department;" and it adds that "his Bulletin is of great value to the trade in general." It is the sole ambition of the Bulletin to be of use to the business world and the individual citizens of Pennsylvania. It is not proud; it is susceptible to criticism and its ear is ever open for advice. It will become increasingly valuable in proportion to the co-operation and assistance it receives from dealers and consumers.

If the Erie Business Men's Exchange succeeds in a project it now has under consideration, there will be a general Saturday half holiday in the city of Erie during the months of July and August, next. These months are usually noted for the oppressive nature of the heat and a half day off at the close of the week would be relished anywhere. Those employers who pay their help on Saturday evening will be asked to aid the holiday project by changing their pay day to Friday or some other convenient day.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, chemist of the National Department of Agriculture, recently delivered a lecture before the Kings County Medical Society, in Brooklyn, N. Y. He dealt with patent medicines, many of which do not possess the qualities so glowingly described by the advertisements. So many of the testimonials are fraudulent that it is wise to regard them all with suspicion. He told of a certain old woman in his native town who once upon a time signed a declaration to the effect that she was now 106 years old and ascribed her longevity and general good health to the fact that she drank a certain brand of whiskey. The agent for the whiskey firm paid her $2 for the testimonial. He denounced the use of coloring matter and preservatives in food, concluding that cold storage and sterilization will eventually preserve food wholesomely and efficiently. He is likewise opposed to the coloring of butter which he says "is inexcusable."

Dr. Wiley also addressed the Quail Club, in the city of New York, some time ago, defending his pure food campaign against what he regarded as unjust or uninformed criticism. He thinks much remains to be done. He told his hearers that "hay seed and coal tar are being sold for pure strawberry jam, glucose is being sold for honey, roasted beans are being mixed with coffee, sawdust is being put in breakfast foods." It must be said in the interest of truth and justice that no sawdust was discovered in the eighty-two varieties of breakfast food recently analyzed by Dr. Frear, of State College. "I have no desire to injure anyone's business," continued Dr.

Wiley, "nor have I any objection to foods being sold under their proper names, but I do object to manufacturers deceiving the public. If they want to go ahead putting hayseed in preserves, let their labels say so. That is the mandate of the pure food law and every dealers who violates it will go to prison, sooner or later." "And see that you don't make it too late, doctor, dear."

It has been said that the enforcement of the pure food laws of the State and the Nation has had a tendency to make prices higher. There may be some truth in the charge. But what then? If you have hitherto been buying a counterfeit article, one composed of coal tar and hayseed, for instance, when you imagined you were getting strawberry jam, don't you think it would be worth your while to pay a trifle more and get genuine strawberry jam? The truth is the adulterations and imitations which were not long ago driving the genuine products out of the market were created in response to two very similar sentiments—the desire of the purchasers to buy in the cheapest market and the ambition of the manufacturer or vender to make the biggest possible profit. The effect of these vile concoctions upon the human stomach was not considered. Now that manufacturers must not lie to the consumer unless they are willing to invite fine and imprisonment, it is barely possible that prices have advanced a trifle.

The farmers of some portions of Ontario and other provinces are indulging in loud complaints concerning the manner and the method of the enforcement of the new regulations for meat inspection adopted by the Canadian government. They have flooded parliament with petitions declaring that the new rules are killing the Canadian hog industry. One of our trade journal exchanges, in noticing the state of affairs across the border, says the Canadian farmers "now find it difficult to market diseased hogs, and cannot unload their stuff on the Canadian packer as easily as is done in the United States, where the post mortem inspection makes the packer sustain the loss." The Bulletin supposes that must be a mistake which infers that Canadian hog growers ever try to unload diseased stock on the packers. That would be a bit of flagrant dishonesty, and it would be dangerous, since it might mean disease or even death to many unsuspecting and innocent purchasers or consumers.

Food Commissioner Bird, of Michigan, has been worsted in a little legal tilt he has had with certain manufacturers of mixed maple syrup. A syrup composed of cane and maple syrup has been shipped into the state under the name "Cane and Maple Syrup." The commissioner has long held that such syrup must be simply labeled "Syrup," without suggesting its ingredients. But the circuit court before which the matter was brought held that a blend of maple and cane syrup is a mixture or compound and that in the case at bar it was properly labeled.

The Southern States' Commissioners of Agriculture Association recently held a meeting in Columbia, S. C., and took steps to secure uniformity in food laws. State Chemist McCandless, of Georgia, State Chemist Kilgore, of North Carolina, and State Chemist McGruder, of Virginia, were appointed a committee to draft a model law, applicable to all the states in the association. This committee will submit its report to the convention which meets next year in Nashville, Tenn.

This is the light and airy matter in which "Eli Grocer" refers to a matter of pressing and vital importance to the American people: "Dr. Wiley, of pure food fame, says that jam is still made out of tar and hayseed and that there are various other things wrong with the food of the country. Well, doctor, dear, it's up to you. Everybody is willing to buy and eat pure food."

Among the provisions of the Kansas pure food law is one requiring all fruits, meats, vegetables, etc., displayed in show windows to be covered so that flies and dirt cannot reach them. This requirement, like many other wholesale regulations, has not been very well obeyed. It is stated that the opening of another fly season will witness a general and determined effort to enforce this section of the law. Such a requirement should be in active force in every state and territory during the fly season. The New York Times recently declared that the common house fly is actually more dangerous than the tiger of the jungle, more deadly in its effects than the poisonous cobra. This is scarcely an exaggeration. In every community there should be waged against the common fly a warfare quite as rigorous as that against the mosquito.

John A. Green, Secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers, has written the Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, saying that he is authorized by the board of directors of the association to communicate their opposition to the proposed change which directs that "corn syrup" be labeled "glucose." He adds that the obnoxious word "glucose" will materially injure or interfere with the sale of "corn syrup." Commenting upon this letter, the American Grocer, which is as likely to know the mind of the grocers of the country as Mr. Green, indulges in the following incisive remarks: "With 350,000 retail grocers in the land it is very doubtful if the above letter in any way voices the opinion of any other than the directors. If glucose is wholesome prejudice will disappear if it is sold for what it is."

"Eli Grocer" has been waging a determined and aggressive warfare against the short weight nuisance. Judging from the evidence collected by this wide-awake trade journal there seems to be urgent need for an awakening upon the subject. Short weight is a little less harmful than adulteration, but it isn't honest and it ought to be suppressed by the determined stand taken by retailers and the consuming public against it.

Reports from the enterprising and interesting Commonwealth of Missouri are to the effect that the old year was good to the farmers. While a too wet spring retarded the crops it wrought no permanent injury. The yield was good and prices entirely satisfactory until the financial stringency struck the country. On the whole, however, the farmers made much money out in Missouri and they ought to be a contented and happy lot.

Here is an idea advanced by the "Retail Merchant" which may be of advantage to some of the large company of grocer readers of the Bulletin: "A country merchant we know has made it his business to get acquainted with the farmers and their families. Whenever he has the opportunity he gets a rig and goes out calling. He tells the farmers he is not after orders, although he will not turn any down, but to get acquainted. He does not force himself upon their attention but contents himself by making friends. On being asked how it worked, he replied: "It has worked fine in more ways than one. My country friends generally return my calls, and they always buy. I have worked up a good business largely in this way. And I have made some friends in this way which are worth more to me than their accounts. I started in purely on a business principle, but it has become a pleasure." This is simply in accordance with the Scriptural principle that he who would have friends must show himself friendly.

The millers of North Dakota have been using flour-bleaching processes Food Commissioner Ladd thought they should not do so. He undertook to proceed against them, whereupon they secured an injunction restraining the commissioner's activities. Then he went to the Supreme court and obtained a writ of prohibition restraining the lower courts from interfering with him for the present. This leaves the fruits of victory with the commissioner, for under the decision he is permitted to publish the results of his investigations concerning the "bleached" flour made by the defendants. Thus he carried on the campaign of education.

Men who are engaged in the manufacture of food products with no other desire save to make money as rapidly as possible and who are not troubled with particularly sensitive consciences, cannot be expected to sympathize with acts of Congress or State Legislatures or with rules and regulations formulated by pure food departments when those laws or regulations restrict lawless enterprises and prevent the use of ingredients which are in no sense food, even though they be not positively poisonous. Fortunately these do not constitute the entire manufacturing force of the country. It is the belief of the Bulletin that they will continue to diminish in number and influence as the years go by.

Consumers have a right to know precisely what is in an article of food purchased of the retail dealer. And that the latter may give his customers a square deal it is necessary that every article he places on his shelves should be accurately branded. That is the contention of those who are charged with the enforcement of pure food laws. The fact that some manufacturers strenuously object to such stringent regulations may have no special significance, but it is to be feared that some of them are willing to deceive both dealers and patrons. If an article is harmless, if it be a real food, and if it be necessary to the highest excellence of any product, why not name it on the label? What is the bottom reason for wishing to disguise it by applying some more euphonious name than its rightful one?

The proper enforcement of laws intended to guard the people's health will ever depend upon the attitude taken by the people themselves. If they join interested manufacturers in decrying the alleged severity of laws concerning the manufacture and branding of food stuffs, if they grow into the belief that too much care is being taken, they will cripple the hands of their best friends. They ought to realize that the opposition to the enforcement of pure food enactments and the clamor against the agents who are charged with law-enforcement, springs from aggregated selfishness.

In response to an inquiry from Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, Assistant Attorney General Cunningham has furnished him with a written opinion wherein it is stated that a violater of the pure food law against whom judgment has been rendered for the penalty and costs, and who has not taken out an appeal or has no property out of which the amount of the judgment can be collected, may be imprisoned in default of the payment of that judgment. Under this ruling all persons who are fined for violating the provisions of the pure food law will be imprisoned unless they pay the fine within a reasonable time. There is no reason why the law should be violated. When it is the offender should be prepared to pay the penalty.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Abbott, of Texas, publishes a circular letter in the papers of that imperial Commonwealth calling particular attention to the regulations of the State pure food law concerning the care and sale of fresh fish, oysters, fresh meat, milk, milk products and butter. All these important articles of food must be kept free from flies, vermin or other services which might injuriously affect them. Commissioner Abbott declares that he does not wish to oppress anyone, but he means to enforce the law and to that end is about to appoint inspectors in all towns and cities whose business it will be to assist. He pays the people of Texas a compliment, saying that the great majority are making every effort to sustain him in the enforcement of law. He also acknowledges the substantial aid he is receiving from the press.

The vinegar law of Pennsylvania, which was reprinted in a recent number of the Bulletin, was enacted for the special benefit of the farmers of the State. It permits them to make vinegar out of the pure juice of the apple and to sell it to dealers when properly labeled. Yet some merchants do not fully understand and its requirements. In one of the counties of the State a merchant diluted his vinegar with water after he had made it and afterwards be thought him to obtain legal advice. He was told that he had spoiled his vinegar. "But," remonstrated the seeker after legal knowledge, "the housekeeper mixes water with vinegar when about to use it." "That's all right," replied the alderman, "but you must leave that to her; it is your duty to make the vinegar out the pure juice of the apple, with no admixture of other ingredients, no matter how harmless; it is the business of the housekeeper to do whatever mixing may seem to her right and proper." The alderman was entirely correct. It is unlawful for the vender to weaken vinegar by adding water.

The dairymen of Pennsylvania appear to be making a general effort to comply with the law of the State and the rules and regulations of the Dairy and Food Division. There has certainly been considerable improvement during the last few months, although much remains to be done. We must have more stringent regulations concerning the location and management of dairies, the manner and method whereby the milking is performed, the care of the milk at the dairy and the regulation of milk depots, many of the latter being now decidedly unsanitary. All these things will come, for it is already evident to every intelligent lawmaker that milk is not only one of the most valuable of human foods when it is pure, but also the one food most susceptible to contagion. When it has become infected by some poisonous substance it becomes a deadly peril to the young and the old, especially to the babes to whom milk is an essential food.

Some clerks read the Bulletin, to their personal profit, let us hope, as well as to the advantage of their employers and the comfort of customers. They are all bright, genial, accommodating, alert, wise, experienced, up-to-date, fitted for the substantial advancement both in position and salary which surely awaits them. They do not belong to the class described in a recent number of the Oregon Tradesman. The latter are poor clerks, preferring to talk to one another rather than to customers, continually losing sales and making themselves generally disagreeable. Do you ask why? The Oregon Tradesman replies: The reason is that they have no interest in their work. They work because they have to have some money, and that is the sole cause of their presence behind the counter. They do not care whether a customer is pleased or not, so long as they get their pay envelope Saturday night. Their chief hope is that their idleness or offensiveness will not call down on them the wrath of those in authority. No wise business man will long retain such an inefficient employe.

Observation shows that the work of the Pennsylvania State meat inspection service is being well done and that it was needed to correct some careless habits upon the part of butchers who have hitherto been free from official inspection, the government inspection not reaching them and the local authorities having been busy about other things. The regulations for the government of local and country slaughterers are similar to those imposed on larger packers by the general government and will promote cleanliness as well as guard the public health. Referring to this matter, the National Provisioner says that "the newly organized State meat inspection service in Pennsylvania is giving effective co-operation to the federal meat inspection bureau in enforcing sanitary meat regulations in strictly local trade, where the United States have no jurisdiction. "The National Provisioner suggests that the State inspection is doing a good service, because "it is the unwatched local slaughterer and dealer who is most likely to yield to temptation in marketing of unwholesome products or to become careless in regard to the sanitary condition of his premises."

The National Provisioner complains that there is so much confusion and contradiction existing in the country to-day concerning labels as to cause great inconvenience and expense to manufacturers. Some States have requirements of the most complex character; there is no uniformity between national and State requirements. The only men who are profiting by this confusion are the lawyers. Under the circumstances the National Provisioner is of the opinion that the food commissioners "should get together,—or—better still —hold a general meeting with food manufacturers with a view to protecting both the interest of the public and of the food manufacturers. Questions of the exact labeling of ingredients, weights, measures, etc., could be thrashed out, and the food commissioners could either then agree upon uniform regulations, or where the laws themselves are conflicting could make recommendations to their legislatures for regulations which would bring about uniformity and proper business conditions in the food industry."

A recent dispatch from Pierre, South Dakota, declares that the Supreme Court of that State has declared unconstitutional, and therefore null and void, the provisions of the State Pure Food Law requiring patent medicines to bear the formula for the composition of said medicines.

There is always a possibility that the author of the articles about filthy groceries, now running through a well known monthly, may be given to sensational methods and may be making a bad matter worse. But after every allowance has been made the fact remains that many grocers are very careless concerning the appearance of the room in which they transact business. For that reason a few articles stirring up the pure minds of dealers in food products to a sense of the importance of cleanliness may not be out of place. They may be irritating to grocers who are punctiliously cleanly in their habits, but they shouldn't be. If the people who read them will determine to patronize houses in which some regard is paid to sanitary laws no harm will result. On the other hand the careless may be spurred up to better things.

There should be a general and continued demand by the consuming public for the abandonment of methods of deception in the manufacture of food products. There should be an equal recognition of the strong probability that really pure food cannot be sold at the prices obtaining for the adulterated articles. Adulteration is largely resorted to for the purpose of reducing the cost of production. When it is forbidden, prices will rise. For instance no dealer can afford to sell genuine ice cream at the popular rates that have been asked during recent years. That ought to be understood. But the man who is willing to pay the price should be able to get the real article. Let the general public understand the truth. Then those who are not willing to pay for a high grade article may resort to a compound, knowing that it is such. Under circumstances of that sort there would be no deception. Everybody would get precisely what he wanted and would not be deceived for a moment concerning its quality or composition.

Office of the Attorney General,
Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 20, 1907.

Hon. James Foust,
Dairy & Food Commissioner,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Sir: I have your letter of November 30, 1907, asking to be advised by this Department whether, under the terms of Section 9 of the Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907 (P. L. 386), a defendant, against whom judgment has been rendered for the penalty therein provided and costs, who has not appealed therefrom, and who is not possessed of property out of which the amount of said judgment can be collected, may be imprisoned in default of payment of said judgment and costs.

The reply to your inquiry depends upon whether an action, brought under said Section 9 of said Act of 1907, is within the purview of the Act of July 12, 1842 (P. L. 339), entitled "An act to abolish imprisonment for debt, and to punish fraudulent debtors." Section 9 of said Act of 1907 reads as follows:

"Any person who shall violate any of the foregoing provisions of this act shall; for each offense, forfeit and pay the sum of sixty dollars, together with the costs of suit; to be recovered as debts are by law recovered, in an action to be instituted, in the name of the Commonwealth, before any alderman, magistrate, or justice of the peace, in the county wherein the offense shall have been committed; and no appeal shall be allowed from any judgment rendered in such case, except upon special allowance of the court of common pleas; subject to all the rules and regulations applicable to appeals from actions in summary convictions."

Notwithstanding the peculiar phraseology in the last clause of the above quoted section, to the effect that appeals shall be subject to all the rules and regulations applicable to appeals from actions in summary convictions, the said section seems to provide substantially for a suit for a penalty before an alderman, magistrate or justice of the peace in the county wherein the offense is committed.

You now ask to be advised whether a defendant, against whom judgment has been rendered by a magistrate, and from whom the amount of the penalty and costs cannot be collected by execution, can be imprisoned in default of payment of the penalty and costs, provided, of course, no appeal has been taken by the defendant from the judgment so rendered.

The first section of said act of 1842, abolishing imprisonment for debt, provides as follows:

"That from and after the passage of this act no person shall be arrested or imprisoned on any civil process issuing out of any court of this Commonwealth, in any suit or proceeding instituted for the recovery of any money due upon any judgment or decree founded upon contract, or due upon any contract, express or implied, or for the recovery of any damages for the non-performance of any contract, excepting in proceeding as for contempt, to enforce civil remedies, action for fines or penalties, or on promises to marry, on moneys collected by any public officer, or for any misconduct or neglect in office, or in any professional employment, in which cases the remedies shall remain as heretofore: Provided, That this section shall not extend to any person who shall not have resided in this State, for twenty days previous to the commencement of a suit against him."

It is further provided in the 23rd section of said Act as follows:

"No execution issued on any judgment rendered by any alderman or justice of the peace, upon any demand arising upon contract, express or implied, shall contain a clause authorizing an arrest or imprisonment of the person against whom the same shall issue, unless it shall be proved by the affidavit of the person, in whose favor such execution shall issue, or that of some other person to the satisfaction of the alderman or justice of the peace, either that such judgment was for the recovery of money collected by any public officer, or for official misconduct."

Whether a defendant in the situation above described can be imprisoned in default of payment of the penalty and costs depends, therefore, upon whether or not such defendant is within the protection of the said act of 1842.

This question has been passed upon by our Supreme Court in the case of Commonwealth ex rel Colbert v. Kerr, 25 Pittsburg Legal Journal, 367. That case arose under the old Oleomargarine act of May 21, 1885 (P. L. 22). The third section of said act of 1885, provides as follows:

"Every person, company, firm or corporate body who shall manufacture, sell or offer or expose for sale, or have in his, her or their possession with intent to sell, any substance, the manufacture and sale of which is prohibited by the first section of this act, shall for every such offense, forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred dollars, which shall be recoverable with costs by any person suing in the name of the Commonwealth as debts of like amount are by law recoverable; one-half of which sum, when so recovered, shall be paid to the proper county treasurer for the use of the county in which suit is brought, and the other half to the person or persons at whose instance such a suit shall or may be commenced and prosecuted to recovery."

Section 3 of the act of 1885 and section 9 of the act of 1907, provide for practically the same method of inflicting and collecting the respective penalties specified in said acts. Under the act of 1885 every person violating the provisions thereof "shall, for every such offense, forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred dollars, which shall be recoverable with costs by any person suing in the name of the Commonwealth as debts of like amount are by law recoverable," and under the act of 1907 every person violating the provisions thereof "shall for each offense, forfeit and pay the sum of sixty dollars, together with the costs of suit, to be recovered as debts are by law recovered in an action to be instituted in the name of the Commonwealth before an alderman," etc.

The case of Commonwealth ex rel Colbert v. Kerr, supra, arose under said act of May 21, 1885. Said Colbert, the relator in said proceedings, was so proceeded against before J. M. Courtney, one of the justices of the peace of the county of Allegheny, for a violation of the said act of 1885, that a judgment was rendered against him for the penalty of one hundred dollars therein provided for and costs, and, in default of payment of said penalty and costs, a writ seems to have been issued by the said magistrate, directed to John L. Kerr, one of the constables of Allegheny county, directing him to take the said Colbert into custody and commit him to prison. The said George F. Colbert, defendant in the proceedings before the magistrate and relator in the subsequent procedings, thereupon presented a petition to the Court of Common Pleas No. 2 of Allegheny county, for a writ of habeas corpus, which writ was awarded as prayed for, returnable forthwith, with notice to the said constable. After hearing the said Court made the following order:

"Now, March 26th, 1895, after hearing on petition, return and record, the prisoner, defendant, is remanded to the custody of the officer on the writ on which he was arrested."

The said George F. Colbert thereupon presented a petition to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, setting forth, inter alia, that he was unjustly held and detained in custody by the said constable on an execution for one hundred dollars in favor of the Commonwealth; that the judgment upon which execution issued was founded on a suit brought under said act of May 21, 1885; and praying for a writ of habeas corpus. On April 8, 1895, the Supreme Court handed down a per curiam decision, the material portion of which is as follows:

"But we have examined his petition, and are satisfied that he is not entitled to a writ of habaes corpus. A judgment recovered for a penalty prescribed by law as the punishment for the commission of an act forbidden by a clear statutory provision, is not within the purview of the act to abolish imprisonment for debt. It is not a judgment founded on a contract, but a penal infliction intended to discourage the violations of the law as truly as a fine imposed upon an offender after conviction in the Quarter Sessions."

This decision of the Supreme Court rules the question submitted by you to this Department, and you are therefore advised that a defendant, against whom judgment has been rendered in proceedings instituted under the 9th section of the said act of 1907, may, in default of payment of the penalty and costs, and for want of sufficient distress, be imprisoned under an appropriate writ issued by the magistrate before whom the case was tried, until discharged by due process of law.

Very truly, yours,

J. E. B. CUNNINGHAM,

Assistant Deputy Attorney General.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatsoever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name, and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" includes all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Food and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that the said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rules No. 8, 9 and 10. (Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. butter fat together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatin, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device, and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 11. (Issued September 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 2 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE NO. 11. EVAPORATED FRUITS.

Rule 11. It should be understood by the trade and the public that Rule 2, specifically referring to meat and other articles of food, covers evaporated fruits, and that if said fruits contain any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health, such as sulphurous acid, the sale thereof will be treated as a violation of the law.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rules Nos. 12 and 13. (Issued October 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 3 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 12, LABELS. RULE 13, SODIUM BENZOATE AND BENZOIC ACID.

Rule 12. Numerous requests are referred to this Division for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Pennsylvania Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907. This Act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any Agent of the Division, to approve labels. The Division, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Division has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

Rule 13. No prosecutions will be based upon the manufacture, sale or having in possession with intent to sell, foods and food products manufactured or packed during the season of 1907 which contains sodium benzoate in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, provided sodium benzoate or benzoic acid has hitherto been generally used in such foods and food products; and provided further that sodium benzoate or benzoic acid is not used in connection with coal-car dyes or any foreign coloring matter.

The label of each package of food or food products containing sodium benzoate or benzoic acid shall bear a statement that the food contains one-tenth of 1 per cent. of sodium benzoate, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, as the case may be.

JAMES FOUST,

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is specially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th of May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.
